HISTORY OF EXETER COLLEGE.

THE thirteenth and fourteenth centuries witnessed a great effort to improve the education given at Oxford, which had hitherto been largely in the hands of the monks and friars. The feeling against them had been growing for some time, and that for many reasons 1; Roger Bacon says they withstood the progress of true knowledge. Hence Walter de Merton, Chancellor of England and bishop of Rochester, founded Merton College 1264-74, to train students for the service of God in church and state. Was he incited to it by Robert de Sorbonne having just founded his college at Paris to educate poor secular students of theology? No 'religious' person, i.e. monk or friar, was admitted by Merton. His aim was to establish 'a constant succession of scholars devoted to the pursuits of literature, bound to study arts or philosophy, theology or canon law, or even civil law'; the students in canon law however were limited to four or five. To remedy the prevailing ignorance of grammar, which Roger Bacon so emphatically laments, one of the fellows was to devote himself to the study. He was to be provided with the necessary books, and regularly instruct the younger students, while more advanced scholars were to have the benefit of his assistance when occasion might require. English as well as Latin entered into his province of instruction. As the learned professions then practically belonged to the ranks of the clergy, most lawyers, doctors, &c. being in the minor orders, the clerical obligation at Merton, as far as it existed, was not at all a narrow limitation: in fact it did not exclude any of those professions that possess a curriculum at either Oxford or Cambridge in the present day. Moreover, as the Quadrivium included arithmetic, geometry, astronomy and music, the system implied a wider idea of culture than the modern course which, until lately, was almost limited to classics, and even to a very few classical authors. The statutes of Balliol, University, Oriel, and Peterhouse (the earliest college at Cambridge) all borrowed more or less from those of Merton; just as later colleges at Oxford and Cambridge copied those of New College. By the statutes of Exeter, the fourth college in order of foundation, only one fellow was required to be in orders. In the earlier Colleges not even the Head was required to be in orders of any kind, nor were students ordered to go to church or chapel except on Sundays and holidays. It is clear that the education of the laity was now thought to be as important as that of the clergy. The colleges were, legally speaking, lay corporations ¹, and the religious services devolved on chaplains.

All students had been of course hitherto 'Unattached,' and discipline was not much enforced. The creation of Halls, i. e. lodging-houses let out by the owner to a group of students (artists or legists, Welsh or Irish, &c.), each under a Principal, had been a first attempt to secure discipline, but it had not been very successful. They became important however in 1420 when Unattached students were abolished, and every scholar or scholar's servant was obliged to live in a hall under a responsible Principal. The Masters, Bachelors, and students elected their own Principal², i. e. consented to the transfer of the house by the landlord from one Principal to another. A student might remove from hall to hall at pleasure, until the statute passed between 1533 and 1547; and even then they might do so on just cause, or on the death or cession of the Principal; their free choice of a Principal tended to keep them in the hall. Each Principal had to give security to the University for the payment of dues. The creation of a College, a corporate body, for poor students, under adequate discipline, was a step in advance; and as Merton College soon acquired influence in the University, Stapeldon and Wykeham were led to follow the example. The improvement in discipline is shown by the special exemption of Merton et aularum consimilium—probably University, Balliol, Exeter, Oriel and Queen's—from the general rustication which followed the sanguinary riot on S. Scholastica's day 10 Feb. 135\frac{4}{5}. A matriculation oath was now imposed on students that they should keep the peace.

Merton, Stapeldon, and Wykeham (like Chicheley, Warham, Fox, and Wolsey, in later times) were statesmen as well as bishops. The Kings then paid their officials, and clerks in chancery, by church appointments, the only means at their disposal; this had one good result, of securing large-minded men for the Episcopate.

In 1314 Walter de Stapeldon, bishop of Exeter, founded Stapeldon hall for scholars from Devon and Cornwall; but the ground in and near Hart hall, which he bought for this purpose, not proving large enough, he removed the students next year to S. Stephen's hall, and gave them the rent of Hart hall, about £2 a year, that their rooms might be rent-free and kept in repair. Their new abode was at first also called Stapeldon hall, but was soon known as Exeter College¹.

Stapeldon had taught Canon law at Oxford, and at the time of his election to Exeter 13 Nov. 1307 was precentor of the cathedral, rector of Aveton Gifford, and chaplain to Clement V. He was employed on service in France, before and after he became bishop; sent thither by Edward I 6 June 1306; Edward II sent him to Gascony in June 1310; on 6 Nov. 1312 he was ordered to defend the King's cause about Aquitaine before the Parlement of Paris, and again 8 Feb. 131333. He was one of those who elected the Lords Ordainers in Mch 13094.

His predecessor Thomas de Bitton made several bequests to him. He was consecrated 13 Oct. 1308 and zealously pushed on the rebuilding of his cathedral. The Fabric Rolls show that he was a benefactor to the amount of £1,800, an immense sum in those days.

He soon obtained high place under Edward II, was a collector of the Tenth imposed on the clergy in 1318 (Close Rolls ii. 551, 555, 561); Treasurer 18 Feb. 1319 and again 9 May 1322, after an interval of rest granted at his own request 1. In 1324 he held Cornwall against the chance of a French invasion; he accompanied young Edward to France o Sep. 1325 when the prince went to do homage for Guienne, and probably saw enough to convince him that Queen Isabella was plotting against her husband. He had remonstrated strongly with the King about the Despensers, but when the revolution broke out the bishop was left by Edward, 2 Oct. 1326, in charge of London, and was murdered in Cheapside 15 Oct. 1326. 'The bishop of Exeter, riding towards his inn in Eldedeanes-lane [Warwick Lane] for dinner, encountered the mob and, hearing them shout "Traitor," rode rapidly to S. Paul's for sanctuary, but was unhorsed and taken to Cheapside, stript and beheaded. William Walle, and John Padyngton his steward, met with the same fate. About the hour of vespers the same day the choir of S. Paul's took up the headless body of the prelate and conveyed it to S. Paul's but, on being informed that he died under sentence, the body was brought to S. Clement's beyond the Temple, but was ejected; so that the naked corpse, with a rag given by the charity of a woman, was laid on a spot called 'Le Lawles Chirche' and, without any grave, lay there with those of his two esquires, without office of priest or clerk 2.

His remains were buried in S. Clements Danes, but transferred to Exeter cathedral 28 Mch 1327. The present epitaph on his monument there was composed by John Hoker in 1568, and put up at the expense of Bishop Alley; it has been repaired by the College 1. His house, Exeter Inn, near Temple Bar, was sacked by the mob, his books-including his 'libri pontificales'-destroyed. His Register at Exeter ends 15 June 1325; that of his last sixteen months was probably destroyed in London. We might perhaps have found in it some account of his benefactions to his new foundation at Oxford. He also left funds to establish in S. John's Hospital at Exeter a grammar school to prepare boys for Oxford, and another at Ashburton². His inventory shows that he possessed books valued at £201 10s 6d, which treated chiefly on Scripture and Canon law, with a few historical works such as the Letters of Frederic II and Peter de Vineis. He had previously given to the Cathedral Library a Catholicon, beginning with the words Temporum summa, valued at £5, and the Chronicles of Westminster De gestis Anglorum valued at £1 6s 8d.

Izacke says the elder coat was in the north side of the quire of Stapeldon's own chapel near the high altar. The College arms, as allowed by Portcullis in 1574, were Argent, 2 Bends nebulée, within a Bordure, sable, charged with 8 pair of Keys, addorsed, or; Visit. Oxon 5, 86, 100.

² It is touching to see what a number of bequests he had made to poor scholars. The accounts are for several years (Reg. 576), and the repeated payments show that some received so much a year. These names include Henry de Tuvertone, William de Heghes, and William de Polmorva; and others also may have been scholars, i. e. fellows. This may apply also to the scholars who have letters dimissory (536), though only Philip de Chalvedon is expressly said to come from Stapeldon Hall. One item is 'in expensis domini R. de Brayleghe eundo versus Oxoniam, morando biddem pro edificiis et negociis scolarium de Stapeldone halle, et redeundo, per xv dies xxxvis.' Dean Brayleghe paid several visits as acting executor (578-9). The bishop's other agents in communicating with the College were Robert de Tauton (Stapeldon's Reg. 385); and Gilbert de Koldishall (R. of White Roding, Essex 26 Mch 1322, res. for Avely 1329; Rymer II. i. 605, Newcourt ii. 22, 500).

to the Bishop's brother Richard, allowing him to give an acre of land at Draynek in Penwyth (Drannock in Gwinear, Cornwall), together with the advowson of Gwinear, to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, to hold for the support of twelve scholars studying at Oxford and their successors for ever; Sir Richard paid a fine of 100 shillings for this licence, and on Friday before Lady day 131\frac{3}{4}, at Crediton, he transferred the property. The land and the advowson had been conveyed to him by Reginald de Bevyle in a deed dated Walneston 5 Dec. 1312, after the Earl of Gloucester as lord of the manor had authorised the gift at Westminster 24 May 1312. The licence of mortmain for Stapeldonhall itself is dated 10 May 1314\frac{1}{1}. On 4 Ap. 1314 Bishop Stapeldon, after praise of Oxford where he had been educated, says that on consultation with the Dean and Chapter, M. John le Deneys rector of Gwinear, and Adam [de Carleton] archdeacon of Cornwall, he gives the rectory of Gwinear\frac{2}{2} to the Dean

² On 28 Sep. 1319 at Clist the bishop arranged thus for the Vicarage of Gwinear (Reg. 332): dominus Andrew de Tregiliou now Vicar and his successors are to have the houses previously belonging to the rectory with the whole sanctuary within the close, and the glebe of one acre, except a long building on the sanctuary, with a curtilage of half an acre English adjoining, which the Vicar is to keep up for the Chapter when they want it, to gather the harvest in. The Vicar is to have the lesser tithes, oblations and obventions belonging to the altilage, and the tithe of hay, mortuaries, flax, hemp, heifers, lambs, fowls, and 'blades' cultivated with spades in the present gardens. The Chapter is to pay the Vicar 40s yearly, but the Vicar is to supply sufficient hay (literam 'litter,' et buscam) to the Chapter's agents while on the spot. The Vicar is to pay the Chapter for the glebe two shillings of silver yearly. And the Vicar is to pay all ordinary expenses of the church, keep up the chancel, books, ornaments, belonging to the rectory, and the glass in the windows of the Chancel at his own expense; extraordinary burdens however to be paid by the Chapter. A receipt is preserved, dated Exeter 7 Oct. 1382, given to the Chapter by William Slade rector of Stapeldon hall for £23 14s 8d received through the hands of dominus Walter Compton seneschal of the exchequer of the Chapter in presence of M. Hugh Hickelyng precentor and dominus William Fereby canon of Exeter in payment for 1378-81. Extraordinary burdens probably refer to voluntary subsidies, and to the tenths exacted by Legates and Nuncios &c., as in the parallel arrangement made for the vicarage of Menheniot. The Vicarial glebe now is 34 acres, ?= the sanctuary of 33 acres (after deducting the half acre) and the one acre. For the Rectors and Vicars of Gwinear, see Lake ii. 146, N. and Gleanings iv. 181. In the Taxation of Nicholas IV, 1288-91, Gwinear is valued at 113s 4d, the tenth of which is 11s 4d.

Kyngeston mayor, Ralph le plumer bailiff, H. Owayn, P. de Eu, N. de Coleshulle, J. Sewy, Paulinus de Eriditon 1 &c. On 1 Aug. 1204 Alice daughter of H. de la Grave granted and quitclaimed to William de Coudray her right in the tenement which William had granted her, William giving her in exchange the tenement and mead given him by Sir H. Boveles and Henry his son in the vill of Curtelington; witnesses J. Culverd mayor, Andrew de Pyrie and I. Wyz bailiffs, P. de Ho, J. de Ho &c. On 15 May 1296 Gilbert de Coudray quitclaimed to M. William de Coudray for his houses and land in Curtelington. In 1206 W. de Coudray granted to William son of Thomas de la Rode of Cornwall and to Peter de Skelton 'my clerk,' 'and to whichever of them shall live longest,' the messuage granted me by W. Crompe, against the walls, between the land of the Abbess of Godstow, and a messuage once belonging to J. Culvert, with the lower court which he had from Geoffrey de Merschton. After the death of both it is to go to the heir of William son of Thomas. They are to pay him 40s a year for his life; witnesses P. de Eu mayor, Andrew de Pyrie and J. de Coleshull bailiffs, Robert de Wormenhale, Andrew Culvert, Symon le barbur, R. de Berkele etc. On 7 May 1297 Henry, son of dominus Henry de Boveles of Curtelinton [Kirtlington near Bicester] and Alice his wife, granted at Oxford to William son of Thomas de la Rode of Cornwall and Peter de Skelton clerk all his rights over the tenement which Alice his wife had of the gift of William de Coudray; witnesses Robert Jurdan, Richard de Canne, John de Codesford of Curtelinton, Symon barbitonsor of Oxford, Richard barbitonsor at the north gate &c. In 1306 William son of Thomas de la Rode granted to Skelton his part of the messuage he had from Coudray, and his part in the lower court adjoining, between the Godstow tenement on the east and a tenement once belonging to John Culverd on the west; he further quitclaimed to Skelton the half of this property which Skelton held for life of the gift of Coudray; and to warrant the grant he bound his lands at Curtelington in Oxon and his lands at la Rode near Esse [Saltash] in Cornwall; witnesses J. de Dokelington mayor, Walter de Wicumbe and W. de Pennard bailiffs, Andrew de Pyrie,

No one, from looking at a modern College, with quadrangles and spacious chapels, halls, libraries, and gardens, could form any idea of how things looked in the Middle Ages. There were, it is true, small chapels, halls, and libraries, placed quite irregularly; but the rest of the area was occupied by small lodging houses, woodhouses, outhouses of all kinds, dotted about narrow lanes. Still less could any one standing in the Radcliffe Square (cleared of its population in 1749 by Dr. Radcliffe's executors) realise to himself a state of things when the Convocation house and Divinity School and Bodleian, All Souls and Brasenose and Hertford, did not exist, but there were on the west side rows of small houses used as Schools for disputations (Wood's City i. 89); on the east side the dwellings of the writers, bookbinders, parchment-makers, and illuminers all along Cat Street; and here and there a public house, among the two-storied halls and the selds or wooden booths used as shops; and when the dark lanes and the large cemetery of S. Mary's (Clark's Colleges 92) were so unsafe at night as the Coroners' inquests under Edward I show them to have been; when the University itself had no public buildings, but used S. Mary's for its Convocation house, its Library, and its Treasury; when the city wall ran from New College by the site of the Sheldonian, through Exeter, behind the present houses in Broad Street (where there are remains of the bastions), and Broad Street itself was the city ditch, 20 feet deep, with a few Halls on the opposite side, on the site of Balliol and Trinity, with Horsemonger Lane in front of them on the edge of the ditch.

Many Halls were named from some Saint, or from their owners, some from having a sign, some from having an elm by them, or a well, or from being at a corner of the street, or having a roof of stone or tile or lead, or having glass windows, or a chimney—a rare thing, when there was usually a charcoal fire in the centre of the room (after the fashion of the central fire in the huts of primeval tribes), with an opening above to carry off the smoke. The heat of the fire was thus all utilized while now most of the heat goes up the chimney. A procession of students sometimes marched round the central fire in a College hall. 'In these,' says Johnson jocosely, 'the fireplace was always in the middle of the room till the Whigs removed it on one side.' The early Halls were of wood, and thatched, with wooden shutters for the open windows, and mere latches for the doors (from the later use of staples came the name of Staple Hall).

Stapeldon Hall gradually absorbed several of the old Halls or lodging houses, Bataile hall in 1320, Fragnon hall 1323, Sheld hall 1325, Scot hall 1328, Bedford hall 1335, Culverd hall 1353, Hambury hall 1380, Castel hall (1358, finally) 1385, Checker hall 1406, Peter hall 1470. Besides some outlying property, it thus took in the frontage along the city wall to the north and that along S. Mildred's Lane to the south. Some of these grants were at first made to two or three of the fellows, who later on transferred them to the College—perhaps when a further mortmain licence could be obtained.

Bataile Hall in S. Mary Magdalen parish, opposite the church, near the Curia Regis where the Carmelites lived (Peshall 237), lying between the tenement of Thomas Bost (Hist. Comm. iv. 446), and that of Thomas de Dodeford, was on 14 June 1303 given by Robert son of Robert Punchard of Garsington to M. Gilbert de Budeford clerk; witnesses Edmund de la More seneschal of the Hundred outside the North gate, Nicholas son of John de Eynesham and coroner of that Hundred, William de Ernesby, John de Dodeford, William de Clanefeld smith, Thomas Bost, Robert de Heyford, Robert de Brackele, Peter de Haneberg, Thomas de Dodeford, William Meke, Robert de Hamstalle clerk, and others. On 26 Aug. 1320 Gilbert de Bideford clerk granted it to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon Hall; witnesses Richard de Stapeldon and William Hereward knights, John de Pederton, John de Gaynges, Henry de Bokerel, and others. Gilbert de Bedeford made M. Robert Hereward clerk² and Roger de Doune bedell of Oxford his attorneys to deliver the seisin.

On 20 May 1323 Stapeldon granted them Ledeneporche 3 in

It must therefore be distinguished from Leadenhall, which was sold to Jesus for £400 in 1821 (Reg. 9 May 1821, and 1845). Leadenhall was also called Whitehall, but there was Great Whitehall in Cheney lane (Market street), and Little Whitehall in Ship street (Wood's City i. index), besides half a dozen other Whitehalls in the University, and it is not easy to distinguish them. ¹ In a deed of which the date is lost the Rector and Scholars granted to Richard de Salisbersh of Oxford, Emma his wife and John their son a 'placea terre' once called Ledynporche, between Richard's own tenement on the west and a 'placea' which is called Fouks-yne (Wood's City i. 385; Hist. Comm. iv. 447) on the east, for their lives at a rent of four shillings; Computus winter 1445 'iiiis a Thoma Barton pro gardino ex antiquo vocato Lydenporche,' and a similar entry in autumn 1457; compare Lent 1473 'xxttd Priori S. In 1299 Alice de Gorges Abbess of Godestowe and the convent granted for ten years to Peter de Skelton clerk a curtilage in S. Michael's parish near the North Gate, near a tenement once belonging to M. William de Coudray against the city walls, at a rent of two shillings, Peter to repair the 'muros bundales circa curtilagium.' This, says Wood, was a garden in S. Michael's, near White Hall. On 29 Sep. 1301 Peter let to Joan de Bedeford and her brother Richard (Godstow tenement i.e.) a 'placea terre' (different from the previous one) held by him under Godstowe, lying in S. Mildred's, between the land of the said Peter and the land of Thomas de Hengxeye for ten years. On 23 Ap. 1318 Margery Dyne, abbess of Godstow (Hist. Comm. iv. 467) granted to Stapeldon Hall in feefarm for ever a tenement with a curtilage, between the tenement now belonging to Stapeldon Hall but previously to M. Peter de Skelton on the west, and a tenement of Thomas de Hengseye in S. Mildred's towards the city wall on the east, at a rent of 12 shillings a year, to be paid half-yearly: if the rent is not paid the Convent may distrain on Hert Hall situated between the University tenement called Blake Hall on the west and the tenement of the Prioress and Convent of Stodleye called Scheld Hall on the east in the parish of S. Peter in the east, and on Artur Hall in the same parish situated between the tenement of Osneye Abbey on the east and the tenement of Adam de Spaldheyk [Spaldyng, Bodl. Chart. 287] on the west, witnesses William de Burcestre mayor, Richard Kari and Gilbert de Grenstede bailiffs, John de Dokelynton, Henry de Lynne, John de Hampton, and others; there is a receipt for 6s on 1 Oct. 1451 from Alice de Henley abbess of Godstow.

Fragnon ¹ Hall lay between a tenement once belonging to Godstow on the west and a tenement belonging to Baliol hall on the east [i. e. S. Hugh's Hall] 'lying lengthways between the King's road and Scothall.'

Scheld Hall was within the present College, Gutch i. 369, iii. 182; Wood's City, index; Hist. Comm. v. 477. In 1285 M. William de Coudray gave William de Paris and Yllaria his wife a messuage situated in S. Mildred's parish between the messuage of Richard de Hambury on the north and that of William and Yllaria on the south, they paying annually the chief lord of the fee five pence, and a penny to the lights of S. Mildred, and a clove to Coudray himself; for this grant they gave him nine marks: witnesses John Culverd mayor, Nicholas the goldsmith (aurifaber) and Thomas de Sowy bailiffs, Henry Owayn, John de Eu, Philip de Eu, John Sewy, Thomas Pope, Paulinus de Eriditon and others. Yllaria was a widow when, on 27 Oct. 1316, she gave this messuage to John de Perschore of Oxford and Joan her younger daughter [Pershore's wife]. On 17 Mch 1322 Perschore gave it under the name of Sheldhall to William Syward citizen and fishmonger of London, at a rent of 40s; and on 6 June 1325 quitclaimed to him for the messuage and the rent. On 16 June 1325 Syward gave it to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldonhall, and named M. Robert Hereward or John de Bury his attorneys to transfer the seisin. On 23 July 1344 Joan widow of John de Peshore quitclaimed to the Rector Masters and Scholars of Stapuldone halle for a messuage between the tenement of John de Davyntre Manciple [called Spenser, elsewhere; i.e. Hambury Hall] on the north and a tenement of the Hospital of S. John on the south ... Recognised before Mayor and Bailiffs at the Hustings held on Monday after S. Peter ad Vincula 18 Edward III [i.e. 2 Aug. 1344]. On 2 Aug. 1344 there appeared before the Chancellor M. William de Bergeveny, in the house of Joan widow of John de Pershore, Joan herself on the one part and on the other M. John de Blatcheswall Rector of Stapeldonhall, M. John de Landreyn, John Estcolme and Robert Fromonde, and they acknowledged themselves indebted 40 marks to Joan, but the next day this was reduced to 19 marks 1.

Hambury Hall, named from Richard de Hambury, was near Turl gate ², where the west part of Exeter College Chapel now is (Reliquiae Hearnianae 7 July 1712). Hambury had it about 1288 for thirty marks down and a rent of 8s 2d, from John de Hankinton and Edith his wife, when it is described as in the parish of S. Mildred's 'that angular house extending towards the city wall and situated between the tenement of William le Sauser and the tenement of Hugh Ruffus'; witnesses Henry Oweyn mayor, Nicholas de Kingeston, Elyas le Quilter and Philip de Eu bailiffs, Walter the goldsmith, William de Eu, William the apothecary, Andrew de Durham, John de Eu and others. On 16 Dec. 1331 Thomas son of Philip de Wormenhale quitclaimed Hambury Hall to John Leyre and Margaret his wife. (Seal of mayor of Oxford, 'my seal being unknown to most.') Wood D. 2, p. 81 'In a writing of R. Cary, mayor 15 Edw. III it is said that R. de Melton chapeleyn had purchased Hambury hall of J. Leyre of Berugby and Margaret his wife 14 Edw. III, and that Leyre did purchase this tenement of W. Burchestre and Alienora his wife I Edw. III. Where also tis said that Hugh de Stratton gave it to Philip de Wormenhale and Alienora his wife, in S. Mildred's, at the corner between the tenement once belonging to Richard de Parys on the south and the tenement once belonging to John Culvert on the east. Hugh also gave Philip and Alienor a tenement with a curtilage in S. Peter's in the east, lying between a tenement of the nunnery of Stodeley on the west, called Mayden hall, and the cotages called le vicoures court on the east; W. de Berncestre mayor, J. de Hamptone and R. de Berkele bailiffs' [i. e. 1311-2]. On 17 Feb. 1343 Richard de Melton chaplain (parson of S. Ebbe, Bodleian Charters p. 308) granted a messuage called Gramerscoles alias Hamburyhall, situated in a corner between the tenement of 'dominus' John de Shordich called Culverdeshall and a toft of Stapuldonhall, to John elder son of Richard Martyn of Daventre 'spenser' of Merton Hall. John Davyntre junior by his will dated 30 July 1361 (proved 11 Dec. 1361 before J. de Stodle mayor), gave Matilda his wife power to sell a tenement in the corner near [west of] Stapuldonhalle, and an empty place (placea) lying between that tenement and the college called Stapuldonhalle. On 23 Dec. 1361 she sold them both to M. William de Daventre parson of Pytchecote [near Aylesbury; Wood's City i. 147] and M. John de Middleton clerk; and John de Benham quitclaimed to them on 14 Jan. 1363, Robert Tresilian being one of the witnesses. On 3 Nov. 1364 William de Daventre quitclaimed to John de Middleton [land between tenements of the college called Stapildonhall on either side]. On 21 Dec. 1366 Middleton granted to John Otery, Lucas Helland, Robert Lydeford, and Richard Rouland clerks a vacant plot (placea) at a corner near Stapeldonehall on the East, on which there were formerly two messuages, one called Hambury Hall, the other Culverd Hall (24 feet in breadth and 54 and an half in length), John de Benham and John de Northampton clerk were two of the witnesses ['ista carta registratur in papiro Gild Aule Oxon fol. xli. ad requisicionem Johannis de Middleton']. Finally on 26 July 1380 John Otery, Robert Lydeford and Richard Roulond clerks gave this land to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldonehalle. Permission for this was given 4 Richard II 24 July 1380, Statutes iii. App. p. 36 'a piece of ground in the parish of S. Mildred, 90 feet wide and 57 and a half feet long' [but see Wood's City i. 118].

Culverd Hall, 'Kulverdes hall,' was granted on 9 Feb. 1351 by Roger de Lodelawe cook of Oxford to Stephen de Bantre bedell of the University; it lay between 'Excestre Hall' on the east and . a tenement of John de Daventre on the west. On 13 June 1353 Stephen de Bantre granted to John Martyn junior of Daventre and Alice his wife a spot (placea) lately built over, called Kylverde Hall, in S. Mildred's parish, between Excestre Hall on the east and a tenement of the said John on the west, which 'placea' he had from Roger de Lodelawe. On 28 Oct. 1353 John Martyn junior of Davyntre and Alice Pulteneye his wife granted to Robert Trethewy and John Cergeaux clerks a 'placea' in S. Mildred's, near Stapeldonhall, on which 'placea' a stone wall is built extending from the King's highway on the North to the corner of the said hall on the South, 23 feet long and 2 wide; they also gave the said Robert and John another 'placea' near Stapeldon hall, on which a stone wall is built, the 'placea' being in length 461/2 feet from the west wall of that hall on the north of the kitchen of the said hall to their (Martyn's) tenement, and 2 feet broad. But they were to keep the right of building on the wall. Bedford Hall, in S. Mildred's (Wood MS. D. 2. 418, Wood's City i. 113, 227, 506, 513), had its name from a family so called, from whom it passed to the Chalfunts. In 1288 it is said to be a placea 8 feet broad and 20 feet long, and a wall dividing it from the tenement of Henry de Bedeford. In 1330 it is described as lying between Chekerhalle which belonged to Philip de Eu and Castellhall which belonged to John de la Wyke. On 20 June 1334 Walter de Chalfunt disposed of it to Stephen de Hereweldesore and William Liskerd; and on 4 July they gave Emma widow of Henry de Bedeford a messuage in S. Mildred's, between the tenement of the Abbot of Oseneye and that of John de la Wyk, at a penny rent, and on 25 Sep. 1335 John son and heir of Henry de Bedeford quitclaimed at Winchester to Walter de Chalfhunte and Emma de Bedeford his mother, to Richard de Gloucestre and Thomas le Irmongere executors of Henry's will, all the actions and demands which he had under the will. But in Sept. 1335 Walter and Stephen gave it to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldonhall, and in June 1337 John de Bedeford son of Henry and Emma de Bedeford quitclaimed it to them at Winchester, as a tenement of Walter de Chalfhunte and Emma his wife by gift from Walter's brother Henry; and on 15 Dec. 1348 John de Littlemor Prior of S. Frydeswyde as chief lord remitted to them two shillings of rent due from Henry de Bedeford's property, which is defined as lying between S. Peter's Hall belonging to the Abbot of Oseneye and Castelhall belonging to John de la Wyk.

On 18 Nov. 1358 John son and heir of John de la Wyk granted to John Halle and John Wyseburgh, Castelhall which was opposite the Chapel of Stapeldonhall on the south side (see computus Lent 1357); and on 19 Nov. he bound himself to them in £20 to hold them safe in its possession. On 1 Aug. 1360 John Wyseburgh granted to Thomas Kelly, William Aleyn, John Restaurok, John Crabbe, Thomas de Hanneye and John Bremdon chaplain a toft (i.e. a place where a messuage has stood but is now decayed) formerly called Castelhall, once belonging to John de la Wyk: witnesses John de Stodele mayor of Oxford, John de Hertwell and Richard Wodehay bailiffs of Oxford, Robert Mauncel, Henry de Malmesbury, John de Olneye, John Bedeford, Roger Lodelowe, John le Sealer, John Cronk, John de Northampton clerk. Checker Hall had been given on 27 Jan. 1378 by Thomas de Schepton (Bodleian Charters 292) R. of Melles in Somerset to the venerable Gregory Bottelee R. of Schepton Malet, Edmund Balrych or Barlych R. of Baudripp, and William Elys R. of Schepton Beauchamp, with some other lands with which they were to enfeoff some of his poor relatives; and on 14 Mch they empowered John Gabbere and John Person to receive the seisin. On 10 Dec. 1384 John atte Burgh, heir of Thomas de Shepton, required them to enfeoff his sister Agnes atte Burgh wife of Robert Draper of Wells in frankmarriage, and they did so on 6 Feb. 1384; and on 3 Feb. 1387 Barlych certified that Thomas made no alteration in his lifetime. John atte Burgh, on I Aug. 1391, quitclaimed to Robert Draper, and on 19 May 1396 Draper granted Chekirhall to John Lewys, William Lirebek, Edward Elys and Adam Squier of Bytlysden in Northants, and made Thomas Thyngden of Thyngden in Northants and Gilbert Burton his attorneys to deliver the seisin, and on 20 May quitclaimed to the four. On 28 Oct. 1405 these four granted the Hall to Thyngden, who granted it on 31 Oct. to M. Thomas Noreys, M. John Gynne and M. John Cowlyng clerks for £20; and on 25 Nov. quitclaimed to them. On 27 Oct. Noreys Gynne and Cowlyng give up a statute merchant of £20 by which Thyngden secured them against any claim by himself or his wife Katerine (in right of dower), or by any of the previous owners, who are enumerated. On 12 July 1406 Noreys Gynne and Cowlyng gave two messuages to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldonhall, viz. Chekerhalle in S. Mildred's, and Gyngyveres Place 1 in the Great Bailey in S. Scot Hall was close by. On 16 Ap. 1325 Richard de Tekne of Norhampton and Joan his wife granted, to Walter Prodomme clerk, Scothalle with a garden adjoining; it lay in S. Mildred's between the tenement of the Prior of S. Frideswide which is called Patrichall on the east and the tenement of John de Wyke which is called Castelhalle on the west, and abutted on the King's street leading from Scol street to S. Mildred's church, and ran lengthways from the King's street to the tenement of the Rector and Scholars of Stapildonhalle on the north, the rent was 33s 4d. On 10 July 1325 William de Brabanzoun quitclaimed to Walter bishop of Exeter and Walter Prodhomme for Scothalle, witnesses John de Trejagu knight, John de Buri of Oxford, John Prodhome, John de la Slo, Ralph le Spek and others, at London. On 22 Jan. 132 s, 1st Edward III, William Prodhoume clerk granted to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldonhalle a messuage called Scothalle in S. Mildred's street (Wood's City i. 112).

Peter Hall was near S. Mildred's lane. On 30 Sep. 1470 John Walton abbot of Osney and the Convent granted to John Philipp Rector of Exeter College and the Fellows, for £41 paid down, the toft

Black Hall lay about the N.W. corner of Hertford College, Wood's City i. 91, 97, All Souls Archives 164, Bodleian Charters 355, Reliquiae Hearnianae 3 Mch 1726; the Acta Congregationis show that on 8 June 1509 Convocation voted that a lease of Black Hall should be granted to Exeter College for 99 years at a rent of ten shillings, 'omnibus reparationibus et oneribus quibuscunque deductis'; Univ. The Principal however paid the rent for the garden direct to the University until 1556. The Principal also paid the University in the name of Exeter College 10s, over and above the 6s paid to the College for Black Hall, until Michaelmas 1543 when 10s appears in the College account as paid to the Proctors for the rent of Black Hall, and at the foot of the account the Principal is charged with an arrear of 56s for Hart Hall that year, which was afterwards paid, i.e. the Principal paid 40s for Hart Hall (Rogers iii. 680), 6s for Black Hall, Frideswide's (mentioned Lent 1357) viz. 2s for the original Stapeldon hall, and 4s for Castel hall; from 1363 the two rents are no longer kept separate. A similar rent of 12s to Godstow merged in the 18s paid to Christchurch in this century. For Wylliams, see State Papers 1533, p. 126. Was Wylson the W. nos to the University for Blackhall and 1s 8d for the garden once known as Catthall, total £2 7s 8d (Wood's City i. index). Hart Hall sometimes cost more than the rent in repairs. The lease of Black Hall and Cat Hall had expired 1624, but the College continued to hold them without a lease till 1633 when payment ends. Part of Black Hall was long afterwards let out for dwellings and shops. The University leased Black Hall to John Cross an apothecary in 1664. Cross leased part of it to John Brickland tailor in 1669 (Peshall 28). Brickland's assignees sold it to Cutler a College servant. Exeter College appointed the Principals of Hart Hall until 1604, except for certain years during which New College was building, at which time some of that Society lived there (Gutch i. 488, iii. 640-1).

Hart Hall¹ anciently contained two messuages. One, in 51 Henry III, was the tenement of Henry Punchard butcher, containing his house and court and, at the head of the court, a piece of ground, about 18 yards long and 11 yards broad, which was for some years leased to the owners of Sheldhall adjoining. From Punchard all this passed through intermediate owners to Elias de Herteford, who let the place to Scholars and so made the place Hart Hall. He granted it 1301 to his son Elias, who on 17 June 1301 sold it, 'between Blackhall on the west and Micheldhall on the east,' to John de Dokelington 2. The other messuage, consisting of a house and court, 'between the tenement of Osney on the east and that of Adam de Spaldyng on the west,' belonged to Alice wife of Giles de Stokwell; she conveyed it to Agnes widow of John de Staunton, who sold it, 25 Ap. 1308, to John de Dokelington, in whose time it was called Arturhall (documents printed in Bodleian Charters 287). On 12 Ap. 1312 Dokelington conveyed them both to Walter de Stapeldon and Richard de Wideslade clerk, or their assigns, for 80 marks. Hart Hall now took the name of Stapeldon Hall, and on 7 Ap. 1314 Wideslade sold his share of the joint ownership to the bishop. In the same year the king licensed Stapeldon to give all this property to twelve scholars residing in the University, viz. the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon hall, to hold to them and their successors. A license of alienation was procured 26 July 1314 from the Prior and Convent of S. Frideswide, the mesne lords of Hart Hall, who reserved a rent of two shillings. The Rector and Scholars, after they had removed from Hart Hall, usually let it for 24s in Michaelmas term, and the same in Lent, for 12s in Easter term (Trinity term does not appear). Arturhall was let at half those sums. On 31 Oct. 1334 the College leased Arturhall to Walter de Plescye, R. of West Wardon, for ten years at 9s rent, Walter doing the repairs; witnesses M. Richard de Evesham, M. John de Aylesbeare, M. Thomas Bradwardine, Peter de Aynho bedell of the University, Nicholas de Seintefey and others; the lease expired at Michaelmas 1344; Arturhall is only mentioned again by name in the summer term of 1401, it had probably merged in Hart Hall under one Principal since 1344. In 1544 owing to the Plague the rent of Hart Hall was much diminished, but it was to be raised when there were 30 students. In 1551 the rent was again revised. On 10 June 1559 'their tenement or house ordained for the advancement of learning, commonly called Hart Hall,' was leased to Philip Randall, Principal, for 21 years from the previous Lady-day at a rent of 33s 4d, the College doing the external repairs in slatt and slatting, and the Principal the inward reparations of particyons windowes doors flooring and glazeing, except it shall please the Rector and Fellowes of their benevolence to give lime boards stones clay nayles as they had accustomed to do before the making of this lease. The said Philip shall not let &c. to any but one of the foundation of the said College, and a bond of £6 13s 4d is added to secure this, by P. Randall and John Collens M.A. and B.M. On 20 July 1572 Randall renewed his lease. On 28 Oct. 1593 a lease was made, and sealed 3 Nov., to John Eveleighe for 21 years on the same terms, except that he was to undertake all repairs. After Eveleighe's death there was a lawsuit about Hart Hall with Dr. Price the Principal, and the College evidences about it were sent to Archbishop Bancroft in 1608. Price had to pay up $6\frac{1}{4}$ years' rent at £1 13s 4d since Eveleighe's death. In 1633 Laud named Dr. Parsons of S. John's Principal, on which Exeter College protested. In Parsons' time the Principal could dispose of eight habitable chambers, the University having resumed possession of Black Hall and Cat Hall. The rent was paid to Exeter

College, and the College did not attempt to resume full ownership of Hart Hall till 1723, when a dispute began with Dr. Newton the Principal. In winter 1540 the College paid John French the Principal 20s 'pro exhibitione domini Bicknelli stabilienda in Aula Cervina, concessio ex communi consensu sociorum.' This exhibition issued out of certain lands given to the monks of Glastonbury by Bicknell, knight (Gutch ii. 69, 80, iii. 642, App. p. 34; Wood's MS. F. 28 pp. 256-7), and was appointed for the education of ten poor scholars in the University, but by whom and in what manner it was settled on Hart Hall, whether for ever or only as the Hall should be applied to such uses, or with other limitations and conditions, does not appear, the original settlement being lost. The crown granted part of this exhibition to Emmanuel College at Cambridge on the dissolution, so that apparently the gift to Hart Hall was not perpetual. Madan's Materials 88, Reg. of Congregation 14 June 1521.

The scholars of a College would at first be expected to attend the parish church, but naturally soon tried to obtain a chapel of their own. On 9 July 1319 John Parys rector of Stapeldonhall assures the Rector of S. Mildred's, in the presence of Masters Richard Noreys, Henry Bloyou, Stephen Pyppcote, John de Sevenasche, that if a chantry should be held in the College chapel, it should not prejudice the rights of that parish. In 1326 Henry bishop of Lincoln allowed bishop Stapledon to consecrate the high altar of the chapel 1

College however later on found it necessary to appeal against an interdict laid on the chapel by Thomas bishop of Lincoln, at the instigation of Roger de Faryngs R. of S. Mildred's, without the cause being heard. A library had been already built in 1383; but the chapel was afterwards turned into a library and the building was still standing in 1778, yet the fire in 1709 can have left little of the original work. The early College libraries had their sides facing east and west, the early morning light being so important; later on, when early rising was not so much in fashion, they faced north and south ¹. We have seen the letters of Pope John XXII. and John bishop of Winchester shown us by Robert de Trethewy proctor for the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon hall. We confirm the appropriation of West Wittenham, reserving 3s 4d a year to the bishop of Sarum for the profit he used to have during vacancies, and 40d to the Archdeacon of Berks, and 6s 8d to the Dean and Chapter of Sarum for the same reason. We also order that the College shall within two years elect two fellows from the diocese of Sarum and so on for ever. The Chapter diocese of Rouen, but difficulties were made and the College did not get actual possession of it till 1355 and then only on condition that henceforth two fellows should be elected from the diocese of Sarum.

Stapeldon's Statutes bear date 24 April 1316 when they were accepted by the Rector and Scholars. There were to be thirteen Scholars, i.e. Fellows,—a mystic number which appears at several of the Colleges. Twelve were to study philosophy; the thirteenth was to be a priest and chaplain studying scripture or canon law. Eight of the twelve were to be from Devon, four from the Archdeaconry of Cornwall, either born in the diocese or settled there. The Chaplain was to be appointed by the Chapter of Exeter and, if he should be declared unfit by two-thirds of the fellows, the Chapter was to appoint another. He was to celebrate and say the services and manage the choir. Candidates for fellowships were to be at least sophists, i.e. students in arts. They were to 'determine as B.A.1' within six years; to determine meant disputing in the schools the Lent following the degree of Bachelor. Within four years of that time, or at least in the summer term next after the end of four years, they had to 'incept' as M.A. Then they were to 'read,' i. e. lecture, two years; and house of Sarum I Aug. 1355. The consent of the Rector and Scholars is dated Oxon 9 Aug. 1355. And we Edmond de la Beche archdeacon &c., Bradefeld 24 May 1356. (De la Beche and John Polyng had helped to procure the confirmation.) (1) Robert bishop of Sarum ordains thus. The Vicar of West Wittenham is to have the 'Aula' with the chambers annexed belonging to the Rectory and the open space on the east next to the ground of Richard le Skynnere extending in length from the public road on the south to the garden of Robert Kempe on the north, and in width 6 roods of 161 feet each; and further the open space near the former on the west near the gardens of Robert Kempe and extending to the Cemetery (so that the Vicar may construct a 'posticum' or 'posterna' for his entry to the church), containing in width from Kempe's garden to the ground remaining to the Rectory 4 roods less 3 feet; and further 60 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow, and pasture in 'le hurst'; and further a tithe of mills, lambs, wool, calves, geese, flax, hemp, and oblacions—all in fact except the tithe of corn and hay. The Vicar is to keep up the books, vestments &c., and pay procurations sinodals &c., and a part of the tenth for Legates and Nuncios and voluntary Subsidies. Sarum 20 July 1358. The determining bachelors chose two collectors among themselves, who (1) arranged them into groups, so that each bachelor might dispute twice at least, (2) collected the fees. Determining ceased in Lent 1821: see Ayliffe ii. 120, Gutch ii. 225, 254, 270, 291; Wordsworth 217, 317; Rawlinson MSS. class C. no. 421 fol. 66; Cox 143, 228; Wood's Life ii. 5; W. W. after one year more vacate the fellowship within fifteen days. The fellowships were therefore, at the outside, only tenable for rather less than fourteen years. They also ceased as soon as a fellow inherited or obtained sixty shillings a year, or any ecclesiastical benefice; and any one absenting himself five months in the year, or refusing to take the office of Rector, also lost his fellowship. Bishop Fox, the founder of Corpus, thought it sacrilege for a man to tarry any longer at Oxford than he had a desire to profit. Besides this, the fellowships in most Colleges were so poor, and the fellows were so crowded together, two in a room, with one or two students on truckle beds beside them, that they naturally left on any chance of promotion, and hence the succession to fellowships was often rapid.

The Rector was elected at the beginning of October, after the annual audit; the previous Rector was re-eligible and was not seldom re-elected once or twice. He was more like the Bursar than the Rector of our days; he looked after the money and rooms and servants but, if any two fellows demanded the removal of a servant, the Rector was to appoint another in his place. He was Janitor, as at most Colleges, and his rooms were over the Gateway.

Fellows were to be elected 'without regard to favor, fear, relationship or love, the electors naming men apter to learn, better in character, and poorer in means, or at least those who best come up to these three conditions.' The fellows were bound to dispute twice a week, but questions of natural science were to take the place of logic every third time. While sophists or bachelors, the fellows were also to read 'abstracciones, obligaciones, cynthategrammeta ', circa signa (?), necnon logicalia et naturalia.' Men were not educated in College. They lived there, under proper discipline, and certain disputations took place there, but the College tutor was as yet undreamt of, and education was conducted by the Regent masters who lectured at the Schools. Osney alone had 14 out of the 32 schools in School Street, Exeter 4. All such schools were let out, when not wanted by the owners themselves. The statutes then relate mainly to domestic matters. They do not go into such minute detail as those of other Colleges, e.g. at Queen's in 1340 the use of musical instruments is forbidden because they lead to levity and distract men from their studies 1.

Under Stapeldon's system, the Rector and other officers were always young men. The fellowships, as in most colleges, were distinctly given for the children of the poor, and the number of the fellowships should have been increased as the revenues grew. But the Colleges did not carry out their Founders' wishes in this matter. In some it was ruled that personal property to any amount did not vacate a fellowship, and livings were estimated at the old value in the King's Books. And in most Schools and Colleges the richer classes have appropriated what the Founders gave to the poor. Students corresponding to servitors and battellars are now few, while in 1616 16 colleges educated between 400 and 500 poor students.

The regard paid to poverty brought forward some eminent men. Such for instance was Walter Lihert, a miller's son from Lanteglos by Fowey in Cornwall, who after being fellow of Exeter became bishop of Norwich and built the sculptured roof of the Cathedral; he supported in his troubles Reginald Pecock the author of 'The Repressor of over much blaming of the clergy,' whom he had probably known in his undergraduate days, when Reginald taught in one of the schools in School Street belonging to Exeter College 3. Similarly long afterwards John Prideaux, Rector 1612, used to say 'If I could have been parish clerk of Ubber (Ugborough), I should never have been bishop of Worcester'; on his failing to become parish clerk, he had been advised to come as a poor scholar to the University. Benjamin Kennicott was master of a charity school at Totnes till by the assistance of some friends he was able to enter the University where he became a distinguished Hebrew scholar. Still later William Gifford, after being a cabin boy on board a coasting vessel and then at the age of 15 an apprentice to a shoemaker at Ashburton, was helped to go to Exeter College by Mr. Cookesley a local surgeon and gained a bible clerkship. This assisted him to complete the education which gave him a leading position in the literary and political world. He remembered his own rise in life and founded two Gifford exhibitions at Exeter College for poor boys from Ashburton school. There was some narrowness in the old system, but the way to rise was not closed to the poor, and the Universities had the character of popular bodies in which learning and study were recommendations.

The Universities were a kind of High School, more like the Scotch universities at present. The education given was practical and suited to the wants of the country. Latin was necessary at a time when even the accounts of a manor were kept in that tongue; it was the common language of Europe and almost the sole language of literature, since the vernacular tongues were as yet very imperfectly developed. The number of boys or men at this High School was large, and the chance of advancement was considerable. There was therefore as keen an ambition among the small landowners to send one of their sons to the University as there is now in Ireland to send a boy to Maynooth. The number of ordinations in the Bishops' Registers is very large. In Stapeldon's first ordination, 21 Dec. 1308 at Crediton, he ordained 1,005 persons, viz.: 155 subdeacons, 77 deacons, 15 priests, beneficed clergy 42 (30 as accolites, the rest subdeacons, deacons, or priests); 273 received the first tonsure, and there were 443 accolites. All the names are given. Mediaeval wills show that almost every man whose circumstances made a will necessary had sons or near kinsmen in orders. Livings are often given to mere boys, who then have leave of absence for some years to study at the University. Dispensations are often necessary on account of illegitimate birth; some of them may be due to the extension of the degrees within which marriage was prohibited to as distant relationships as that of fourth cousins; while the births from 'a priest and an unmarried woman' may represent what were really half-allowed marriages of the clergy (Collier a. 1128, 1215, &c.). Of grown-up students there were probably never so many as at present. The boys were brought up by carriers, who had a regular route, which they took every year, about the beginning of October, when the University year commenced; and this journey only cost 5d a day for each boy, and perhaps not more than 3d for the very poor. The boys could not go home so often as now, but had lectures in the Long Vacation on natural science. The rent of a room was about 2s 6d a term. Many of the students walked both ways. In modern times we hear of Thomas Carlyle walking 100 miles to Edinburgh. The Universities were Liberal in the Middle Ages, now they are largely Tory; the reason is that then most of the students were poor, now they mostly belong to the well-to-do classes. As to the age of taking the degree, Cavendish ed. Singer 1827 p. 66 says that Wolsey taking his B.A. at 15 was a rare thing and seldom seen.

Owing to this general poverty a number of chests were founded in the University for making loans to poor students. The money was lent on security of books, plate, or other property; it was, in fact, a pawnbroking business which charged no interest. Thus in 1316 Ralph Germeyn founded a chest of £10 for making loans to poor scholars in the College; Masters of Arts might borrow a pound, Bachelors a mark (13s 4d), and Sophisters half a mark, provided that they deposited pledges of greater value. The College was also allowed to borrow for its corporate needs. But all loans had to be repaid within 12 months. Some years afterwards Richard Grenfield founded a similar chest 1; and Robert Rygge did the same towards the end of the century. In 1589 we hear of Bosisto, Helme and Eveleighe being appointed 'Keepers of the Germin Chest.'

We have occasionally a mention of the books that were studied. Thus Henry Whitefield, a former fellow, left the College money to buy books, with which 'Burley on the Ethics, on the Topics, and on Logic' were bought and chained to desks in the Library. The two former cost 14d and 13d respectively for their binding. In summer 1389 £4 were given for the Problems of Aristotle and five marks for Boicius (Boethius) de Disciplina Scolarum and de Consolacione Philosophiae, and 20d for the stationer's services; while in winter 1445 fourteen pence were paid for repairs to a Concordance and to Boethius, and sevenpence for repairs to the book called Catholicon 1. We also hear of the Liber Decretorum and the 'Sextum' and other law books, and even more frequently of medical books. take the book out without leave of the Rector and Fellows¹. In 1446 the College bought parchment at Abingdon which it sent to the monastery of Plympton in Devonshire where a book was being copied for the College². But when Bishop Fox founded Corpus, he expressly ordered his lecturer in theology not to use the interpretations of the Bible by Nicholas de Lyra or Hugh de Vienna, but those of the Greek and Latin doctors. Such was the spirit of the English Renaissance.

The fellows had their rooms free; and ten shillings a year as well, but the Rector and Chaplain received twenty. Each fellow was also allowed ten pence a week for his 'commons' but a proportion was deducted for each day that he was absent, and so of his yearly allowance if he was absent for more than four weeks in the year. We also find a sum of 3s 4d allowed for 'visiting friends,' and seeing to private business; and some clothes (liveries) were supplied, apparently once in three years. In 1544 the arrangement about liveries is as follows. On the feast of All Saints every third year each fellow who is M.A. is to receive 20s, each B.A. 16s 8d, others 13s 4d-subject however to the rule that £20 at least shall always be reserved in the College chest; at the same time an improvement was made in the commons, especially in what were called 'thirteenpenny commons' i.e. on 20 feast days 1. The common chest had three keys kept by the Rector, Senior Fellow and Chaplain; there is still an old chest of this kind in the muniment room. The allowance of ten pence a week may seem small, especially as the arrangement was made just after the great famine of 1315, but Exeter was poor, and the sum allowed in the richer colleges was not much larger: it was raised to a shilling in 1408. In 1326 the Oriel statutes give twelve pence as the sum, which was to be made fifteen pence in times of scarcity. In 1340 the Balliol statutes allow eleven pence, which might be raised to fifteen pence when food was dear 2. These allowances should be judged by the general rate of living. Thus, poor mass priests had 6 marks (£4) in the fourteenth century, Kellawe's Reg. Dunelm. 3 p. lxxxviii; and twenty nobles a year (£6 13s 4d) was a bare living for a priest just before the Reformation.

The average prices of the period 1261–1400 supply the explanation. Wheat was 5s $10\frac{3}{4}d$ the quarter, and we must allow a quarter to each man in the year. Meat was a farthing a pound. Butter cost $7\frac{1}{2}d$ a gallon, but fluctuated much in price. 'Butter, I imagine, since it is so commonly sold by the gallon, was melted—a process which preserves it from becoming rancid, though at a great loss of flavour.' In other cases it is likely that it was pressed into earthenware pans, or into wooden tubs, the produce being salted in mass, as well as over each

² At New College in 1400 it was ordered that the allowance of 12 pence might be increased to 13 or even 16 pence in seasons of scarcity, and even to 18 pence when the bushel of corn sold for more than two shillings. The Lincoln statutes of 1480 define a time of dearth as a time when a quarter of corn sells for ten shillings or more; ten shillings is also the limit fixed at All Souls in 1443; but in 1582 the Visitor of All Souls ratifies the change of the allowance from 16 pence to 2s 8d for a Master and 2s 2d for another Fellow; All Souls Statutes p. 90; Magdalen Statutes p. 71; Brasenose Statutes p. 22. layer, just as in modern times. Salt was $6\frac{5}{8}d$, the bushel. Cheese was a little over a halfpenny a pound. Eggs cost $4\frac{1}{2}d$ for the long hundred i.e. 120: there are other indications which show that poultry must have been raised to a larger extent than at present. Vegetables were scarce, and owing to the want of vegetables scurvy and leprosy were very prevalent: onions, leeks, mustard and peas occur, though rarely 2; turnips carrots and parsnips were not yet used. French wine was a little over a penny a gallon. There are constant entries for wine given to visitors, which we may suppose to have been of a better quality than that usually consumed. Gardeners occur Lent 1361 'xxd ortalanis pro seminibus'; Lent 1487 'xiid ortalano mundanti ortos nostros.' A gardener was perhaps only employed occasionally, the payments to regular servants were larger. Thus the manciple received 5s a term, the cook 2s, the barber 12d, the washerwoman 15d; sums which are raised in Lent 1374 to 6s 8d, 40d, 20d, 2s 6d, respectively and in the sixteenth century they receive in all 15s 10d a term. The amount of washing in the Middle Ages was small. The tonsure of those who were in minor orders was shaved every week. We may compare women's out-door wages: Winter 1408 'iiiid uni mulieri que laboravit circa stramina, vd ob pro yelmyng [laying it in convenient quantities for the thatcher] eiusdem straminis'; winter 1435' duabus ylmestres xxd'; summer 1492 'iiis iiiid pro 5 bigatibus straminis pro horeo nostro apud Wytnam, solvendo pro bigatu viiid apud Suttun, xxd pro vectura eorundem, iis vid ly thakere ibi 5 diebus, servienti ei 5 diebus xxd, xvd cumulatrici Anglice a ylmer illis diebus.' one pottle. In 1395 a flagon of beer cost $1\frac{1}{2}d$, and a 'quarter' 20d'. In Lent 1361 the 'quarter' of beer cost 2s 8d, but this was better beer as it was bought for the feast of S. Thomas the martyr. The account of the preparations for the feast runs on thus '12d for spices in the 3 quarters of beer, 10d for a pound of wax candles, 1d for the breakfast of two Carmelites who brought a "palleum" for the feast, 1d to a poor man, 2d for incense (thimiama), 21d for loaves, 6d for common beer, 12d for meat, 12d for 4 ducks (anatinis), 2s 10d for capons, 17d for baking, 4s 4d for spices, 1d for 'salsamentis,' 8d for rabbits 2, 22d for 6 ducks, 11d for two little pigs (porcelli), 3s for 3 flagons of wine, 7d for eggs, 1d for onions, $1\frac{1}{2}d$ for "gyncebrum" (ginger was about 1s 6d the pound 3), 6d for ducklings (aniclis), iiiid for tallow candles (candelis de cepo), 12d for charcoal and faggots (carbonibus et focalibus) in the kitchen, 11d for veal, iiiid for lard (pinguedo), honey 6d, cheese 3d, flour 2d, the cook's services that day 12d, 6d to the maidservant of Roger de Northwod, 5d for wine given to the woman who keeps our public house (pandoxatrix nostra), 5d for wine to another woman who keeps a public house.' The amount paid for spices on such occasions is remarkable (Rogers' Holland 201, 1250). In the almost total absence of vegetables and modern condiments, these were the choicest flavours which men desired. Sometimes the fellows shared in greater festivities, for instance in the Determination feast of Richard, the son of Thomas Holland Earl of Kent, on the Monday and Tuesday before Ash

Wednesday, 21 and 22 Feb. 1395. The account of the feast is preserved among the archives of Merton, but several of the persons mentioned are fellows of Exeter, and Thomas Hendeman a fellow of Exeter was Chancellor 1. It was in fact a University feast as liveries were given to the proctors and bedels. The charges are twofold, for liveries and an entertainment. The liveries were either of coloured cloth or of variegated pattern (stragulatus). The cloth was served out in various lengths, from nine, eight, and seven and a half yards to a yard and a half, the breadth being uniform. The hoods were trimmed with fur 2, the names of the material being various as miniver, bugeye, popul, and stanling (perhaps the winter fur of the squirrel). The pieces (panni) of cloth, containing 24 yards (virgae) each 3, were bought from John Hende a London cloth-merchant. The coloured cloth was given to academics, the cheaper variegated cloth to other persons and servants. 'To M. John Wykham 7½ yards, M. John Gylys 8 yards, each proctor 7½ yards, M. Ralph Rudryth 9 yards, Lentwardyn 7½ yards, Talkaron 7 yards, M. Thomas Hendeman 8 yards' (at the head of the list previously we find '12 yards of coloured cloth for M. Thomas Hendeman, price of the yard iis id, probably given him as Chancellor), '20 determiners 7 yards each, 4 bachelors of law one piece 4 yards, 3 bachelors of arts 7 yards each, five fellows of the College 16 yards, 29 esquires 2 pieces 18 yards; 32 masters of arts pro furrura capuciorum xxxii furrurae de Menever, 29 determiners pro furrura capuciorum xxix furrurae de Bugey.'

The hall and kitchen are of course constantly mentioned. They were not on the site of the present hall and kitchen but more to the north. There was a large washing basin in the hall (lavacrum) with a pipe to it (fistula), and once we hear of a 'lavacrum' pendens

² There was a great consumption of wax, especially in churches, Rogers iv. 365, Roscher Pol. Econ. i. 289. The Cordwainers of Oxford paid 7d for a pound of wax 1483 (Cordwainers' Guild p. 14); cereus and torticius, Peshall 210.

Lent 1547 '13s 4d to Jacson a mason (lapidario) mending a chimney (fumarium) in the chamber of M. Whiting.' The smoke of wood was of a fragrant character, and was thought to be medicinal and beneficial. With coal smoke it was different, and coal could hardly be used under such primitive conditions 1. But by Tudor times wood was becoming scarcer and dearer, and owing to the need of using cheaper fuel chimneys came into use even in common houses. Previously, says Aubrey, 'ordinary men's houses, and copyholders' and the like, had no chimneys, but flues like beaver holes.' And Harrison in 1577 notes the use of chimneys in inland towns as one of those things that had marvellously altered within the recollection of old men, whereas in their younger days there were not above two or three in most uplandish towns, except in great houses. Students liked to remain round the fire in hall after dinner, partly for the warmth, or for the sake of an occasional drinking bout (bibesia); hence several Colleges have stringent rules against staying in hall after dinner. Thus at Magdalen 2 all are to leave the hall at curfew time, hora ignitegii, except on Saints' days when they may stay on and amuse themselves with ballads and read historical poems, chronicles, and the wonders of the world. At Balliol there was fire in the Hall on certain feasts and their vigils (Early Balliol by Mrs. de Paravicini 294). Candles were dear, nearly twopence a pound, that is two shillings of our money; men could not afford to read in their rooms after dark, they lacked the genial inspiration of good candlelight. In rude ages men have few amusements or occupations but what daylight affords them. Other students, besides Sixtus V, may have had to read by the light of the lantern hung up at the crossing of the streets. The French scholar Amyot read by the light of the charcoal in the brasier. Dr. Wood at S. John's, Cambridge, read by the rush light on the staircase (Wordsworth 410). Alexander Adam in the last century read his Livy in the early morning by the light of splinters of bogwood. The burning candle was sometimes protected by a lantern 1. In 1596 a fire occurred through one 'intempestive studentis.' Hence partly the 'ignitegium.' It was noted that at S. John's Cambridge some candles were lit before 4 in the morning. A very old lantern is preserved in the Ashmolean museum; it is of bronze and the light is transmitted through crystals. The wick of the better candles was made of cotton, which at that time grew in Cyprus, Sicily and Italy; but rushlights continued in use down to our own days (in 1662 Wood paid 6d for a pound of double rush candles, in 1666 $5\frac{1}{2}d$ for a pound of single rush candles). Much use was made of rushes in other ways. They were used to strew the hall and chapel. In summer 1358 13d was paid for rushes (cirpi) for the chapel (Blomfield's Lower Heyford 42), and in summer 1473 sixpence for the same purpose; straw was used at Christmas, rushes at Whitsuntide 2. The men too were much crowded in their rooms. Two fellows sometimes lived in one chamber. John Hennok was chamber fellow with John Dagenet in a room ad ostium; Lent 1415 'iiid pro emendacione sere in camera Hele et Yate'; and so others, winter 1429 'iiis iiiid pro camera Pleasaunte et Martyn pro ultimo anno'; John Westlake fellow had a room in College with Thomas Copleston sojourner in 1442. The churches and castles were splendid, but the inmates of collegiate houses were closely packed and indifferently lodged, while the furniture was rough and scanty. The Magdalen statutes 3 order that in each of the better rooms there shall be two chief beds and two beds on wheels, 'lecti rotales, Trookyll beddys vulgariter appellati,' and in each of the other rooms two chief beds and one truckle bed if the size of those rooms

The Chapel occurs constantly. A chalice is procured in winter 1413 which costs 34s 2d. Wine is bought, and wax candles, and incense. Thus in Lent 1334 'wine 5d, a quarter of oil 3d, 2 pounds of wax 13d, tallow candles 2.' Resin, called also 'thus,' was employed for ordinary incense²; it was about 1\frac{1}{2}d a pound, but in summer 1478 5d is paid for one pound. In summer 1334 and Lent 1355 1d is paid for 'thimiama,' and this is the more common name in the accounts; in summer 1507 we have 'thimiama et thus.' Thymiama was probably a composition. There was a 'sepulcrum' in the chapel³. Lent 1357 'thread for the sepulchre 1d,' Lent 1358 ' $6\frac{1}{2}d$ to John Walys for two days labour in whitening the chapel wall, 1d for tymiama at Christmas, $9\frac{1}{2}d$ for mending vestments and for wine, 1d for tymiama at the Purification, 40s for a silver turibule put up to sale with Richard the stationer and for his salary 3s 4d, 2d for the breakfast of a priest and clerk on two occasions who stood in the chapel and sang, nails and thread and repairing a hinge of sepulchre 11/2 d': summer 1404 '4d for the Lord's sepulchre, 10d to the bearer who brought us a black 'casula' with all belonging to it, a gift from Mr. Richard Mark.' There were rooms under the chapel, autumn 1363 '8s 1d for beams to make doors to the chambers under the chapel'; and it had a porch, winter 1361 '8s to a plumber who repaired the porch of the chapel, 4d for tin (stagnum), 4d to another workman who stood with him when he covered the porch, 3d for nails for the work, 3d for drink.' In autumn 1419 '15s to Thomas Plummer for melting ten fotmelys of our lead and for 8 stones (petris) of new lead and for melting it.' The fotmael, pedes, or pigs of lead each contained 5 petrae of 14lbs. each 1. The pes or fotmael is one-tenth of a cubic foot of lead. Thirty pigs made one fother, and melting or rolling a fother cost 10d, but ordinarily the plumber was paid by the day. The lead came mostly from the West of England, especially from Devon. Autumn 1364 '2s for earth (terula) for repairing the chapel porch and the stable, 4s 2d to workmen who repaired the chapel porch, stable and chambers and cleansed the court (curia) and for their bread and drink at the ninth hour 2 three days 6d, for lime 12d, 6d for wine in the chapel the whole term, 2d for skin to cover the

² Hora nona, 'nunsyns,' constantly occurs; winter 1354 '15½d to a workman working in the chamber of John Flemyn and for his dinner (prandio) one day in hall and for his nunsyns 2d, 12d to a workman for labouring a week and for his nunsyns, 10d to workmen for their nunsyns': winter 1402 '7s 2d to a mason (lathomo) for his labour and noncynchys in repairing Hart hall': autumn 1457 for removing earth from the well at Herthall 9d, for the drink of the labourers s (seu) none segs 4d.' The nunsyns was often an allowance of beer, noncynchys = noon-drink; Anglosaxon scencan, to pour out, is said to come from shank, the tap of the barrel being a hollow shankbone. Such names came from the church services. The sixth hour service, sexta (whence our siesta, for a sleep after a meal) was at 12 o'clock, and the ninth hour service, nona, at 3. At 3, half way between dinner and supper, a drink of beer and a hunch of bread were allowed, and commonly named bibesia or biberia monachorum, and the custom of bever still survives at Eton, Winchester and Westminster. A similar drink and hunch of bread in the early morning came to be called breakfast (jentaculum) towards the close of the fifteenth century, as the dinner hour was pushed on. Pepys constantly mentions his morning draught (Wordsworth 126, 433). An old line (adapted from Suetonius) runs Jentaculum, dein prandium, post cenam comessatio. But as, on fast-days, it was a long time to wait till 3 o'clock, the nones were put back to 12 o'clock, and the Sexta disappeared; hence the words noon and nuncheon. The second part of nuncheon means a drink, but the lump or hunch of bread that accompanied the drink got mixed up with nuncheon, and the word is now spelt luncheon. The Latin for nunsyns was merenda. Nona in Dante Purg. xxvii. 4, meaning midday, is almost certainly the right reading, though most MSS, read nova, but n and u (v) are constantly confused. Legend (i.e. Lives of Saints), 1d for thimiama.' A cord for the chapel bell cost 1½d in summer 1359: a small chapel bell cost 12d in winter 1363, another 4d in winter 1403. There were glass windows, Lent 1363 '8d to a workman who mended the glass windows in the chapel.' Glass was also used for small vessels, autumn 1359 'iid pro quodam vase vitreo pro hostiis conservandis.' Summer 1511 'vd ob pro parvis clavis circa aulam et tabulam Kalendarii in capella.' Tabula was a board on which were written the names of those who had to take particular parts of the services. See Henderson's Processionale Sarum p. ix.

Numerous exequies and obits were celebrated. Thus Thomas Barton canon of Exeter and R. of Ilfracombe, d. 1416 (Stafford's Reg. i. 327), says in his will 'volo quod exequie mee celebrentur per octavam post mortem meam inter socios aule Oxoniensis vocate Stapyldon hall, et habeant distribuendos inter ipsos xl. solidos, et celebrent presbiteri ibidem, et alteri socii dicant Psalterium.' Autumn 1477 'iiili vis viiid ab executoribus Wyllelmi Clerk alias Algod ad orandum pro anima eius'; winter 1477 'iiiis viiid in exequiis et missa Willelmi Clerk alias Algod.' Henry White, priest, fellow of New College 5 Nov. 1515, in his will 1538 (Probate Office) bequeaths 'to the company of Exceter College 10s to the amendment of their commons or to be bestowed at their pleasure, fyve shillings thereof to be delivered at my buriall, and fyve shillings at the moneth mynde; ... that Maister Rector of Excetur College have for his paynes taken with me a blewe glass the best; ... The Library was thatched in autumn 1375 '3s 4d for straw and for covering the Library.' It had just received a donation Lent 1375 '40s for the use of the Library in part payment of 20 marks given by M. William Reed bishop of Chichester, but temporarily used for College payments.' Winter 1385 '3d for repairing two books, 1d for paper, 2s 5d for glass in the great window of the Library.' In the east window 2 was the picture of a man kneeling, with his gown and formalities on him, with this inscription, 'Pray for the soul of M. William Palmer fellow of this place who caused this chapel to be lengthened.' Palmer's name was well known in the West, as he built Greystone bridge over the Tamar near Launceston, connecting Bradstone in Devon with Lezant in Cornwall, thus fulfilling a promise made in his schoolboy days, perhaps at Launceston school. In another window was a man kneeling with 'Orate pro anima Johannis Westlake quondam istius loci socii qui istam fenestram fieri fecit,' on a scroll issuing from his mouth 'Ibi nostra fixa sunt corda ubi [vera] gaudia 1.'

The books were chained to desks, and some of them kept in chests 2. The account of the expenses of building a new Library in 1383 is printed below, where the masons' and carpenters' wages are given for each week. Bishop Brantingham gave £10 towards it, John More R. of S. Petrock's Exeter £20, Bishop Stafford enlarged it in 1404 (Gutch iii. 115). There was no architect, only a chief mason. In 1545 a notice occurs that a key of the Library was given to each fellow and that whoever lost one of the keys was to pay 553. The books had to be sometimes pawned to one of the loan chests of the University when the yearly expenses were too great (Coxe No. xxix, xxxvi). Autumn 1354 '60s for redeeming a Bible which lay in Langeton chest'; winter 1357 '£3 for a Bible pledged in Chichester chest, 29s for a silver cup pledged in Goldeford chest, 13s 4d for a book on the prophets and the third part of Thomas de Alquino pledged in Tybeford chest'; autumn 1358 '£3 for a Bible redeemed from Chichester chest, 8s 4d for a missal pledged in Burnel chest, £3 for a Bible pledged in Winton chest'; summer 1374 '4 marks to our barber for a Bible which was pledged to him in the time of John Dagenet.' In later times, when books were more common the Colleges 1 made special provisions in their statutes about the Library and the books 2.

The fellows devoted considerable time and pains to managing their property. It was difficult to get money carried safely from one part of the country to the other. Sometimes the Chapter of Exeter sent the Gwinear tithe to their bailiff at Bampton in Oxfordshire (the Bishop of Exeter had 6 hides of land at Bampton—Oxf. Arch. Soc. 1887 p. 129); but sometimes the rector or a fellow had to go to Exeter or Gwinear for it 3, and travelling was not easy nor was it always safe. Even in Risdon's time the roads in Devon were 'cumbersome and uneven, amongst rocks and stones, painful for man and horse, as they can best witness who have made trial thereof. For be they never so well mounted upon horses out of other countries, when they have travelled one journey in these parts, they can, in respect of ease of travel, forbear a second.' The roads were not meant for carriages or carts, goods were conveyed on mules, and even in the early part of the last century there was little but a system of bridle paths West of Exeter. In Lent 1400 John Jakys the rector was robbed of ten shillings on his way to Exeter. A horseman was often accompanied by a servant on foot to take charge of the horse, the distance travelled was about 20 miles a day; but messengers on foot at a penny a day seem to have accomplished a greater distance. Money and goods were sometimes entrusted to the Exeter carrier (cursor or vector)1, when the Gwinear tenant had brought the money to Exeter; autumn 1460 '6d to the Exeter carrier for bringing us a "pannus depictus" given us by M. The carrier even in 1707 went to Exeter only once in five weeks (Reliquiae Hearnianae 30 Jan. 1724 note). The cost of carriage in 1579 was fourpence a mile (Wood's Life p. iii; Rogers iii. 674). J. The University carriers' stables were in Kibald street, which ran from Oriel backgate to Horsemulen Lane, and crookedly thence to the Angel backgate (Peshall 135, 141). The carriage up the Thames from London by water did not reach further than Maidenhead, and hence salt was dear, since it had to be brought from the coast (Rogers iv. 392). In its early years the College had to pass through difficult times. The worst famine ever felt in England occurred in 1315-6: 1320 was a year of pestilence, 1321 of famine, Wood's City i. 168. The Black Death caused many changes in the Colleges in 1349, and again 1361-2, 1370-1, Rogers i. 296; Gutch i. 485-6. The Computi too are missing for 17 years, 1337—autumn 1354. Was this owing to the plagues or to the great Riot on S. Scholastica's day, 10 Feb. 135 $\frac{4}{5}$? On 3 May a special protection was issued for the master of the House of

On 15 Mch 1333 Robert de Grymmeston and M. The bishops of Exeter were kind patrons. Bishops Grandisson², Brantingham, Stafford, and Lacy gave books. Bishop Stafford obtained a bull for the Fellows from Innocent VII. Peter Courtenay, resigning or dying, the Rector and Fellows may take possession; and they are to maintain a chaplain in the College, who at every mass shall utter a special collect for Fulk Bourchier Lord Fitzwarren and Elizabeth his wife, Edward Courtenay and Elizabeth his wife, Halnatheus Mauleverer and Joan his wife as long as they live, and for their souls after they die, as the original patrons of that church and promoters of this pious work, and there is to be an obit celebrated for them in the College every 20 Oct.; and every Vicar of Menheniot is to be a B.D., or at least an M.A., and one who is [or has been: these words only occur in a copy of the deed] a Fellow of Exeter College, to be named by the Dean and Chapter. Exeter 28 Sep. 1478.' On 23 July 1479 the College gave up all the tithes, &c. to William Baron the Vicar, for an annual payment of £20, the Vicar to bear all expenses whatever (see College Reg. 1827 pp. 11, 15). The executors of Henry Webber, dean of Exeter, James Hamlin, canon of Exeter, and Richard Mounceaux, canon of Exeter, gave the College £60 for the expenses of the appropriation.

church, &c., Edmund bishop of Exeter patron and immediate ordinary of Stapyldon halle &c. Our predecessor Edmund Stafford gave the said College books for divine service in its Chapel and a chalice, and books for the library, and built a chamber 24 feet long under the Library (which had been lengthened, heightened and covered with lead), and rebuilt the porch of the chapel and covered it with lead, and built a new small chamber under the porch, and half covered the Hall and built the new west gate, all which cost him over 200 marks in money, not including the books, and his executors have also been liberal to the College 1. Wherefore, after consultation with M. William Palmer, Rector of the College, and with the Fellows through M. William Fylham, S. T. P., authorised by the Rector and Fellows under their seal to act for them, at our manor of Chudelegh 2 June 1430 we have ordained as follows. The present Rector and Fellows, and any of their successors who are in priest's orders, and the chaplain are, when they celebrate, to say the collect or prayer which is usually said for bishops departed this life, on behalf of Edmund Stafford; and all Fellows both now and hereafter who are even in the lesser orders are to commemorate him in their prayers among other benefactors: and yearly on the morrow of S. Luke they are to keep his obit with Placebo and Dirige in the preceding night and mass on the morrow and he who performs the exequies and mass is to have six pence and the other Fellows present are to have four pence. And the rent of the two chambers mentioned above is to go to the repairs of the College Buildings. And this ordinance is to be kept like one of the statutes. The letters of authorisation to M. William Fylham are as follows' [space is left in the Register for the copy, but it is not inserted].

The Fellows also sometimes submitted Dubia to the Visitor as to the interpretation of the statutes, and these interpretations are preserved in some copies of the statutes. Besides regular commissions to inquire into the state of the College, the Visitor interfered to see that their revenue reached them regularly, to increase the amount paid for commons in a time of dearth, and to help them to pay debts incurred under such circumstances, to protect them from oppression by the Chancellor, to restore a fellow who had been expelled, to remove an imbecile Rector, and to make that office tenable for life instead of annual.

It is worth while showing in some detail how the Visitors dealt with the College. The Latin of the following documents is given in ed. i. p. xliv, 233, 270.

Dispensation 20 June 1370.

Thomas (Brantingham) bishop of Exeter, to the scholars of our College at Oxford, commonly called Stapildon Hall. Since the famine has so burdened you with debt that you cannot be supported by your commons without some help, we allow you to take each ros from the common chest to pay these debts, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in your Statutes or Customs. But you are not to do this again without our special license. At London.

Dispensation 13 Nov. 1370.

The Rector and Scholars of Exeter Hall in Oxford were allowed by the bishop (Brantingham) to take each 4d extra from the common chest weekly for forty weeks from the Saturday after Martinmas in the year 1370.

Commission for a Visitation 26 Oct. 1371.

Thomas (Brantingham) bishop of Exeter to our beloved Masters in Arts, Henry Whytefeld D.D. archdeacon of Barum, and Thomas Cary. We have been informed that Master William Franke, senior fellow of our College of Stapildon Hall, unjustly hinders his brother fellows in the election of a Rector. We therefore authorise you to visit the College and make them elect a Rector, and punish any who resist, and any offences of the fellows. At Esthorslegh.

he has despised our sentence for forty days and more. We therefore ask you to use the secular arm against him. At Far(ingdon?).

Petition of the Scholars of Stapeldon Hall as to the Visitation, 18 Sep. 1372.

To the bishop (Brantingham) his devoted John Dagenet Rector of the Scholars and of your College called Stapeldon Hall, John Dodemore, Robert Lydeford, Richard Roulond, Richard Pestor, John Hennok, John Henry, John Coly, Martin Archedekne, Laurence Stephen, Thomas Worthe, Richard Broun, Thomas Fille, John Skylling, Scholars of the College. As regards your commission to the reverend Masters Henry Whytefeld, Thomas Stowe, and Thomas Cary for visiting the College, delivered to them by the Rector, the said Thomas Stowe declines to act, and as the commission was directed to the three jointly and not severally, the other two cannot act; we therefore petition you to appoint three persons to carry out your commission, as also to charge the Dean and Chapter to pay us the money due from S. Wynnery in Cornwall ¹.

Commission for inquiring, correcting, and reforming, in Stapeldon Hall, 3 Oct. 1372.

Thomas (Brantingham) bishop of Exeter to Nicolas de Braybrok and John Seys canons of Exeter. We commission you jointly and severally to visit our college or house of Stapildon Hall, and carefully inspect their accounts as to the management of the goods of the college, and entrust you with all our canonical powers of coercion. Certificate from the College of Stapeldon Hall, 30 Oct. 1373.

To Thomas (Brantingham) bishop of Exeter his devoted sons Robert Lideford, Rector, and Richard Roulond, John Dedimor chaplain, Thomas Worth, John Henry, John Coly, Richard Broun, John More, Martin Lerchedekne, Laurence Stevyn, Reginald Povy, and William Slade, Fellows. We have received your mandate to the following purport-Thomas bishop of Exeter to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon Hall; Whereas Henry Beaumond, clerk, of our diocese, whose character is certified to us by letters patent of William Rymyngton D.D., Chancellor of the University, has been unjustly deprived of his state and degree in the College, on your submission as contained in an instrument witnessed by Robert de Lideford, clerk, of our diocese, public notary, on 15 Jan. 1372 (1373) in the Chapterhouse at Exeter, in the presence and with the assent of the Dean and Chapter, in the presence of Masters William Ryde our official, and Hugh Hikelyng canon of S. Crantock, and others, we have ordered him to be restored; We therefore command you to admit and replace him; On the authority therefore of this mandate we the aforesaid Robert Lideford, Rector, Richard, John, John, John, Thomas, Richard, Martin, Laurence Stevyn, John, Reginald, and William, have restored him to his former state and degree, on Sunday 30 Oct. A.D. 1373 in the Chapel in the presence of Master John Chayne your confrater.

Stapeldon Hall, 4 May 1374.

Simon (Sudbury) bishop of London, to the regent and non-regent Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford. Know all that in the presence of William (of Wykeham) bishop of Winchester, and Thomas (Arundel) bishop of Ely, and Sir John Knyvet the King's Chancellor, and Nicholas Carru the Keeper of the King's Privy Seal,

Thomas (Brantingham) bishop of Exeter, visitor founder and patron of the College of Stapildon Hall, and Master William Wilton Chancellor of the University and Master Martin de Lideforde rector of the College and proctor for the scholars had certain complaints (given below) read, which the Chancellor of the University had brought against the Bishop and Rector and College, and after discussion referred the whole matter to our decision. And we have decided that the removal of the chaplain John Dedemor by the Rector and Scholars shall stand good, but that the bishop may cause him to be admitted to the first place vacant in the College; that any persons aggrieved by the Chancellor's proceedings shall not be hindered in any scholastic act, and that the Rector and Scholars shall withdraw any proceedings against the Chancellor in the Court of Canterbury. The tenour of the complaints was as follows:

Hitherto the Rector had the free disposal of all the rooms, and with the consent of a certain part of the Scholars could punish and remove an incorrigible chaplain without appeal, and admit by election another chaplain on the presentation of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, except during the Bishop's Annual Visitation. But when the Rector Master Robert Lideford had, with the consent of all the Scholars, removed the chaplain John Dedimor, Master William Wilton the Chancellor restored Dedimor to his chaplain's place and to his chamber and table; and he excommunicated the Rector on his protesting, and suspended him and Master Richard Rowlond from all scholastic acts for three years, and forbad any advocate or notary, on penalty of imprisonment and banishment, to plead the case of the Rector or Bishop; and he imprisoned Master Robert Worthe, notary public, for writing an instrument of the matter on the requisition of the Rector and Scholars; and he banished Master Martin Lideford and Thomas Worthe for taking up the matter; and when the Rector and Scholars made lawful resistance within the College and not without, he bound Master Robert Lideford the Rector, M. Richard Rowlond, John More, Reginald Povy, Philip Stonne, and M. Robert Worthe their notary by pledges, under penalty of £100 and over, not to hinder the peace of the University in that way; all contrary to the Charters and Statutes of the College. Done in a great chamber in the south part of the inner cloister of the Friars Preachers in London, 4 May 1374, in the 12th indiction, in the 4th year of Pope Gregory XI, in the presence of Masters John Wyliet D.D. Chancellor of Exeter, John Appulbi dean of S. Paul's, William Wyde canon of Sarum, John Blaunchard archdeacon of Worcester, and John Schilyngford rector of the first portion of Wodesdon in the diocese of Lincoln, doctors of laws, and William Lorying canon of Bangor, inceptor in civil law, and Henry Persay, John Cary, and William Cary, and others. And I Robert Worthe saw and heard all this, and put it in this form, and being otherwise occupied had it written out by another and had it signed with my seal, and that of the bishop of London, and that of Master Edmund notary public. I the said notary had the words et rectoris interlined in line 39, Robertum in 40 and 45, rectoris in 50, which the writer had left out.

Mandate for the Scholars of Stapeldon Hall, 23 May 1384.

Thomas (Brantingham) to the Rector and Scholars. Since statutes, like their makers, require change, as experience shows; whereas bishop Stapeldon ordered that the Rector's office should be annual, which causes quarrels about the election, and carelessness in the annual Rector, we now ordain that Master William Slade the present Rector, and future Rectors shall hold office continually unless proved to us by the fellows to be negligent or unfit, on which another shall be elected. Commission to the Chancellor of Oxford to visit the College or Hall of Stapeldon Hall, 12 Nov. 1420.

To Edmund (Lacy) Bishop of Exeter, Walter Trengof Chancellor of the University of Oxford. We have received your commission to this purport. Edmund Bishop of Exeter to Master Walter Trengof D.D., Chancellor of the University of Oxford, our mother. Since our College needs supervision and reformation, we empower you &c. And as our seal is not at hand we use the seal of the Church of Hereford over which we lately presided. At Wyndsore Castle. On receipt of this commission, I sat on 20 November in the Chapel of S. Thomas in the College, when the Rector, Master Ralph Morewill, showed me a citatory mandate as follows. Although in the Statutes, which you are sworn to observe, it is expressly said that Scholars who are at least Sophists in Arts or at most Bachelors in Arts, born or resident in the diocese of Exeter, are eligible to the College, yet some of you, in the place of your colleagues lately removed, chose a man from the diocese of Sarum into the place of the first who was a Devonshire fellow, though there are many sufficient scholars in the University from the diocese of Exeter, and into the place of the second, who was from Cornwall, a Master of Arts actually regent, to the injury of the men of our diocese, who have nothing open to them anywhere else in the University; hence we forbid such proceedings for the future, and cite you all to appear before Master Walter Trengof D.D., lately a fellow, whom we have deputed to act as our Commissary on 20 November. And we send you this privately, to avoid scandal, trusting to your prudence and obedience. At Wyndesore Castle 20 November. On the reading of this mandate Masters Ralph Morewill, Rector, William Andrew, John Brent, Walter Davy, John Beaucomb, William Certyn; and Edmund Fychet, William Collys, John Colyford, William Palmer, Bachelors of Arts; Robert Stonard Chaplain, Walter Lyard and John Arundel, Sophists; Scholars of the College, swore to yield canonical obedience to you and your successors, and were examined by us singly and secretly, after which we adjourned matters to 23 November. On that day John Burwyk and Thomas Gourde, Scholars elected in the interim, swore to canonical obedience in like manner; and we charged them to abstain from such acts in the future, and suspended Walter Lyard from commons for disobedience, after which we adjourned matters to 30 November and then again to 2 December, when we suspended Masters William Andrew, John Brent, John Beaucomb; John Colyford B.A.; Robert Stonard, chaplain, and Walter Lyard sophist, from commons for five weeks, because of their naming for election Master Thomas Bony, and Simon Row who was only resident in the diocese. At Oxford 15 December.

Citation of Fellows, 20 June 1439.

At Bishop's Tawton. Edmund (Lacy) bishop of Exeter, patron founder and ordinary of the College of Exeter or Hall of Stapuldon Hall, to Master John Row, Rector. We hear that although Richard Frensch of our diocese, a man of knowledge and character and poor, was elected by the saner and senior fellows, and his election was confirmed by M. John Carpenter the Chancellor of Oxford because only a few fellows had voted for Richard Bokeler, nevertheless some Masters, John Bulsey, Richard Bele, John Westlake, John Godeswayn; and John Evelyng, William Sende, William Balam, John Andrew, Bachelors of Arts, hinder the said Richard from enjoying his election. We therefore command you to cite them to appear before us in the Chapel at our manor of Chuddelegh on Thursday after the feast of S. Anne, the mother of Mary.

We therefore empower you to remove him from his office, which is only annual, and see that the fellows elect another Rector. At Chuddelegh.

Commission to reform the crimes and faults of the Rector and Scholars of Exeter College, 16 Ap. 1453.

Letter of Enquiry by Bishop Clagett, 28 Oct. 1742. Good Mr. Dean,

It was signified to me some time ago by the Rector of Exeter College, that, in pursuance of the Powers given by an Act of Parliament made in the 7th year of the late King, the Rector and Fellows of Exeter had thoughts of selling a small Parcel of their Estate to Jesus College in your University; to make which sale good and effectual the Act requires the Consent and Approbation of the Visitor.

The following is the description of the Parcel to be sold, as it stands in the lease now in being, whereby it is at this time leased out to Jesus College, and as it has been communicated to me by the Rector of Exeter.

'All that their piece of ground, scituate lying and being in the parish of St. Michael's in the city of Oxford, containing in length from North to South 72 feet, and in breadth from East to West 30 feet, on which lately stood two tenements, now pulled down by the said Principal and Scholars, by the consent of the said Rector and Scholars, to new build. And also all that piece of ground, being one hundred and five feet in all, at the North end of the said piece of ground next the street, being 30 feet long the whole Breadth of the said Demised Premises only and four feet deep at the East end thereof and three feet at the West end, which was lately granted or agreed to be granted to the late Principal and Scholars from the City of Oxford (with other Grounds), on which ground against Exeter College Lane the said Principal and Scholars of Jesus College intend to build and lay to the ground belonging to Exeter College; together with all Buildings thereon erecting and all ways and passages thereunto belonging or used or enjoyed therewith, with their and every of their Appurtenances, which said first mentioned Premises were lately granted to the said Principal and Scholars by the name of all that their messuage heretofore a stable, &c.'

This is the description of the Estate proposed to be sold. In order to obtain further Information concerning it, I had once thoughts of sending a Commission of Enquiry by way of Request to seven or eight Gentlemen at Oxford, but because I am willing to give trouble to as few persons as possible, and because the opinions of a friend or two will give me Full and Entire Satisfaction in this matter, I chose to desire the Favour of Yourself and Mr. Prolocutor (to whom you will be so kind as to give my Service) to let me know your sentiments in Answer to the Two Enquiries Annexed to this Letter. If Mr. Dean of Exeter be now in Oxford, he also, I dare say, will very readily let me have his Sentiments about this affair. Should he be absent, I shall entirely acquiesce in whatever shall be Mr. Prolocutor's Judgment and Yours.

I do not find by Mr. Rector's Letters to me that the Affair is Pressing. I shall be obliged to you if you will let me have your Sentiments at your Leisure. I am, Good Mr. Dean

Your very loving brother and humble servant N. Exon.

Qu. 1. Will the selling the Estate above Described be anyway Prejudicial to Exeter College?

Qu. 2. What will be a Reasonable Price (All Circumstances considered) for Exeter College to Demand for the said Estate?

The Wiclifite movement largely influenced Exeter; its history has been written by John Lewis, a member of the College. In 1382 an assembly of divines censured Wiclif's doctrines, and strong measures were taken by the Archbishop and the bishops against the Wiclifites at Oxford. William Serche the chaplain of the College was removed in 1384 (the year of Wiclif's death) by the Archbishop, who appointed William Talkarn in his place 8 Dec. 1384: Serche however was presented by Richard II to the rectory of West Tilbury in Essex 1 22 Aug. 1392 and held it till 1408. Did this arise from the favour shown in the royal household to the new views; or had Serche, like so many others, altered his views? One of the Archbishop's commissaries in Serche's case was John de Landreyn, once fellow of Exeter and then of Oriel, who had joined in condemning the Wiclifite doctrines, in 1381. Another, Robert de Tresilian 2 was one of King Richard's strongest supporters and was executed when the king lost power. His fate is the first legend in William Baldwin's Mirror for Magistrates, 1559 (Athenae i. 341). Thomas Turke, who became fellow this same year 1384, abjured for heresy later on. William de Polmorva had been named fellow of Queen's by the founder of that College 3, and several fellows of Exeter became fellows of Queen's afterwards, viz. Henry Whitefield the provost, Robert Blakedon, William Middleworthy, John Trevisa, William Franke, Robert Lydeford; and these were expelled in 1379 by the Archbishop of York the Visitor. Thomas Swyndon another fellow of Exeter was one of the Commissioners appointed in 1380 to enquire into the troubles at Queen's, and Richard Browne was at Queen's 1386-9. Others became fellows of Merton, such as (not to mention William Read, afterwards bishop of Chichester) Thomas de Brightwell who was professor of divinity there and suffered much from Archbishop Courtenay (Lewis' Wiclif 126); Richard Pester who was of three societies successively, Exeter, University and Merton 1; and Robert Rygge who was repeatedly Chancellor of the University, but was removed in May 1388 when Thomas de Brightwell succeeded, and so again in 1301 when Ralph Redruth 2 succeeded, both of these being also fellows of Exeter. The second and fourth Principals of Hart Hall were fellows of Merton and, as well as the third, became Wardens of New College. Rygge however joined in condemning the Wyclifite doctrines, and it is possible that he belonged to the party which was rather concerned to uphold the independence of the University against the Archbishop's claim to the right of Visitation³ than to maintain Wiclifism in its entirety; Benedict Brente opposed the Visitation in 1411 and was imprisoned in the Tower (Gutch i. 547-50, iii. App. p. 39, Anstey 250-1). Bishop Brantingham in 1382 sent out the following mandate 4 against Laurence Stevine or Bedeman, who had been preaching in Cornwall 5.

'Thomas &c. to his beloved sons the religious men the Priors of Launceston and Bodmin and to friar Benedict Lugans, S. T.P., Provost of our church of the blessed Thomas the Martyr of Glasney and to the official of our peculiar jurisdiction in Cornwall and to the Perpetual Vicar of S. Probus greeting. Whereas the Reverend father in Christ, William by the grace of God Archbishop of Canterbury Primate of all England and Legate of the Apostolic See in England, and certain of his suffragan bishops, of which number we were, in fit and congruous place assembled, with unanimous consent had providently ordained . . ., that the several suffragans of the Province of Canterbury in their dioceses should inquire and cause to be inquired with due solicitude concerning heretic depravity; and it has lately come to our ears that a certain Laurence Bedeman, who goeth in sheep's clothing, having entered our fold secretly with fraud and stealthily under the feigned image of holiness, with foxlike craft endeavours in his public and private discourses to turn aside our sheep and to lead them into various heresies and serious errors, therefore being desirous to chase away such fox from our fold lest he worry our sheep, we commission and firmly enjoin you that you under our authority carefully inquire where and what things the aforesaid Laurence, whether in churches or in other places in Cornwall, and on what feast times or days the aforesaid Laurence may have preached, propounded, said or proffered to our sons and subjects; and also generally of all and singular within the parts of Cornwall anywhere dwelling, of whatever condition or state or honour they may be, who think of the Catholic faith and of its articles otherwise than they should; and what by your inquiry you shall find you shall certify to us by the feast of S. Michael the Archangel, wheresoever we may be in our diocese, by your letters patent containing the series of these things, and also what things and what sort of things the aforesaid false prophet Laurence or any other may have preached against the Catholic faith and the articles thereof; and stating clearly the names also and surnames of all and singular who may have fallen into heresies of this kind, or errors, and their sayings or statements: citing moreover the said Laurence to appear before us at our manor of Clyst on Thursday next after the Feast of the Exaltation of holy Cross, to make a personal statement on these matters and objections to be made to him about them, for due correction of his soul, and to swear for the future . . .' But Stevine afterwards conformed and became Rector of Lifton.

There was a close connection between Exeter and Merton during the Wiclifite period. Walter de Merton had established a college of secular students, who were to be deprived if they took any monastic vows. Hence they sympathised with Wiclif the great enemy of the monks and friars. Lincoln, on the other hand, was founded 1427 in order to supply a perpetual succession of enemies to Wiclif's doctrines, for Richard Fleming bishop of Lincoln had once been a follower of the reformer and now hated him and his memory and his associates 1.

A friendly relation was kept up between Exeter College and Canterbury hall even after Wiclif's time, for in Lent 1448 we have '7d for oblations on the day of the burial of the Warden of the College of Canterbury.' This however may have been only an ordinary act of friendship between Colleges, for in autumn 1471 there occurs '2d offered at Merton at the mass for the Warden².' Among the receipts for Lent 1556 occurs '10d for the oblations of those of Magdalen, 12d for the oblations of the fellows of Balliol College commonly called Baylie College.' Exeter used to offer in return at Balliol³: 1392 '7d to the fellows offering at Balliol hall on S. Katherine's day,' 1393 '4d to the fellows to offer at Merton at S. John Baptist's feast, 6d for the fellows offering at New College.'

Oxford took a deep interest in the healing of the Forty Years' Schism. Henry Whitefield had managed some college business at Avignon in the winter of 1363, and Thomas White had been sent to the Roman Court in 1376 'pro nostre domus perpetuacione' (see computus of winter 1377), just when that court was returning from Avignon to Rome. In 139\frac{9}{9} a meeting was held at Oxford about the General Council, Gutch i. 534, 544. In the winter of 1408 we hear of '17d to the ambassadors elected for Union in the Church of God '.' Robert Hallam, bishop of Salisbury, who died at the Council of Constance, had been several times at the College, perhaps on this errand. In 1399 an entry occurs '3s 4d for bread cheese and wine for M. Robert Halome,' and again in summer 1402 '5s 8d about M. Robert Halum.' ⁴ Taxes to the King occur about the same time: Lent 1374 '168 8d' for the tenths granted the King and for an acquittance 2d,' so again in summer 1374 and Henry IV was displeased with the University in 1411, and Prince Henry defended its liberties. Benedict Brente, fellow of Exeter, was one of the proctors who were compelled to resign on this occasion, and committed to the Tower. As soon however as the University could assert its liberty they were re-elected.

Several members of the College were connected with the House of Lancaster. William Palmer was physician to Margaret of Anjou, Walter Lihert her confessor, and promoted by Margaret Beaufort; John Arundel was physician to Henry VI, John Stanbury his confessor. Thomas Wallebene and Robert Gilbert were with Henry V in France. Michael Tregury was chaplain to Henry V, and was made by

A tenth on Wittenham was 32s 2d, winter 1416, and we hear of a tenth and a half in Lent 1417; in Lent 1378 41 [? 31] 4s 10 d is charged for two tenths. The King's tenths are first mentioned Lent 1357 '11d for Cleter's breakfast when he came from Malmesbury with an acquittance for the King's tenths.' In summer 1459 there is a mention of Queen's gold, '12d to M. John Wynterborn public notary for his labour in framing two literas procuratorias for the College; for carrying the two letters committed to M. Gosse to London twice for making an enquiry about a sum in the King's exchequer for Queen's gold . . . ; 26s 8d to John Croke receiver for Margaret Queen of England on account of a fine of twenty marks long ago made with the King for the purchase of lands &c. as is shewn in our letters patent; to John Wylyam our manciple for his expenses going to Coventry on college business and returning 20s.' At this time the Court was at Coventry preparing for the civil war, and Margaret must have been making every effort to procure money. Queen's gold * meant a mark of gold paid to the Queen for every hundred marks of silver paid to the King in the way of fine or other feudal incident, and, even if not recognisable in Domesday, is probably as old as the reign of Henry I. The proportion of gold to silver was one to ten + in the early times, and possibly this proportion was maintained in calculating Queen's gold. A general payment is mentioned Lent 1405 '4s 2a to the King for the rateable proportion of our rents as other Collegers paid.'

Henry VI Rector of the University of Caen 1431 (he had taught there in 1418) during the English rule in Normandy, when Paris remonstrated with Oxford on the unkindness of setting up a rival University against the mother University of Europe (Lyte c. 12). It may have been this connection with the royal family that induced Henry V's executors (one of whom was Edmund Lacy bishop of Exeter) to give the College 50s 8d in winter 1424, and Cardinal Beaufort's executors a larger sum 1. The interest in the French war is shown by such entries as winter 1428 '6d oblation for the Earl of Salisbury,' killed at the siege of Orleans. The pressure of the war is seen in such entries as winter 1433 '16s 8d for 19 bushels of corn taken for the king'; sometimes it was necessary to conciliate the king's officers, summer 1438 '20d gift to the officer who takes corn for the king.' John Hancock was Warden of the College at Ottery when Henry VI visited it in 1452. Sir John Fortescue of Exeter College accompanied Queen Margaret in her exile and wrote his book De Laudibus Legum Angliae for prince Edward. In Lent 1447 'iiiid oblatis in die obitus domini Ducis Glowcestre.' When Peter Courtenay, bishop of Exeter, returned from exile with Henry VII, the College presented him (winter 1485) with 5 yards of Crymosen de grano, which cost £3 6s 8d (Oliver's Bishops 111, W. Antiq. i. 144). William Weye was connected with Henry VI's foundation at Eton, and had special leave from the King to make pilgrimages to Compostella and Jerusalem; and his 'Itineraries' contain curious matter; some of the notices are naive enough, such as that where we say Good Day the Greeks say Kally Merry; is it possible that Weye did not know the classical Greek words?

But now the study of the Classics had begun to replace that of the Scholastic Logic, a change which formed the basis of the modern system of education, and which gave tone and form to European literature ¹. The Grammar Schools, i. e. Schools of Latin, had much influence in developing a classical English prose. The degrees had long been a fiction—no one had been rejected at Paris from 1395 to 1500. Gascoigne p. 3 complains of degrees being given at Oxford to ignorant and vicious persons through the frequent dispensations from statutes granted for money by the Regent Masters and Proctors. Both Universities had declined under Edward IV. Sir Thomas Elyot was not at either (Life ed. Croft p. xxxvii). In 1535 the students were ordered to attend the new classical lectures at Merton ². Only Latin had been required from the clergy, or in fact from any one. Amoretto, in the Return from Parnassus pp. 25, 43, has been at Cambridge, but knows no Greek.

Englishmen had been attracted to Italy by the spell of that new knowledge, which was also the old. There alone were Greek manuscripts and Greek teachers to be found. There each fresh manuscript was a sacred possession, for what treasures of wisdom might it not contain. There the chains fell off their limbs, and they felt themselves freed once and for ever from that barbarous scholastic system, which claimed authority over all knowledge:

'Once remotest nations came
To adore that sacred flame,
When it lit not many a hearth
On this cold and gloomy earth.'

These men returned to make their discoveries known to their countrymen, to their fellow-students in the Universities.

Exeter College is favourably known in connection with these men. William Grocyn taught Greek in the College Hall, and Richard Croke sojourned in the College for some time. We find the College twice entertaining Grocyn's friend Dean Colet. The Cornelius mentioned several times in the Computi was probably Cornelius Vitelli¹, a learned Italian who taught Greek in the University, Lent 1491 '6d for a new lock for the door of the fuel-house of Cornelius, and 3d for a key to his study, 5d for mending the books Pantelon' [p. xxxvii]; summer 1491 '3s 6d to a mason for work on the chambers of M. Thomas Harding of New College, afterwards famous as Bishop Jewel's opponent, had a pupil in the College.

The Customs of the College as written down 20 Dec. 1539 illustrate the state of things; they are as follows:—

Old customs, handed down by men now eighty years old, from still older times. Some of the older ones have a hand drawn against them in the margin (9 and 10).

- 1. The Statutes order the fellows to wear black boots or of some colour akin to it; and priestly dress, i.e. plain shirts, not parted down to the navel, nor with lappets hanging down like promontories, nor plaits round the neck like courtiers.
- 2. Bachelors and scholars (scholastici) coming to the House of God should avoid all noise, stories, bad manners; let them give themselves to prayer, not to books of profane literature, and uncover their heads during service, and stand up to sing Magnificat, Nunc dimittis, Te Deum, Benedictus, but kneel at the Kyrieleson.
- 3. The two junior fellows should alternately guide the singing of the psalms, and the junior should open and arrange the books and, after service, close them and put them back; and, with the bible clerk, deck the alters with a richer covering on solemn feasts, and take it off towards evening; and read the Epistle at masses for the dead.
- 4. Now, since most Masters are in holy orders and prevented by various causes, besides the consecration of the Lord's Body, from being in the choir at the beginning of matins and vespers, we exhort the bachelors to come early and be present when the bell stops, lest waiting for them should prevent the chaplain from celebrating mass and cause others not to celebrate or to go away.
- 5. Bachelors should frequent the public musaeum or library and, after the octaves of S. Dennis, stay there every night from 6 to 8, studying good books, especially of logic and philosophy, unless the Rector thinks good to intermit it owing to excessive cold, or relax it to refresh their minds; and they shall observe this rule to Sexagesima, and this shall hold also of the longer disputations.

- 6. Bachelors should accustom themselves to public lectures and sophisms, either at Harthall, or any other place they may prefer.
- 7. All fellows leading the life of scholars, that they may the sooner acquire learning, according to Walter Stapeldon's statutes, should attend public lectures at Harthall; and, since logic lectures profit little unless there is constant practice in disputations, they should attend the Sophisms and Variations kept up there with such care, and if they do not, the Principal or his deputy shall punish them, and report defaulters to the Rector for severer chastisement. The same holds of the battellars.
- 8. Bachelors should not be too familiar with Masters and should respect their higher degree. If any bachelor shares the Rector's dish at dinner or supper, let him eat with his head uncovered.
- 9. The Rector and fellows feed those in the prison once a week at an expense of 4d, on such food as will feed many of them.
- 10. Old fellows are entertained thrice at the College expense by the Rector or his deputy.
- 11. No one is to rise from dinner till the Rector has said Grace, except for good cause, approved by the Rector.
- 12. No one is to enter the buttery or take anything, without the presence and leave of the Bookkeeper, Bible-clerk or Manciple.
- 13. Scholars are to walk about with uncovered heads within the Academy, until they are bachelors and have determined in Lent.
- 14. Every fellow is to wear the dress of his degree at sermons in S. Mary's and at theological disputations.
- 15. Bachelors should have gowns reaching down to the knees, till they take their Master's degree.

The College as a whole sided with the opposition to Henry VIII's measures, as did the West of England, from which so many of its members came. John Moremán in particular, Vicar of Menheniot, was an opponent of Queen Catherine's divorce, and was imprisoned in Edward VI's reign. One demand of the Cornish insurgents in 1549 runs thus, 'We will have Dr. Moreman and Dr. Crispin, which hold our opinions, to be safely sent unto us, and to them we require the King's Majesty to give some certain livings to preach among us our Catholic faith.' Moreman was distinguished in the Convocation of 1553. He was also famous in the west as a schoolmaster. John Hooker of Exeter, the antiquary, was brought up under him and praises the goodness of his disposition. At his living of Menheniot he taught the Creed, Lord's Prayer, and Commandments in English, the people hitherto using only the Cornish language. This was probably in obedience to Cromwell's Injunctions of 1536 'to cause their people to learn the Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments in the vulgar tongue, and to give them plain instructions upon these,' and the similar Injunctions of 1538 and 15471. Cornish plays were still acted in regular amphitheatres, of which there are even now some remains at S. Just near the Land's End and at Perranzabulo. These plays 2 were probably written by ecclesiastics, and the names of places mentioned in them seem to point to the monastery of Glasney near Penryn (founded by Walter Bronescombe bishop of Exeter 1264-7 for thirteen canons and thirteen vicars) as the place where most of the writers resided. John de Landreyn fellow of Exeter was canon of Glasney 1376, William Noe canon 1413; Walter Trengoff was Provost of Glasney 1427-36, and Michael Trewynard and John Evelyn Provosts later on in the century. These University men may have had something to do with the composition of these dramas, in which more art is used in continuing the series of events than we find in the Townley, Chester, and Coventry Mysteries, the contemporary English collections. Norden, writing about 1584, says that 'of late the Cornishe men have much conformed themselves to the use of the Englishe tongue; from Truro Eastwarde it is in manner wholy Englishe.' But as late as 1640 the aged inhabitants of S. Feock, a church attached to Glasney, required the sacrament to be administered to them in the Cornish tongue, and the formula used for this purpose has been preserved 3. One of the Cornish dramas written by William Jordan was translated into English 'by Mr. John Keigwin of Moushole of the Lower House at the request of the right reverend father in God

Jonathan Lord Bishop of Exon 1697.' Two of the Provosts, John Nans and Alexander Penkyll were successively Rectors of Camborne, and one of the plays is on the subject of S. The Valor Ecclesiasticus of 1535-6 gives the revenues of the College as only £83 2s, out of which the Rector and Chaplain have each £4 4d, thirteen Fellows £3 10s 4d each 1. In 1522 a forced Moore 17s, of Fulk Bowcher and Elizabeth his wife 5s, of William Palmer 5s, of Robert Lidford 5s, of Henry Webber 5s, of Roger Keys 5s, of Nicholas Gosse 13s 4d, of Thomas Carewe 5s, of John Polyng 7s 6d, of Cardinal Beaufort 5s 2d, of the Founder 6s, of Bishop Stafford and Richard Graynfield 5s 2d, of John Kyrkham 15s; for daily mass, &c., 52s, to a parish clerk 3s 2d, to the crier for the dead 2s. The total £11 15s, with the previous deductions of 14s and 23s, makes £13 12s. Deducting this from £83 2s we have £69 10s, part of which is thus distributed:—The Rector and Chaplain have each £4 4d, thirteen Fellows £3 10s 4d each—total £53 15s. The Rector and Fellows petition that the present allowances may be continued, viz.: to the barber 10s, laundress 13s 4d, cook 13s 4d, manciple £3 6s 8d, three servientes £5 4s, manciple 34s 8d; in oblations 25 8d, to the friars 25 4d, in chapel expenses £3, in cloths and cups &c. 40s, to the Rector 20s, to the Fellows £6 10s—and 50s for visiting their friends; to seneschal and bailiffs, &c. £3: the total being £30 7s.' Part of these payments came from room rents, &c.

In 1524 Nicholas the cook, rated at 20s, paid 4d subsidy to the King, O. H. S. xvi. 69, see Mullinger i. 551.

That the proclamations of 1534 and 1539 about the names of the Pope and of S. Thomas of Canterbury were obeyed is proved by the erasures in the College copy of the Sarum Breviary ¹ printed by Chevallon and Regnault in 1531 at Paris, one of the six surviving copies.

The College also possesses nine other Sarum books of various kinds. The destruction of Service Books at the time of the Reformation was perhaps not so extensive as is usually supposed. A far more complete destruction fell on the Protestant Service Books and Bibles in Mary's reign. The Library has only two copies of Tyndale's New Testament, No. 3 and No. 5 in Mr. Fry's list¹, and of the latter only two other copies are known.

The notices in the Computi about the changes made in the services are very curious and interesting: 1547 '20d for a book of homilies and the Royal Injunctions, 13s 4d for the Old and New Testament in English,' 1548 '4d for two books of the Administration of the Communion of the Lord's Body and Blood, 5s 8d for Erasmus' Paraphrases in English for Long Wytnam,' 1549 '13s to M. Whetcomb for replacing in the library a book of the Old and New Testament in Latin, 10s for two books of public Prayers issued by the King's order, 3s 4d to dominus Capell for twice writing out the King's Injunctions and some other things for the use of the College, 10d for a New Testament for the use of the Hall (received £16 7s 1d for a cross and pix and other ornaments used in the Chapel), 4s for two books for singing the psalms in English,' 1550 '(received 10s from M. In 1550 the Library had been 'purged' of obnoxious books and some were burnt in the Market place (Gutch ii. 167; Hist. Com. ii. 127, Dixon iii. 109). On 6 Ap. 1560 Elizabeth authorized the Colleges to use the Latin prayers, which she had directed her printer Wolf to

In 1547 a Devonshire fellowship was given to Maurice Ley an Irishman, for Dr. Cox the chief of the Royal Visitors² was pressing every College to take one Irish fellow for the benefit of Ireland and to strengthen the English Church there, but Ley soon vacated and the plan seems not to have been further carried out. The annual election of Rectors now came to an end. William More was continued in office by Edward VI's Visitors, but his term of office ceased abruptly at Mary's accession³, when the Queen's Visitors put a medical fellow, William Corindon, in his place. Some other fellows vacated this same year, such as Richard Tremayne, well known as a preacher, who fled to Germany. In 1554 the Doctors met at Exeter before disputing with Cranmer and Ridley⁴. Men had not yet taken their sides definitely in the great religious strife, and most adhered to the National

Church, hoping that some moderate compromise would be ultimately possible. The Register says, 28 July 1556, 'John Nele and Thomas Pynche were excused from visiting their friends as probationers were wont to do, because Cardinal Pole the Visitor prohibited any one being absent at the time of his Visitation 1; they were however to carry out the usual custom next year.' John Fessarde one of the fellows was probably a leading man, as he was appointed by Mary to preach through the diocese of Salisbury during the vacancy of the see. We also hear of William Cholwell 'who (Fasti a. 1555), being learned and a zealous man for the Roman Catholic cause, was designed by certain of the Queen's Commissioners, 24 Ap. 1554, to preach concerning various matters which were controverted in Queen Mary's reign.' He was perhaps the 'honest and religious teacher who virtuously trained up many of the best gentlemen's sons of Devon and Cornwall at Thomasine Percival's free school of Week S. Mary (Carew's Cornwall, ed. 1810, p. 282). But in Elizabeth's time the state of things altered, the Council of Trent made compromise impossible. John Neale, the first perpetual Rector was deprived by the Queen's Visitors for refusing to appear at service in the Chapel. In 1570 William Wyot was imprisoned in the Castle, and in Bokardo from 10 Jan. to Good Friday, for refusing to declare what Papists he knew to be in the College². Romanism was still strong in Devon and Cornwall, whence so many of the members of the College came. In 1579 Strype³ reports that at the Visitation of 1578-9 'in Exeter College of eighty were found but four obedient subjects, all the rest secret or open Roman affectionaries, and particularly one Savage of that house, a most earnest defender of the Pope's bull and excommunication of the Queen. These were chiefly such as came out of the western parts, where popery greatly prevailed and the gentry bred up in that religion.' Thomas Percy, afterwards one of the conspirators in the Gunpowder; plot, was sojourning in the College 5 June 1579, 'not then of lawful age to take an oath.' Robert Yendall, Vicar of the College living of Menheniot, was one of those who abandoned their livings in 1559. He 'fled from the river of Exemouth to Morlaix in Brittany. Smart, a prebendary of Exeter, went with him.' Edward Risdon¹ too was 'very instrumental in the foundation of Douay College in 1568.' In the list of matriculations 1575, there are some well-known names, such as that of William Baldwin the Jesuit; Edward Habington, executed 1586, and possibly William Habington the poet lover of Castara.

When things became more settled under Elizabeth, there was a revival of activity in the University, some new colleges were founded, some old ones improved. Trinity had already been founded by Sir Thomas Pope in 1554 and S. John's by Sir Thomas White the next year. Elizabeth founded Jesus in 1571, and Nicholas Wadham was preparing to found Wadham, though the design was not fully carried out till after his death by his widow Dorothy daughter of Sir William Petre. Petre had led the way by what was almost equivalent to refounding Exeter College in 1564, when an entry occurs in the accounts, '14d for wine and sugar at the reception of M. Wodward 2 with whom we talked over the plan and design of Sir William Petre' (domini doctoris Peter). Sir William³ was educated at Exeter College, became a fellow of All Souls in 1523, and was Principal of Peckwater's Inn or Vine Hall. He resided long in France and owed something to his training abroad; when a document was to be translated into foreign languages, he and Wotton were looked on as the proper persons to do it 4. He had been seven times ambassador in foreign countries. Long afterwards we find him commissioning

Wotton to get him books from abroad 1. Wotton writes in 1553 from La Ferté Milon that he sends him some books, and had it not been that the prevalence of the plague in that city prevented his going to Paris he would have sent some more, but he trusts to a future occasion. If he has not the Lord Winchester's book called Marcus Anthonius Constantinus (Gardiner's Confutatio Cavillationum, i.e. reply to Cranmer's answer to the Explication and Assent of the true Catholic Faith), it shall be sent to him; and again from Paris, in 1554, that he has purchased for Petre the new old Pandects of Florence and shall bring them home with him; should he wish for any other book let him mention it in his next and he will do the best he can to procure it. Petre wished Wotton to succeed him as Secretary of State, and Wotton writes in 1556 that as for Petre's office, knowing the weakness of his body and the pains and travail he has sustained therein already, he cannot but think he does well to leave it. And because this office is so easy and pleasant and Wotton so meet a man for it, Petre may be assured that he must needs thank him as much as the thing deserves, that would wish him to it. 'I am now so broken through age since my coming hither that you shall not know me when you see me. And therefore it is time for me to get me into a corner and take me to my beads and to remember that we have not here permanentem civitatem and therefore to begin to put on my boots and prepare myself to go to the other place where we look for rest.' Petre was Secretary of State during the reigns of the four Tudor sovereigns. He was already a prominent man under Henry VIII, at first 1538 as Clerk in Chancery 2 and then as Secretary of State, in which capacity he was one of the special council assigned to help Queen Katherine (Parr) in 1544, when Henry left her Regent during his absence in France. He was one of the Ten Visitors of the University in 1549. On one occasion he presided in Convocation on behalf of the Royal Vicegerent Cromwell, who had in fact first brought him forward 3. He was one of the twelve councillors of Edward VI named by Henry VIII; and fought for Mary against the party which was trying to upset Henry VIII's Act of Succession passed in favor of Mary and Elizabeth. Wotton applies to him to intercede for some of his relations who had joined the rebels 1. It was Petre who advised Mary to forbid the legate entering England, who was sent by the Pope to remove Cardinal Pole. He was an excellent diplomatist and, though he said little during an interview, was an attentive observer of his sovereign's interest. Ah (said Chatillon at Boulogne), we had gained the last two hundred thousand crowns without hostages, had it not been for that man who said nothing. This was Sir William Petre. He ceased to be Secretary in 1557, but a state document written by him occurs as late as 24 Feb. 156 $\frac{5}{6}$, and he was Chancellor of the order of the Garter from that year to his death 13 Jan. 1572. Latterly he suffered much from illness. Peter Vannes writes to him from Venice 10 Oct. 1556 that he is sorry to hear that Petre is somewhat troubled with a spice of the strangolione (quinsey), that he does not know the peculiarities of it, but intending to go to Padua within three days will consult with his friends as to the kind of remedy most propice for him. On 19 July 1560 Petre writes to Cecil that the Queen is minded to begin a progress toward Portsmouth: he wishes much that Cecil would come before her remove, for that he is unable to follow except in a litter, and that not without danger and pain. Petre held some of the Abbey lands, about which Sir Edward Carne writes from Rome 28 July 1555 'Petre's matter is in the hands of the Datary, who has promised favour in all Carne's suits. Had delivered the book to one of experience here to draw a minute thereof. doubt whether he had all again or no; for if the beginning of the book be "Manerium de Ging ad Petram alias Ging Abbatisse alias dictum Ingatstone in comitatu predicto" with the word "Essex" in the margin, thinks he has all; if that be not the beginning of Petre's book he does lack. Has in all 12 manors, one farm called Salmons and Barowse, and three parsonages, so that he has but 16 pieces in all if that be the whole. If that be the whole he has enough; if it be not, requests Petre will send it him in a little bill.' The endowment of Exeter College however came from some lands which Petre purchased of the Queen for the purpose², viz.: the Rectory and Vicarage of

Kidlington, the Rectory and advowson of Merton, and of South Newington, and the Rectory of Ardington (Yarnton), some lands in Little Tewe once belonging to Osney Abbey, and some land in Garsington (all in Oxfordshire), together with land at Tintinhull in Somerset. The Vicarage of Kidlington had belonged to Osney, and was now transferred to the College together with the Rectory, by an exception to the usual rule about vicarages. It was annexed to the Rectorship of Exeter College, the Rector holding it without institution1. This arrangement is expressly noticed in the statute 12 Charles II cap. 17, sect. 23. Petre settled £79 12s 2d per annum on the College to found seven fellowships, and for the eighth £5 2s and an annual income to the House fund of £11 8s $1\frac{1}{4}d$, in all £96 1s $3\frac{1}{4}d$ (the revenues of the old foundation were valued in 26 Henry VIII at £83 2s, besides the valuable ground on which the College stood); he left the College £40 by will, and his wife Anne left the same amount. His son John Lord Petre, besides a legacy of £20, gave from himself, his mother, and some friends £15 6s 8d to augment the old fellowships and make them all equal; this annual rent was bought at Mich. 1572 of M. Phylpotte by the College. The Petrean foundation in all was reckoned to be worth £111 7s 1114d. Sir William reserved to himself and his son the nomination of the Petrean fellows. Afterwards the College was to elect from the counties in which his family held property. These counties were originally Devon, Somerset, Dorset, Oxford and Essex, but before the alteration in 1854 there had been added to them Yorkshire, Lancashire, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridge (including the Isle of Ely), Kent, Middlesex, Hampshire, Northants, Cheshire, Cornwall, Surrey; though the counties italicised had lost their claim by Lord Petre ceasing to hold land in them 2.

² As to Lancashire men being eligible see case of Rev. Daniel Mathias of Brasenose in Reg. 1792; in 1824 counsel's opinion was taken about the Petrean

Queen Elizabeth's grant of Kidlington 1, &c., ran thus: Elizabeth &c., Whereas our brother Edward 6 by letters patent dated 4 Jan. 1 Edw. 6 [1548] to-farm-let to Richard Taverner the Rectory and mansion of Cudlington upon the Greene with buildings tithes &c. (after the end of the estate of Robert Saunders), for 21 years at a rent of £20; and whereas we by letters patent dated 19 Feb. 7 Eliz. [1565] have to farm let to Thomas Frauncis the reversion of the said Rectory &c. (after Taverner's lease), for 30 years at a rent of £20; and whereas we by letters patent dated 24 Nov. 7 Eliz. [1564] to farm let to John Chamberlin 2 messuages and 4 virgates of land in Thorpe, (Thrup, then occupied by Humphry Wells), for 21 years from the previous Michaelmas at a rent of 53s 4d; and whereas our brother Edward by letters patent dated 21 Dec. 5 Edw. 6 [1551] to-farm-let to George Owen Esq. the Rectory of Ardington &c. (then occupied by Richard Andrewes, previously belonging to the monastery of Ensham), reserving the timber, for 21 years from the following Michaelmas at a rent of £7: Know ye that we, for a sum of £1376 IIs $4\frac{1}{2}d$ from Sir William Petre, grant the said Sir W. Petre the reversion of the Rectory of Cudlington and the rent of £20; and the reversion of the 2 messuages with 4 virgates &c. and the rent of 53s 4d; and the reversion of the Rectory of Ardington &c. and the qualifications. As to Hampshire and Middlesex see Reg. 1827, p. 116. Old List a. 1724 'Pitt and Scott, both of Dorset, were elected to Petrean fellowships. I doubt whether ever any Dorset men have been elected as of the old diocese of Sarum since the Renovation under Elizabeth's Charter, or whether they are at all eligible since Sir W. Petre's new code and giving a participation of his 8 fellowships to Dorset, which was then and long before in the diocese of Bristol.' Joseph Rosdew in 1827 presented Ashfield (3 a. 2 r. 3 p.) in Tangley near Andover to Lord Petre, as a qualification for Hants, and Lord Petre gave the College a lease of it for 100 years on receiving annually a copy of the University Calendar. In 1834 Richard Martin procured the admission of Kent, by buying 4 acres of land in the village of Dunkirk near Faversham and conveying them to Lord Petre, who leased the land to the College on an annual payment of an Oxford Almanac. In 1839 W. Falconer admitted Cheshire by conveying to Lord Petre a small incorporeal hereditament, a rent charge of ios on an estate called Leighton Hall in Nantwich. In 1847 J. P. Lightfoot admitted Northants by conveying to Lord Petre some ground in the village of Wootton lying across the road on the west side of the parsonage. The same year, 1847, some land was given by a committee of Cornish gentlemen, through the Rev. David Jenkins, to qualify natives of Cornwall. In 1848 Mr. Robert Hichens similarly qualified natives of Surrey.

Sir W. Petre's general deed of gift is as follows:

Sciant &c. that I William Petre &c. have given (after obtaining the Queen's licence) to the Rector and Scholars of Exeter College, the Rectory of Cudlington upon the Greene, Oxon, and the mansion house of the Rectory together with the buildings tithes oblations &c., all which lately belonged to Christ Church &c., and was occupied by Richard Taverner; also the Vicarage of Cudlington wth the buildings tithes oblations &c. lately occupied by Lawrence Atkinson; the Rectory of Meryton with the tithes oblations &c. lately occupied by Richard Gunter; the Rectory of Ardington with the tithes &c. lately occupied by George Owen Esq. (Meryton and Ardington were once granted to Cardinal Reginald Pole); also my messuages lands &c. in Little Tewe, Oxon lately occupied by William Rainsford; the Rectory of South Neweton, Oxon with the lands tithes oblations &c. lately occupied by George Gifford (previously belonging to Christ Church &c. and then to Cardinal Pole). All which rectories &c. Queen Elizabeth gave me by Letters Patent dated Westminster 18 May 7 Eliz. [1565]. I have also given them my messuage &c. in Garsington 2 lately occupied by Thomas Burges alias Smith and Agnes his wife, previously belonging

I have also given them my annual rent of £5 from the lands &c. of William Babington 1 Esq. in Nether Cuddington or Kiddington, Oxon and in Over Kiddington, Nether Kiddington, Asterley and Glimpton. I have also given them my messuage in Tyntenhull and burgage in Mountague, Somerset, both which I purchased of John Hayter and Agnes his wife daughter and heir of Robert Stacy of Tintenhull by deed dated 30 Nov. 4 and 5 Philip and Mary [1557]. And I have made Philip Huckle and John Hourd my attorneys to give seisin of all these to the Rector and Scholars. Dated at Ging Petre [Ingatestone, Essex] 8 Nov. 8 Eliz. 1566.

The following clause occurs in Sir W. Petre's Indented Articles² with the College 8 Nov. 8 Eliz.: 'Item that the Vicarage of Cudlington on the Grene, parcel of the premises granted unto the said Rector and Scholars, and their successors, shall be unto John Neale, now Rector of the said College, during only the time he shall continue Rector, and to his successors, Rectors of the said College for the time being; he the said John Neale, and his successors, Rectors there, allowing and paying yearly unto the said College, to the uses set forth in these presents, the sum of £7 6s $o_1^1 d^3$ at the feasts of S. Michael and the Annunciation by equal portions; and seeing the Cure of the said parish to be served at his the said Rector's and his successors' costs and charges; and seeing the people of the said parish to be well instructed and taught, and keeping all manner of reparations of the Vicarage house, and all other houses thereto belonging, at the cost and charge of the same Rector for the time being; and suffering the scholars of the said College, in time of sickness in Oxford, freely to have the use of the said Vicarage house during the time of the said sickness.' This was by no means a useless permission when Oxford suffered from outbreaks of plague and sickness of all kinds. There were at least 12 such outbreaks in Henry VIII's reign, and a great mortality, especially in the sweating sickness of 1528. Oxford suffered much from plagues all through the middle ages. A number of deaths are mentioned in the Computus of autumn 1407. Autumn 1518 'xxis vid pro comunis Rectoris, Moreman, Waryn, Wyllugby, Chappell Existencium in patria, tempore pestilencie urgente.' The sweating sickness was very fatal in 1485-6, 1489, 1493, 1499-1500, 1503 ¹. In 1563 the plague prevented the election of a Rector and the audit of the accounts, and we hear several times of the University being dispersed and one or two fellows only being left in charge of the College.

For the Black Assize of 1577 see Wood's City i. 269, Boase's Oxford 130; Reg. 21 July 1577, 'morbi πανδημου, et contagione sua inficientis, natura et vi consideratis, Rectoris et maioris partis eorum qui domi erant consensu, facta omnibus tum Rectori tum Scholaribus potestas est rus proficiscendi et ab Academia discedendi ad vigiliam Omnium Sanctorum inclusive excepto Edmundo Lewkenor subrectore, Petro Randall et Jo.. The plague had been severe in 1575 when Westlake, Sympson, and Carpenter were left in charge of the College; in 1582 it raged 'in duabus aedibus pro foribus Collegii.' Elizabeth's Charter of Incorporation is dated 22 Mch 15661. She empowered William Alley bishop of Exeter to draw up new Statutes² for the College with the advice and consent of Sir William Petre. Under these statutes the Rector was to be at least a Master of Arts and thirty years of age, but not a bishop 3; and no one was to be elected a Fellow who had more than ten marks of inheritance or life interest. The day of election was 30 June, the morrow of S. Peter and S. Paul. The Subrector was to preside at the disputations in theology, the Dean to preside at the classical and philosophical disputations of the bachelors twice a week, to lecture on logic to the students (scholastici) and hear them dispute in logic daily, and require logic repetitions from them thrice a week—but the Dean might pay a bachelor to do his work. He was himself paid by the fees which he received on presenting men for the degree of B.A. or M.A., and by payments of eightpence a quarter from the commensales and battellarii who attended his logic lecture. He might punish a bachelor by setting him a literary task, or making him dine apart on short commons. Great stress is laid on the public disputations in Hall, on subjects of logic, natural philosophy, metaphysics, or moral philosophy. The discussions lasted for two hours on the written questions that had been proposed, but on feast days or for special reasons the Dean might limit them to one hour. The fellows who were studying theology were to dispute in the chapel on theology once a week in full term, except in Lent. There is a special arrangement for times of pestilence. Logic lectures 4 were given from 6 to 7 in the morning, logical disputations held from 10 to 11 and from 6 to 7 in the evening, repetitions from 3 to 4 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The time was reckoned by a waterclock. The usual hour for supper was then at 5 o'clock; dinner had been moved on from 10 to 11 or 12 in the Tudor age¹. Even in 1760 some people still dined at half-past 12.

Fellows elected before taking their B.A. degree were not to take it till 3 years after their election; a rule not altered until 1854. Masters of Arts, after completing their necessary Regency were to study theology and take their B.D. in ten years from their Regency, and D.D. within eight years afterwards-but this last rule might be dispensed with by the Rector and majority of Fellows. Any one who did not take these degrees within four months after the periods named was to be deprived within the next month. When at a much later period the University decreed that no one who was not in Orders should take the B.D., this rule had the effect of forcing the Fellows to take Orders within ten years and four months from their Regency 2. A fellowship was vacated at once by marriage³ or entry into an employment incompatible with residence; and vacated within a year by accession to an inheritance, canonry, or life-income of ten marks a year: if a Fellow took a living worth £8 in the King's Books he vacated within a year unless he resigned the living within that year.

² Gutch ii. 260, iii. 422, Ayliffe i. 468, ii. 129, Laud's Chancellorship 24, 28, 29, Burrows 352-3. In Colleges which wished to enforce Orders, this was added to the rules about B.D. and D.D., S. John's Statutes pp. 59, 61. In 1594 an order was made that a B.D. must study two years before his grace was propounded: see under 1778. Laud's Statutes of 1634 required disputations and a Latin sermon, the preacher to be in deacon's orders at least. But by custom the Vice-chancellor dispensed with those exercises once a year, and also in favour of the proctors, relieving one of them from the disputations, the other from the sermon. The requirement of a sermon before D.D. is very ancient. In the middle ages some of the greatest theologians were not ordained; and many friars preached who were not in orders; ordination was not made an absolute requisite for preaching till after the Reformation. The Latin sermons at S. Mary's were treated as a divinity exercise of the present day is, only the Vice-chancellor proctors and bedels attending, and there was no public notice. The hour was 9 in the morning. In May 1833. they were abolished, but the candidate was required to show that he was in deacon's orders. A statute of the next month, June 1833, required priest's orders. I owe great part of this note to Dr. Griffiths. Holwell took his B.D. 1790 though not in Orders.

The Rector might hold one living, but only on condition of continued residence in College—and an Ordinance of John Lord Petre allowed him to hold two livings on the same condition, of whatever value they might be, so far as the laws of the land would allow. As the value of money altered these conditions were relaxed. In 1744 Edward Morshead, who was 'seised of a real estate of £10 or £11 per annum,' took a fellowship on the ground that, owing to the altered value of money, this was much below the 10 marks mentioned in the statutes. On 15 Sep. 1758 the Visitor permitted a living worth £80 to be held with a fellowship: and 5 Dec. 1793 other property amounting to £40: on 13 Mch 1804 he increased the limit of £80 to £120 clear value, and on 4 Jan. 1810 that of other property to £100 (i. e. 15 times the value of the old 10 marks; Burrows' All Souls 27, Letters from Bodleian i. 150; Wordsworth 569 'in 1718 £20 or £30 a year with a fellowship made a pretty easy subsistence'). Any living might be held, if in Oxford. The case of the altered value of money is well stated in Bishop Fleetwood's Chronicon Preciosum 1706 and 80 1747 with reference to fellowships at All Souls, where the limit was £5. He notices that even the cost of taking a degree had increased fivefold since the middle of the fifteenth century. Another Visitor's decree decides that when three or four Fellows demand a College meeting, the Rector is bound to summon one, and to propose any question which two or more Fellows demand to have put to the vote, and the meeting is not to dissolve till a decision has been come to. All residents were allowed, besides decrements, twelvepence a week for commons 1, which was to be made up to eighteenpence on five festival weeks. The Rector's stipend was to be 20s, that of the Chaplain 26s 8d, of the Fellows 10s each. There are regulations about dress² and about not entering the Buttery without leave, and all gaming is forbidden—except that at the usual festival times, All Saints day, Christmas and Candlemas, the fellows might play pictis cartis vulgo cards in hall at proper hours and for a moderate sum. Latimer's famous 'Sermons on the Card' delivered on the Sunday before Christmas had a special relevancy to the approaching season 1. Shooting inside the College is forbidden, and no one may keep hunting dogs, ferrets, rabbits, hares or hawks within the precincts 2. The Bible was to be read during meals 3 in Hall, and no one was to talk while the appointed portion of Scripture was being read; afterwards they might talk in Latin or Greek but not in English—except on great feasts or unless strangers were present or there was some other reasonable cause such as College business. The battellars were to talk Latin and Greek always while in College unless they were excused for lawful reasons4. Nowadays any one who quotes Latin in a College Hall at dinner-time is liable to be sconced. The Fellows sat in messes, four to a dish, and only Masters of Arts might sit at their table unless the Rector and five seniors gave permission to some one else. Lever, the Master of S. John's at Cambridge, in 1550 describes 5 his scholars as going to dinner at ten o'clock, content with a penny piece of beef [about 2 lbs.] among four, having a little porage made of the broth of the same beef, with salt and oatmeal, and nothing else. 'After dinner they be either teaching or learning until five of the clock in the evening, when as they have a supper not much better than their dinner. Immediately after the which, they go either to reasoning in problems or unto some other study, until it be nine or ten of the clock, and then being without fire are fain to walk or run up and down, to get a heat in their feet when they go to bed.' Lady Mildred Burleigh 'gave a some of money to the Master of S. John's, to procure to have fyres in the hall upon all sondays and hollydays between the fest of All Sayntes and Candlemas, whan ther war no ordinary fyres of the charge of the colledg.' Every one was to pay what he owed to the College within three weeks from the end of Term 1. There were to be three copies of the statutes kept, one by the Rector, one in the Common Chest, and one chained up in the Library, and the statutes were to be read aloud twice a year in Chapel at 8 o'clock in the morning, and any fellow not attending lost a fortnight's commons. This custom of reading the statutes lasted down to our own time. The gates were to be locked at a quarter past nine in the evening and not opened again till five in the morning without leave of the Rector, to whose bedroom the keys were carried; and there are heavy penalties against sleeping out or scaling the College walls. The Domains of the College may be leased out, but not complete manors; and there are to be no reversionary leases at all, and no leases of any kind for more than 20 years; tithes or rectories are only to be let for 10 years, and no Fellow is to take a lease of the College. We see the reason for this in the leases for 41, 50, or 63 years mentioned below as given to Fellows in 1549 and 1559¹. Reasonable fines might be taken, and the system of fines went on to our own days. A progress was to be made every three years to visit the College estates, situated not more than 40 miles from Oxford, by the Rector and one Fellow. The statutes end with a description of the duties of the Visitor, and the mode of removing the Rector or any Fellow.

² A college rule of 1554 shows that the men went bareheaded usually; 11 Oct. 1554 'Et si multis transactis annis consuetudo fuerit prescripta scolaribus ut non velato nec in collegio nec in oppido incederent capite, tamen diversis de causis nobis visum est ipsis concedere ut in oppido pileis uti possint, hac lege ut in collegio veteri non sint liberi consuetudine.' Bloxam i. p. iv.

By a later Ordinance² a Fellow was to be allowed, if Lord Petre approved, to travel for four years to study medicine or civil law, and this valuable rule was often acted on, the earliest instance being that of Thomas Fortescue in 1566. Sometimes permission of absence was given to Fellows engaged in the service of the Crown abroad (compare Pembroke Statutes p. 20; so at Wadham, Jackson's Wadham 63). The influx of new Fellows seems to have incited those of the old foundation to draw up a list of the Fellows from the beginning; and such a list, though very imperfect, was compiled by Robert Newton the Rector and William Wiott the Subrector in 1574. Seven Petrean Fellows were named by Sir William Petre soon after Whitsuntide 1566 and admitted on the 30 June (except Spicer, who was admitted 2 July), and an eighth was appointed by Petre in 1568 after his new gift of three tenements to the College. One of the new Fellows had been a Fellow of S. John's, another was incorporated at Oxford for the purpose of taking the Fellowship, the first named had been a Fellow of the College previously. It shows the unsettled state of men's minds that several of the early Petrean Fellows left the country and became Roman missionaries in England or abroad. John Howlett laboured in Transylvania and at Wilna, Ralph Sherwine was hanged by the side of Campian 20 Nov. 1581, John Cornelius was hanged at Dorchester 4 July 1504; Richard Bristowe became President of Douay, and was the chief of the translators who put forth the Douay Bible. 'These thine unnaturall sons,' says G. Hakewill in his address to Oxford, 'who

² Sir William Petre and his successors are to have the right of nominating two fellows, one of the old foundation and one of the Petrean, 'who are to have full power to absent themselves from College without loss or detriment, and to travel into foreign parts, there to remain for four years so that during that time they resort to some University and therein apply themselves to the study of Physic or Civil Law.' The Government interfered to secure a safer state of things, and Thomas Glasier of Christ Church was elected Petrean Fellow 4 Oct. 1578, on pressing letters from Sir John Petre, and Rector on the 21st. The Royal Commissioners had held a Visitation of the College on the previous 2 August 'in sacello horam circiter octavam,' and this was the result of their inquiry. On 30 Aug. they removed Carter and Cliffe for a time (Bellott and Dun being elected Sub-rector and Dean in their place), and expelled Cornelius 'for his demerits.' Rector Newton resigned in Oct. 1578, and Glasier was elected in his stead. Thomas Holland was similarly brought in as Rector in 1592 on Glasier's death 1, on Sir John Petre's and Queen

Elizabeth's recommendation: he was one of the translators of the Bible appointed by James I. These able rulers soon worked a great change, and Exeter became remarkable for its discipline and learning, tinged by Puritan views. The state of education had not been good in Oxford for some time; see Pocock's Burnet vi. 405 (letter of Jewel), 410, 434. William Turner's Herbal, Cologne 1561, in the dedication to Elizabeth mentions the low ebb to which the study of botany had sunk in the Universities and in England generally. We now find many donations of books to the Library.

Leicester as Chancellor enforced subscription to the Thirty-nine Articles in 1581 to exclude Romanists or Romanisers; James I in 1616-7 to the 3 articles of the 36th Canon of 1603 to exclude Puritans. By the 33rd Canon it was a title for Orders if a man was a Fellow, or an M.A. of 5 years' standing 'that liveth of his own charge in either of the Universities.'

In 1592, when Elizabeth came to see the amendment in learning and manners, the old rents of the Colleges were taxed, to entertain the Queen, at one per cent. Exeter was rated at a total of £200, the Rectorship was worth £70, the whole annual income £600, there were 30 commoners 1 . There were feasts at degrees and at elections 2 . The constant mention of poverty at this time may be partly due to the fact that the value of silver fell during Elizabeth's reign.

In 1572 we find a list of the members of the College, but without their Christian names. Besides the Rector and 20 fellows, 91 other names occur, including 3 masters, bachelors, undergraduates, servitors and servants. Some can be identified in the matriculation lists (printed ed. i. p. 185 in the order of the MS.), since Davells, Banfilde, Evelighe, Strete, Barret, Merser, Zewarde, Coode, Bawden, Davie, West, Foxwell, Sandwithe, Turner, Crandon occur in both lists nearly in this order. See Clark i. 389-91, ii. 32, 63. The list runs thus:—Mr Newton rector, Wyot subrector, Smale, Paynter, Bearblocke, Westlake, Lewkenar, Carter, Randall, Symson, Batshyll, Leache, Brystowe, Raynolds, Batte, Sherwin, Carpenter, Cliffe, Hole, Donne, xxxiiis iiiid. The Inventory of goods and chattels amounts to £184 5s 2d. A few of the administrator's payments were not allowed.

Very few of these men went on to the degree of B.A. Originally the fellows were the only members of the College. But as the College grew in size and the number of rooms increased, it was natural to let them out to other members of the University, or to wealthy clergymen and abbots who preferred living in University society to residing on their livings. This system of non-residence was very prevalent from the Middle Ages down to the present century, notwithstanding Acts of Parliament, the protests of the Puritans, and the efforts of Laud and others to check it. Gradually ordinary undergraduates were admitted as well. These sojourners, or commoners, either had a table of their own, or dined with the fellows at the High Table, the latter being called in later times fellowcommoners; they were all called commensales, and all had the regular commons or weekly allowance. Besides this each of the fellows was allowed to introduce a poor scholar, or servitor, who waited on him, and had his food and education gratis or nearly so. Intermediate ranks occur. Thus the battellars were below the commoners but above the servitors, and did not have the full commons, but smaller allowances for which they paid a special battels, i.e. account. It is a mere guess that the word battels means 'little bats,' i.e. the tallies or notched sticks on which the accounts were kept. One of these tallies still exists in a chest of the muniment room.

distinction between these classes is marked by the different amount of Caution money they paid. Thus a fellow-commoner paid in 1629 £6, an ordinary commoner or sojourner £5, a battellar £4, a poor scholar £2. In the second Caution book 1686 poor scholars are raised to £3, and the figures 6, 5, 4, 3 altered, in a later hand, to 8, 7, 6, 4; but £3 occurs as late as 1726. A few were excused paying Caution altogether, and their names do not appear in the Caution books at all. A poor scholar paid 8d a term for his cubicle, while the rent of the better rooms was 2s 8d, while a Prior of Bodmin would pay 5s, and a few rooms were even more expensive. A year's rent for one of the College schools was 6s 8d. A paper of uncertain date gives the Juramentum Commensalium, Battellariorum, et pauperum Scholarium thus:—

You shall swear to maintain and defend the honesty and good fame of this College, as much as in you lyeth.

You shall swear to be faithfull and true to this College in putting on or causing to be put on: whatsoever you shall take for the relief of your self or of any other; and that you shall not by any means or ways seek the hurt or detriment of this College.

You shall swear to observe and keep the ordinary exercise of this house appointed for you, or to endure and sustain the usual and ordinary punishments inflicted for your defaults; neither shall you shew your self any ways untractable or unconformable to the good orders and discipline of this College.

James I sometimes sent mandates for the election of men to Fellowships, as in 1604 and 1607: and he did the same in most colleges. Thus at Magdalen (State Papers 10 June 1604) 'he wishes, should Caple be rejected, to see the return of the votes, that he may proceed as he shall see cause,' and only desisted on a strong remonstrance.

The plague was grievous in 1579, in Sep. 1603, in 1609, and in 1625 when three Fellows died, Maynard, Lane, and H. Hide 1.

Some improvements were now made in the garden. Lent 1566 'xs sociis Collegii Ballioli pro indentura quadam pro horto eius Collegii.' A house near Balliol was given them 6 Oct. 1572 in exchange for their garden (near the School of Theology), adjoining the Exeter garden; the wall between the two gardens was pulled down, and £5 spent on a new wall (finished 21 June 1573, Reg. 24 June) for the garden thus made square. Savage's Balliofergus 34-5, 79 'there is a deed to Exeter College for exchange of our land adjoining to that House for a house and garden lying near to ours, which house and garden must be upon part of the ground where Hammond's lodgings now stand, for it is set lying on the north part of the way leading from Balliol to Magdalene church, on the West part of the wall of Balliol, and therefore it extendeth itself further that way than now it does, viz. quite to the low wall end without; and on the east part of certain tenements belonging to Balliol. Exeter did covenant to pay a yearly rent of 2s 6d for ever to be issuing out of a tenement of Exeter in Magdalene parish, indenture dated 6 Oct. 14 Eliz.1'

Among the eminent members of the College at this time was Arthur Chichester, afterwards Lord Chichester of Belfast, so famous in Irish history. Prideaux says in the dedication (to Dr. Hakewill) of his sermon preached at the consecration of the Chapel 5 Oct. 1624 'It was the

In 1637 Convocation was put off from 3 July to October on account of the plague; but Inceptors were to be taken as having completed what was necessary for the M.A., &c., a M.A. paying 10 shillings, a Doctor £10, absentees paying double; Wood's MS. E. 29.

In 1643 there was such a plague of Morbus Campestris [Wood's joke on the deaths in the War] that there were few determiners for B.A.; Peshall 69.

Vilvaine and Baskerville known to be worthy physicians) laid those grounds which have since attained that height which now the world takes notice of.' He then mentions 'Dr. William Helme his faithful and industrious Tutor, and those two religious and constant preachers Mr. W. Orford and Mr. Isaiah Farringdon who forgot us not when they left us, but so wrought on the pious dispositions of those excellent men Sir J. Acland and John Peryam Esq. that Exeter College by their bounty got a new Hall and lodgings of more charge and worth than all the former buildings.' A number of foreigners were trained under Prideaux himself, such as John Sigismund Cluverius, son of the geographer, and James and Frederick D'Orville, from Heidelberg (Clark i. 278, ii. 346, iii. 351); besides men like James Casaubon, Secretary Spottiswood, the Duke of Hamilton, &c. Sixtinus Amama the Dutch scholar, who taught Hebrew for 12 years in Oxford, speaks in high terms of Prideaux' management 1 in the preface to his edition of Drusius de Sectis Judaicis, Arnhemiae 1619.

Prideaux was a thorough representative of his University and of his time. On failing to become parish clerk of Ugborough in Devon, he came to College as a poor scholar and served 4 years as subpromus, before he was chosen Fellow. In a Latin letter 2 addressed 6 May 1600 to his assured frind Mr Reaullme Carter at the right Wor. Sr John Petre his house in Aldersgate-streat in London, he says that Lapthorne has taken a parish and a wife, and asks Carter to speak favorably on his behalf to Sir John Petre, on whose lands in South Brent his family had long lived. He says his mother, a widow, with ten children, could not help him. He was chosen 1600, was Rector 1612, Regius Professor of Divinity 1615-42, and became the leading theologian of the school at Oxford which upheld the doctrine of the Reformers as against the new school represented by Laud. The doctrine of predestination gave way to that of free will in the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches about the same time, for of the two chief leaders of the new party, Arminius died at Leyden 1609, and Molina at Madrid 1601. Prideaux was shocked when some of the new school maintained that the Pope was not Antichrist. In 15761 the questions discussed, An sit purgatorium, An sit orandum pro defunctis, An Spiritus Sanctus hominem peccantem, electum tamen, prorsus et omnino deserat tempore peccati are decided in the negative, and in 1605 it is affirmed that the Pope is Antichrist. But in 1608 Laud answers affirmatively to such questions as An episcopus tantum possit ordines conferre. Selden (who was at Hart Hall 24 Oct. 1600 age 15), as representing the view of the school to which Falkland, Chillingworth, and Hales belonged, has some strong remarks in his Table Talk 2 about Predestination and Prideaux's view, 'it is a point inaccessible, out of our reach; we can make no notion of it, 'tis so full of intricacy, so full of contradiction'; his remarks are even stronger against Laud's view of the divine right of bishops.

Prideaux's lectures on theology were much admired. John Houghton (who matriculated Leyden 2 July 1632) writes to John Walker 20 July 1635 as a member of Exeter College³, 'victum meum publica ibidem in aula cum aliis capiendo'; he goes to the Bodleian; Prideaux 'Oxonii gloria, ecclesie lumen maximum, veritatis Anglicanae propugnator summus' at the last comitia most learnedly refuted the errors of Socinus and others about the satisfaction of Christ. Prideaux was popular among the undergraduates, as we see by Shaftesbury's story given below. There were naturally many stories affoat about Prideaux and his Fellows, as about later eminent heads of Colleges. On a blank page in an Oxford statute book of 1638 in the Church library at Crediton is the following, 'Dr. Prideaux is saying, the second Munday in July is Act-Munday duly.' One of the Fellows in Prideaux's time (Wood's Life ii. 399) 'sent his servitour after nine of the clock at night with a larg bottle, to fetch some ale from the alehouse. When he came home with it under his gowne, the proctor met him and ask'd him what he made out so late and what he had under his gowne. He answered that his master had sent him to the stationer's to borrow Bellarmine, and that it was Bellarmine that he had under his arme; and so went home. Wherupon in following times, a bottle with a great belly was called a Bellarmine, as it is to this day, 1677.'

Two letters to Usher from Hakewill and Prideaux 1 may be given here:—

My very good Lord;

Your Lordship's favourable interpretation and acceptance of my poor Endeavours, beyond their desert, hath obliged me to improve them to the utmost in your good Lordship's service; and more especially in the good education of that young gentleman (Ja. Dillon 2) whom you were pleased to commend as a Jewel of price to my care and trust; praising God that your Lordship hath been made his Instrument to reclaim him from the superstitions of the Romish Church, and wishing we had some more frequent Examples in that kind, in these cold and dangerous Times. For his tuition, I have placed him in Exeter Colledg, with Mr. Bodley, a Batchelor of Divinity, and nephew to the great Sir Thomas Bodley, of whose sobriety, gravity, piety, and every way sufficiency, I have had a long trial; and (were he not so near me in Blood) I could easily afford him a larger Testimony. He assures me, that he finds his scholar tractable and studious; so that such a Disposition, having met with such a Tutor to direct and instruct it, I make no doubt but it will produce an effect answerable to our expectation and desire: And during mine abode in the University, my self shall not be wanting to help it forward the best I may. Your Lordship shall do well to take order with his Friends, that he may have credit for the taking up of monies in London, for the defraying his Expenses; for that to expect it from Ireland, will be troublesome and tedious. I wish I could write your Lordship any good news touching the present state of Affairs in this Kingdom; but in truth, except it please God to put to his extraordinary helping hand, we have more reason to fear an utter downfal, than to hope for a rising. Thus heartily praying for your Lordship's Health and Happiness, I rest

Most Reverend Father in God;

Your letters were the more welcome unto me, in that they brought news of the publishing of your Ecclesiastical Antiquities, so much desired. In which the History of Pelagius and Faustus' foysting, being fully and impartially set, will put a period (I trust) to the troublesome Fancies which of late have been set on foot. The sight of such a Work would more revive my Simplicity than the tender of many Preferments so much sought after. Of your purpose of printing Ignatius here, I never heard. It had been little civility in me, not to have answered so gracious an Invitation. I am loth to speak, but the truth is, our Oxford Presses are not for pieces of that Coin. We can print here Smiglecius the Jesuits Metaphysical Logick, and old John Buridane's Ploddings upon the Ethicks. But matters that entrench nearer upon true Divinity, must be more strictly overseen. I conceive it a high favour, that it pleased you to make use of my meanness for the placing of your Kinsman. I shall strain my best endeavours to make good your Undertakings to his Friends. Young Tutors oftentimes fail their Pupils, for want of Experience and Authority, (to say nothing of Negligence and Ignorance). I have resolved therefore to make your Kinsman one of my peculiar, and tutor him wholly myself; which I have ever continued to some especial Friends, ever since I have been Rector and Doctor. He billets in my Lodgings; hath (three) fellow Pupils, which are Sons to Earls, together with his Country-man, the son of my Lord Caulfield1; all very civil, studious, and fit to go together. I trust, that God will so bless our joint Endeavours, that his worthy Friends shall receive content, and have cause to thank your Grace. Faithful Servant I remain, Whose

Anthony Lapthorne was chaplain to James I and, the king being a profane swearer, Lapthorne reproved the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was present, for not taking notice of the king's swearing on the bowling green. This made the king afterwards tell swearers that Lapthorne was coming. His Puritanism however brought him into trouble with the High Commission. The charge brought against him in Laud's time was that he seldom read the Liturgy except in Lent, and when he reached the psalms or the lessons would go up at once into the pulpit, omitting the rest of the service. In his sermon he frequently reviled some of his congregation in the presence of strangers whom he had invited to hear him and whom he asked to assist him in praying out the devils with which his own parishioners were possessed. He spoke of the clergy generally in disrespectful terms, and those of his own neighbourhood, Tretire in Herefordshire, he called idol shepherds, dumb dogs, and soul murderers. charges were probably exaggerated, for though he was 9 Oct. 1634 deprived of his benefice and suspended from his ministry for a time, yet before 19 May 1636 he received permission to continue his ministry anywhere but in the cure held by him at the time of his deprivation. John Reynolds left books to Ex. Coll. (Fowler's Corpus 165). John Flemmyng was chaplain to James I and became the first warden of Wadham. Thomas Winniffe chaplain to Prince Charles lost favour for speaking against Gondomar and Spinola when the Spaniards were overrunning the Palatinate, and was sent to the Tower 1. He and Prideaux however were two of the divines of the old school who were made Bishops by Charles when he was endeavouring to conciliate the country gentlemen who had opposed Laud's and Strafford's revolutionary schemes. Prideaux had been reprimanded by Charles for speaking against the new Arminian doctrines in favour with Laud2; but he, Winniffe, and others of the same school were unhesitatingly loyal to the king in his troubles, and suffered much in the Civil War 3. George Hakewill also was imprisoned for opposing

He was an author of some note, especially for his 'Apologie or Declaration of the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World, consisting in an Examination and Censure of the Common Errour touching Natures perpetuall and Universall Decay,' which has been praised by Dugald Stewart. The Apologie had the honour of being used by Milton in his Naturam non pati senium 1628, the year after its appearance. The second edition in 1630 is a fine book. Digory Wheare became the first Camden Professor of History, and was tutor to John Pym. His Method of reading histories was still in use at Cambridge in 17001; Nathanael Carpenter's Philosophia Libera was an attack on the Aristotelian philosophy and passed through several editions. His Achitophel is dedicated to Archbishop Usher, who took him to Armagh. Another eminent fellow was George Hall, afterwards Bishop of Chester. Usher was on friendly terms with the leading members of Exeter College and sojourned a considerable time there during the troubles. Matthew Sutcliffe dean of Exeter named Prideaux, Styles, Norrington and Carpenter members of his College at Chelsea, the fellows of which were to be employed in writing the annals of their times and in combating the doctrines of the Romanists and Pelagians, but the establishment did not succeed, and became at last an asylum for invalid soldiers. Thomas Chafyn was chaplain to William Herbert Earl of Pembroke, famous in connection with the questions about Shakspere's Sonnets; Philip Massinger, who was in his service, was at Alban Hall 1602. Pembroke College was named after him, and he gave the University a large collection of manuscripts. Chafyn preached his funeral sermon at Baynard's Castle in 16302. Wood

ii. 485 tells the following curious story about the Earl. 'A short story may not be unfitly inserted, it being very frequently mentioned by a person of known integrity, whose character is here undertaken to be set down, and who at that time being on his way to London, met at Maidenhead some persons of quality, of relation or dependence upon the Earl of Pembroke (Sir Charles Morgan, commonly called General Morgan, who had commanded an army in Germany and defended Stoad, Dr. Field the bishop of S. Davids, and Dr. Chafin the Earl's then chaplain in his house and much in his favour). At supper one of them drank an health to the Lord Steward; upon which another of them said "that he believed his lord was at that time very merry, for he had now outlived the day which his tutor Sandford had prognosticated upon his nativity he would not outlive; but he had done it now, for that was his birthday which had compleated his age to fifty years." The next morning by the time they came to Colebrook, they met with the news of his death.' Several Fellows were members of the Assembly of Divines at Westminster 1, such as Matthias Styles and John Conant. Nathaniel Norrington was conspicuous in the controversy with the Remonstrants (Arminians); his epitaph in the Chapel ran thus: 'Ubi? hic, Quis? Remonstrantium malleus Norringtonus; proh dolor! sat est.' His tombstone is said to have become the hearthstone in the College kitchen. Another fellow, William Hodges, had to make his submission in Convocation 1631 for preaching against Arminianism in a sermon on Numbers xiv. 4 'Let us make us a captain, and let us return into Egypt.' George Kendal was the author of Sancti Sanciti (in answer to John Goodwin, the Independent writer), and other learned works Chamberlaine of his Maiesties Household' is signed T. C. He says 'My very good Lord, Tis the usuall fashion and custome among us that be Preachers (and 'tis as commendable as common) to commit our thoughts to the safe custody of paper that they may not die; and upon occasion, from the paper, to award them to the Presse, that the dead may live. This fashion have I followed, and yet tis my first aduenture this way; and as my aduenture, so my mishap; that with Croesus sonne, I should stand dumbe all my life long, till now that I have seene my gracious Master strucke dead before mine eyes, and with Elisha forst to cry out after him; My Master, my Master, the Chariots of Israel and the Horsemen thereof . . . none of these things move me . . . that I might be held seruicable to the bleeding memory of my deare, deare Master.' ² He founded two lectureships. The Reg. contains the following letter from Sir John Maynard to the Rector:—

I heretofore received a request from you in the behalf of Exon College which was since seconded by importunity of my brother. And yet I gave not him any assurance of what would be done and especially was unwilling to give you a verball awnswere till that I might do it with confidence and certainty of performance. And of late, having setled a controversy that strooke at the whole estate, desire to make one of our first works to beginne with your howse. We propose to assure fourty pounds per annum or neere thereabout on your howse. We hold yt convenient that the imployment be for a divinity lecture and a lecture for the oriental languages. Twenty pounds or thereabout for the first, twelve pound or thereabout for the second, the residue to the increase of some fellowship of the howse, but not meerly as a fellow but rather to go with some office such as is now least rewarded and best deserves. We desire to settle these things so as the exercises may be without faile performed, and merritt and abilityes respected in the men who shall be preferred, wherein we desire to advise with your selfe and the fellows. And intreat you to write your opinion herein as also how long yt is fitt each lecturer to have his place and what course to take in the preferment of them. We incline to an election in the same manner as the fellows of the howse are chosen. When we shal be informed herein we may the more easily resolve what to doe and how. In which particulars I desire your speedy awnsware if yt stand with your approbation and likinge. And, sir, you see that, though I have not performed your request in specie touching the buildings of the howse, that I have endeavored my best for the more essentiall part of the colledge, to which I shall (as I am bound) always acknowledge my selfe a dettor. And thus with the tender of my service and best respects to your selfe and your wife remaine,

Your lovinge kinsman in all affectionate offices, of Hampden and Pym. Eliot matriculated 4 Dec. 1607 age 15. Pym at Broadgate hall, under Digory Wheare's tuition, 18 May 1599 age 15, and Charles Fitz-Geoffrey, also of Broadgate hall, speaks highly of Pym—he afterwards preached the funeral sermon of Pym's mother, Bibl. Corn. 148. Hampden was at Magdalen 30 Mch 1610 age 15.

In 1612 the number of members at the College was 206; including, besides the Rector and Fellows, 134 commoners, 37 poor scholars, and 12 servitors. Exeter then stood fifth in point of numbers: Christ Church had 240, Magdalen 246, Brasenose 227, Queen's 267. The number in the whole University was 29201. The payments in 1619 were £6 7s to the Rector, £3 3s 6d to each fellow².

William Nove retained such regard for the care bestowed on him that when the second Lord Petre tried to nominate to the Petrean fellowships-though Sir William Petre had limited this right to himself and his son-and a lawsuit followed in which the College maintained its right to elect under the Statutes, Noye successfully and gratuitously supported the case of the College in the Court of Common Pleas. There is a portrait of him in the Hall. Edward Hyde, the famous Lord Clarendon, stood for one of the Sarum fellowships but unsuccessfully. In an election to a Sarum fellowship 1631 Thomas son of Humphry Hyde forged a certificate of birth in the diocese of Winchester which imposed on Rector Prideaux, and he expelled ten fellows who voted for the rival candidate Goddard. On appeal to the Visitor the forgery was detected, the Fellows restored, and the Rector reprimanded³. Another good friend Sir John Acland built the new Hall, with help from Sir John Peryam and others; and Peryam built the rooms which are now the Common-Room staircase. Acland gave £800 towards the Hall, to which the College added £200: Peryam gave £5604. The first stone of the new Chapel was laid II Mch 1623, and it was consecrated 5 Oct. 1624: Dr. Hakewill, a nephew of Peryam and related to Sir Thomas Bodley, gave £1200 towards it. The first person buried in it was a child of Rector Prideaux, and there are still several small brasses of the Prideaux family let into the floor (Hist. Comm. iv. 598). In 1624 a letter of thanks was sent to R. Sandye alias Napyer for £20 received through Ralph Rudle towards building a new kitchen. Robert Vilvaine, W. Orford, W. Helme also each gave £20 to the new library and kitchen: Ashmole MS. 1730 fol. 148-9 (in fol. i are many names of Western men).

Many of the Puritans were steady loyalists, and the king had no firmer supporters than some of those he had most strongly discountenanced. There were also some royalists of a more pronounced type. Henry Tozer was at the head of those who stood out against the Parliamentary Visitors; he heads the 1641-2 list. He was distinguished as Bursar and Subrector. There occurs in Reg. 8 June 1627 an apology made to him by George Mountjoy B.A. on his bended knees in the new chapel, in the presence of the Rector, Subrector and other Fellows after evening prayers. 'I George Mountioy doe here ingenuousely confesse and acknowledge before this whole assembly, that in my late falling out with Mr. Henry Tozer (one of the fellowes of this House) I behaved myselfe too unscholarly and incivilly; trespassing thereby against morality, the good discipline of this Colledge, and my bounden esteeme of the society thereof, for all which I am hartily and truely sorrowfull as well for the fact itselfe as for the evill of example committed therein. But I disclaime it for my own act: it was extremity of passion that then transported me beyond myselfe. Wherefore I humbly crave pardon thereof first from the Reverend Rector, next of the Society and in particular of Mr. Tozer: promising withall to performe hereafter not only all lawfull respect and obedience to each member of the Society (according to their distinct places and offices) but also to persuade as many as I doe or shall knowe to be of a contrary mind unto their duty and conformity in this and every kind that may concerne the quiet, peace and established discipline of this Colledge. And this submission I doe make most willingly, hartily and penitently.'

Anthony Ashley Cooper Earl of Shaftesbury was a member of Exeter College in 1637. His account of his college career is a curious contribution to the knowledge of University life in the seventeenth century 1. 'I kept both horses and servants in Oxford, and was allowed what expense or recreation I desired, which liberty I never much abused; but it gave me the opportunity of obliging by entertainments the better sort, and supporting divers of the activest of the lower rank with giving them leave to eat, when in distress, upon my expense, it being no small honour among those sort of men that my name in the buttery book willingly bore twice the expense of any in the University2. This expense, my quality, proficiency in learning, and natural affability easily not only obtained the good will of the wiser and elder sort but made me the leader even of all the rough young men of that college, and did then maintain in the schools coursing against Christ Church, the largest and most numerous college in the University 3.

'This coursing was in older times, I believe, intended for a fair

² I doubt if this is literally the fact. In the Buttery Book for 2 June 1637 (twelfth week of fourth term) 'Barronet Cooper' pays 13s 7d, which is about twice the usual amount, but Champernowney pays 13s 10d, and Bryan 15s 8d: the next week Cooper pays 13s 8d, but Champernowney 17s 3d and Bryan a pound. University Reg. 24 Mch 163% 'Anton Ashley Cooper, Dorcester. de St Ægid. Wimbourne in Comitatu predicto baronettus annos natus 15.' He was admitted to the Fellows' table 4 Mch 163$ on paying £6 caution, and his name continued on the books until 12 July 1638; his brother George matric. I Ap. 1642 age 17. Philip Champernowne son of Henry, of Modbury, Devon, matric. 21 Nov. 1634 age 16; he was admitted to the Fellows' table 18 Aug. 1634, and his name remained on until 8 Aug. 1637. Henry Bryen son of Sir Barnabas Bryen of Billing, Northants, matric. 19 Aug. 1636 age 15; he was admitted to the Fellows' table 11 Aug. 1636, and his name remained on till 28 Nov. 1637. Cooper's aunt, Martha, married Edward Tooker of Maddington in Wilts (Hutchins iii. 594). John Toker had his name on the books from 31 Oct. 1635 to 20 July 1638 when he was a bachelor (B.A. 24 Oct. 1637), but he belonged to a Cornish family. Giles Tooker son of Edward Tooker of Salisbury, Shaftesbury's cousin, matric. 1 Ap. 1642 age 17.

³ Gutch ii. 416 'In the second week in Lent (163%), about the 20 Feb. the students of Christ Church and those of Exeter College grew so unruly (the Masters interposing and wrangling in, and the Undergraduates fighting out of the schools) that the Vicechancellor was forced to command an absolute cessation of all manner of Disputations between the said two Houses.' trial of learning and skill in logic, metaphysics and school divinity, but for some ages that had been the least part of it, the dispute quickly ending in affronts, confusion, and very often blows, when they went most gravely to work. They forbore striking, but making a great noise with their feet, they hissed, and shoved with their shoulders, and the stronger in that disorderly order drove the other out before them; and, if the schools were above stairs, with all violence hurrying the contrary party down, the proctors were forced either to give way to their violence or suffer in the throng. Nay the Vice Chancellor, though it seldom has begun when he was present, vet being begun, he has sometimes unfortunately been so near as to be called in, and has been overcome in their fury once up, in those adventures. I was often one of the disputants, and gave the sign and order for their beginning; but being not strong of body was always guarded from violence by two or three of the sturdiest youths, as their chief, and one who always relieved them when in prison and procured their release, and very often was forced to pay the neighbouring farmers, when they of our party that wanted money were taken in the fact, for more geese turkies and poultry than either they had stole or he had lost; it being very fair dealing if he made the scholar, when taken, pay no more than he had lost since his last reimbursement. Two things I had also a principal hand in when I was at the College, the one, I caused that ill custom of tucking freshmen to be left off; the other, when the senior fellows designed to alter the beer of the college, which was stronger than other colleges, I hindered their design. This had put all the younger sort into a mutiny; they resorting to me, I advised all those were intended by their friends to get their livelihood by their studies, to rest quiet and not appear, and that myself and all the others that were elder brothers or unconcerned in their angers, should go in a body and strike our names off the buttery book, which was accordingly done, and had the effect that the senior fellows, seeing their pupils going that yielded them most profit, presently struck sail and articled with us never to alter the size of our beer, which remains so to this day.

'The first was a harder work, it having been a foolish custom of great antiquity, that one of the seniors in the evening called the freshmen (which are such as came since that time twelvemonth) to the fire, and made them hold out their chin, and they with the nail of their right thumb, left long for that purpose, grate off all the skin from the lip to the chin, and then cause them to drink a beer glass of water and salt. The time approaching when I should be thus used, I considered that it had happened in that year more and lustier young gentlemen had come to the college than had done in several years before, so that the freshmen were a very strong body. Upon this I consulted my two cousin-germans, the Tookers, my aunt's sons (Martha 3 d. of John Cooper m. E. Tooker of Maddington, Wilts), both freshmen, both stout and very strong, and several others, and at last the whole party were cheerfully engaged to stand stoutly to defence of their chins. We all appeared at the fires in the hall, and my lord of Pembroke's son calling me first, as we knew by custom it would begin with me, I, according to agreement, gave the signal, striking him a box on the ear, and immediately the freshmen fell on, and we easily cleared the buttery and the hall; but bachelors and young masters coming in to assist the seniors, we were compelled to retreat to a ground chamber in the quadrangle. They pressing at the door, some of the stoutest and strongest of our freshmen, giant-like boys, opened the doors, let in as many as they pleased, and shut the door by main strength against the rest; those let in they fell upon, and had beaten very severely, but that my authority with them stopped them, some of them being considerable enough to make terms for us, which they did; for Dr. Prideaux being called out to suppress the mutiny, the old Doctor always favourable to youth offending out of courage, wishing with the fears of those we had within, gave us articles of pardon for what had passed, and an utter abolition in that college of that foolish custom 1.'

The discipline 2 of the University needed keeping up. In 1634, ¹ Wood (Life i. 134) describes this practice of 'tucking' as existing in Merton when he entered in 1647.

² Oxford specially needed discipline owing to the number of alehouses. Laud (Chancellorship ed. 1853 p. 245, and see 179, 202, 237, 258, 261, Burrows 285) says there were 300 alehouses in the place: recusants frequented the Mitre (269: 215 [? Bennet] Weale of Exeter College was one of those who Romanised). See State Papers Addenda 23 Nov. 1556 for Wine taverns, Ayliffe ii. 242, Cunningham ii. 169.

while the Vice-chancellor was witnessing a tragedy acted by the scholars of S. John's, there was a disturbance in which John Gage (? Gaye) and William Betenson, commoners of Exeter, among others took part. They were forced to ask forgiveness 'on their bended knees in the north chapel of S. Mary's, promising with weeping tears that they would never do anything hereafter against the peace of the academy 1.' The colleges were fond of getting up plays. William Gager, of Christ Church (Tanner 303, State Papers Addenda July 1575 p. 487, Nat. Biog.) had a controversy with John Rainolds president of Corpus in defence of the lawfulness of plays. In Lent 1548 we find that '6s 8d was paid for the expenses of acting a comedy in public'; Lent 1551 '5s 3d was paid to Dolye who painted what was needed for acting comedies, and 18s 7d for repairs in Lord's house and the expenses in acting comedies.' In 1637 the College presented a comedy to the University (Reminiscences of Oxford, O. H. S., p. 20). The College contributed to our great group of dramatists one eminent name, John Ford, whom Charles Lamb praises so highly.

In 1623 the Vice-Chancellor Dr. Piers directed certain orders to the College (Univ. Archives box P, fascic. 5, no. 7).

The Romanist controversy caused some bitterness at this time. In John Gee's Foot out of the Snare 1624, among 'the names of Romish priests and Jesuites now resident about the City of London 26 Mch 1624' occur 'Father Bastin, sometime butler of Exon Colledge in Oxon. He was turned out of his place for cutting twenty pounds off from a brewer's score and coozening the Colledge contrarie to his oath; Father Edwards, sometime of Exon Colledge in Oxon. He went thence with a wench in man's apparell, but belike since a sanctified man.'

In 1634 the College leased ground to the University on which the west part of the Bodleian was built ².

made pursuant to an order of the House of Commons of 30 July 1641, was signed by the members of the Colleges 1.

In 1636 Charles I visited Oxford, when William Herbert of Exeter College made a speech. The College paid £32 6s 8d towards the expenses of the royal visit (Evelyn's Diary i. 662). The king had for some time planned the foundation of fellowships for the benefit of the Channel Islands, to be held at Exeter, Jesus, and Pembroke, and the fellowships were first filled up in this year 2 .

When the Civil War approached, Prideaux the Vice-chancellor abruptly left the University about 24 June 1642 without properly resigning office, and Convocation made Dr. Robert Pink of New College Pro-Vicechancellor (Wood's Life i. 52). Oxford became the king's head-quarters, many students joined the army, and the work of education was suspended. The College plate offered the king a ready resource for the war. Lord Say had let the Colleges keep their plate on condition that it should not be employed against the Parliament (Wood's Life i. 64). The Colleges, considering themselves as trustees of the plate, at first hoped to buy themselves off with ready money; thus Exeter presented the king with £310, of which £138 had to be borrowed, but the king's needs were too pressing and he took the plate as well, on a promise of repayment: it was valued at £750, the pound weight of silver plate being reckoned as worth £3, and of gilt plate somewhat more. This of course allowed nothing attending on this House, upon an information delivered against him Jan. 23, was now called into the Bar; where, after he had awhile kneeled, he was bid rise; and the said information against him was read; to which he was suffered presently to make his answer; which when he had done he was commanded to withdraw. The House fell into a debate and consideration of the whole matter; but before they came to any resolution, the Committee that retired into the Court of Wards returned and' [the Chaffin business dropped that Sitting]: ii. 04 Die Lunae i Martii 1640-1 'Whereas Dr. Chaffin was by order of this House formerly sent for as a Delinquent by the Sergeant at Arms attending on this House, for speaking indiscreet words in a sermon preached by him in the Cathedral Church at Salisbury, at a Metropolitical Visitation held there; the which words admit of such an interpretation as reflects, in an ill and scandalous sense, upon Parliaments; the question being now put whether for these words Dr. Chaffin should be committed a prisoner to the Tower; the House was divided, Tellers for the Noe were appointed Sir Jo. Wray Mr. Moore, Tellers for the Yea Lord Compton Sir Neville Poole. With the Noe were 190, with the Yea 189. It was then resolved, upon the Question, that Doctor Chaffin shall be called in to the Bar and, kneeling there, receive a sharp reprehension and admonition, and be enjoined to make a publick explanation of his words, in a sermon, at the Cathedral Church of Salisbury on some Lord's Day within convenient time. He was called in accordingly and Mr. Speaker pronounced this sentence against him, to which he yielded a willing submission; and on his submission of a great deal of sorrow for what was past, is discharged, paying his fees': 20 Oct. 1642 post mer. ii. 817 'Resolved, upon the Question, that Doctor Chaffin be sent for as a Delinquent, for publishing in his parish church the Declaration under the hand of the Marquis Hertford and others his adherents, in justification of their rebellion.' Hist. Comm. vi. 161, 1 Mch 1645 Draft ordinance to clear the following persons of their delinquency (Lords Journals ix. 44-8 in extenso) George Trevilian . . . Thomas Chafin.

The Parliamentary Visitors in 1648 expelled 10 fellows, and 18 others; Henry Tozer, John Bidgood, William Standard, John Hitchins, John Barbon (scholar), Francis Chichester, Thomas Clifford, Richard Langworthy, Thomas Browne, John Cutcliffe, William Morris, John Proctor, Thomas Carew, Erisey Porter, Francis Munday, Thomas Finch, Daniel Cudmore (servitor), Henry Bull, George Bull, William Manning, George Berd, John Berry (or Bury) B.A. probationer, Robert Teigh (or Teige, servitor), John Vicary, Baldwyn Acland, William Webber, Bernard Gealard, William Harding (cook). Besides these 28 persons expelled, Polwhele, Matthews and Braine are mentioned in the Visitors' Register in connection with Tozer. Those who submitted were John Martin, John Conant, Antony Clifford, Robert Hancock, Thomas Ince, Richard Guntion, John Francis, Charles Sambe, Thomas Voysey, John Maudit, Edward Searle, John Bartin. The persons put in by the Visitors were Samuel Conant, Peter Fyatt, Francis Howell, Edward Searle, Edmund Davis, Lewis Bradford, Jonathan Wills, William Chidley, Thomas Masters, John Slad, Eaton B.A., [Robert Collins chaplain fellow 1654, William Oliver B.A. fellow (his vacancy 1654 to be filled by a chaplain), E. Anderson B.A. to be fellow 1654, Michael Dolling, Nathaniel Adams scholar, Samuel Turner scholar, Dollingson to have next vacancy 1648, Antony Jett cook vice Harding, Abraham Batten 1648. These arrangements do not quite correspond to what actually took Thus William Standard must have afterwards submitted. It is doubtful whether Gealard vacated or was expelled. Anderson did not become a fellow. A new subrector, bursar, and dean were of course appointed. Even the cook was removed. Henry Tozer, who had been a leader among the fellows, retired to Rotterdam and died there as chaplain.

Articles put by way of Question to Mr. Tozer, subrector of Exeter College, 21 Mch 164%.

- 1. What leases have been let by you the subrector and other fellows of Exeter Colledge since the surrender of Oxon.
- 2. Whoe and how many have been admitted Scholars or Fellows of Exeter Coll. since the beginning of this Visitacion.
- 3. Whether you have not set up the Common Prayer-booke in Exeter Coll. since the use of it was prohibited, and you yourselfe had for a while layd it aside.
- 4. Whether you did not check and revile Mr Jo. Mathewes of Exeter Coll. for not comeing to Common Prayr.

- 5. Why you permit Mr Polewheele, a scandalous person and a man of blood, to enjoy the profits of his place at Exeter Coll.
- 6. Why doe you connive at the notorious miscarriages of Teige, your servitor.
 - 7. Why Tho. Voisey, commoner, was expelled your House.
- 8. Why you did not censure Mr Bury, Fellow of your House, for a scandalous and daingerous Libell delivered by way of oracion in your hearing 1.
- 9. Why you discouraged Braine, an ingenious youth of a tender conscience, when he expressed his zeale against supersticion ².
- 10. Why you did not punish Bidgood and others for drinkeing of healths to the confusion of Reformers 3.
- 11. Why you contemned the Order of the Visitors for prorouging of the terme, and permitted ingenious youthes to be sconced for observeing the Order aforesayd.
- 12. What summ of monies, for what, and by whome, there hath been at any time expended by order of the delegates since June 1647.

Wood adds, 'All which questions being proposed by one of the Visitors (which they framed from the uncharitable information of John Martin, Robert Hancock, and others of Exeter College, that were Delegates appointed by the Visitors), Mr Tozer desired time to give in his answer; on 27 Mch Mr Tozer answered, Those queries that have been proposed to me concern the discipline and government of this College, and I have formerly given in an answer in the name of the College, that they could not without perjury submit to any other Visitors than such as their Statutes had appointed. This being taken as a frivolous answer, and not at all pertinent to the Queries, Mr Tozer was condemned as guilty of high contempt. On 17 Ap. the Commissioners required Mr Tozer to admit one Peter Fiot a Jersey man into the fellowship of Mr John Poingdexter, pretended to be void by his long absence from the College. But he refusing to do it, the Commissioners sent their mandatary for the Buttery Book, into which afterwards Sir Nathaniel Brent, with the consent of the Commissioners, expunged the name of Poingdexter, and entred Fiot, commanding the Subrector to give him possession of a chamber and all emoluments belonging to his place: but he refused so to do. On 29 June they sent for Mr Tozer and forbad him to meddle with any Election of Scholars (which by Statute was to be the next day) and to disenable him in that and other matters, turned him out of his fellowship and then sent him to prison because he would not deliver up to them the College Books and Keys, which without perjury he could not do, nor had they any title to pretend to them, no new Head being put in there. Concerning this matter I find a farther account, the Subrector refusing to deliver up the Keys and the Books was imprisoned by the Governour, who sent a guard of musqueteers to his chamber door, where they continued to prevent the fetching out of any of the said Books, &c. And another guard was set at the Chappel door, where they continued till the Election day was past, to prevent the Election, in which time they took out of the Chappel all the Common Prayer Books which were there, and cut the Common Prayer out of such Bibles and Testaments as they found there. But two days after Mr Tozer was released from prison, conditionally that the Keys and Books which he had refused to give up, should not be conveyed out of the College.'

By an order of 21 Mch 1648 the College debts were to be paid by not filling up the fellowships of Willett and Gealard, and by suspending four more fellowships as they should fall vacant, till the debts were satisfied. The newly-appointed fellows were to take seniority according to the date of their degrees. There is an indignant account of the Visitation, from the royalist point of view, in Thomas Barlow's 'Pegasus, or the Flying Horse from Oxford. Being the proceedings of the Visitors and other Bedlamites there, by command of the Earle of Mongomery. Printed at Mongomery, heretofore called Oxford.' Its tone may be guessed from the opening sentences. 'Tuesday Aprill the eleventh, the long-legged peece of impertinency which they miscall Chancellor was to be brought with state into Oxon; to this end, these few inconsiderable and ill fac'd saints hired all the hackneyes in towne (which were basely bad, yet good enough for them). Out they went and met the Hoghen Moghen I told you of; what courtship passed between them at meeting, how hee swore at them, and they said grace at him; how many zealous faces and ill leggs they made, and at what distance, I know not; a long time they were about it.' Wood gives a full account of the Visitation.

The Colleges were much impoverished. On 3 Mch 1649 John Maudit subrector of Exeter College petitions, 'that the College is greatley distressed for want of the arrears due from some of the tenants, and especially Simmons of Hamborough and Dr Parsons principal of Hart Hall; and God having provided a redress by Parliament order, by application to this Committee, they beg a summons to Simmons and Parsons, to show cause for not paying their rents¹.'

On 19 Jan. 164% there is a petition about the Channel Island fellowships at Exeter, Jesus, and Pembroke, stating that the Committee for the King's Revenues had stopped the payments due from the London tenants, as taking them for part of the King's Revenues. As this was a mistake, and contrary to the Articles of the Surrender of Oxford, the Committee order the tenants to pay.

Dr. Hakewill was so much respected that no Rector was elected till he died, then John Conant was chosen by the new fellows 2. Conant was a good scholar and such a master of Greek that he many times disputed publicly in the schools in that language. Prideaux once said of him Conanti nihil difficile. He was also a good oriental scholar, knowing Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic as well as Hebrew. He quitted the College in 1642 but, hoping peace might be made, left his books behind him and they were all stolen. Books were by no means safe at Oxford during the Civil War. When Sir Thomas Fairfax recovered Oxford he took much pains in restoring the Bodleian Library, which had suffered during the Cavalier regime. Conant served a cure sometime at Lymington in Somerset and then at S. Botolph's Aldersgate, afterwards he lived several years as chaplain to Lord Chandos at Harefield near Uxbridge in Middlesex at a salary of fourscore pounds, most of which he gave away. He resigned his fellowship in 1647 from conscientious scruples about the Visitation of Oxford by the Parliamentary Commissioners. But the fellows having suffered from the non-residence of the Rector pressed Conant to take the Rectorship, knowing that he would reside. The headship was valued by the Commissioners at £45 in 1649. Conant was a leader of the Presbyterian as opposed to the Independent party in the University 1. He soon restored the system for which the College had been famous under Holland and Prideaux and the numbers increased to two hundred and upwards2. 'Once a week he had a Catechetical lecture in the chapel in which he went over Piscator's Aphorisms and Woollebius' Compendium Theologiae Christianae (Basle 1638); and by the way fairly propounded the principal objections made by the Papists, Socinians, and others against the orthodox doctrine, in terms suited to the understanding and capacity of the younger scholars. He took care likewise that the inferior servants of the College should be instructed in the principles of the Christian religion and would sometimes catechise them in his own lodgings. He looked strictly himself to the keeping up all exercises and would often slip into the hall in the midst of their lectures and disputations. He would always oblige both opponents and respondents to come well prepared and perform their respective parts agreeably to the strict law of disputation. Here he would often interpose, either adding new force to the arguments of the opponent or more fulness to the answers of the respondent, and supplying where anything seemed defective or clearing where anything was obscure in what the moderator subjoined. He would often go into the chambers and studies of the young scholars, observe what books they were reading, and reprove them if he found them turning over any modern authors, and sent them to Tully, that great master of Roman eloquence, to learn the true and genuine propriety of that language. His care in the election of fellows was very singular.

A true love of learning and a good share of it in a person of untainted morals and low circumstances 1 were sure of his patronage and encouragement. He would constantly look over the observator's roll and buttery book himself, and whoever had been absent from the chapel prayers or extravagant in his expenses or otherwise faulty was sure he must atone for his fault by some such exercise as the Rector should think fit to set him, for he was no friend to pecuniary mulcts, which too often punish the father instead of the son. The students were many more than could be lodged within the walls, they crowded in here from all parts of the nation and some from beyond the sea. On his receiving the insignia of the office of Vice-chancellor there was such a universal shout of a very full convocation as has hardly ever been known. The first Lent he made a surprising reform in their public disputations which for some years had been managed with such vehemency and disorder as had created several unhappy divisions in the University. The antipathy of his predecessor Dr. Owen to caps and hoods and his attempt for taking them away as Popish relics will not soon be forgotten. But he could never effect it, being opposed by many of the University, and among others by Dr. Conant, who could never discern any shadow of hurt in these decent habits, or any more of Popery in these distinctions of degrees than in the degrees themselves. He opposed Cromwell's plan of giving the College at Durham the privileges of a University, setting forth the advantages of large Universities and the dangers which threaten religion and learning by multiplying small and petty academies. He was instrumental in moving Mr. Selden's executors to bestow his prodigious collection of books, more than 8000 volumes, on the University.' In this period of Puritan ascendancy the disputations in the schools for M.A. were often in Greek. Conant was one of those who advocated the Restoration, and was appointed one of the Committee which met at the Savoy to revise the Book of Common Prayer. But when no alteration in the ceremonies was allowed he felt it his conscientious duty to give up the Rectorship. Yet he refused to lead a party in the separation, and in fact had so little real objection to the Prayer Book that he soon after conformed, and was even reordained priest 20 Sep. 1670 (though he had been previously ordained at Salisbury 28 Oct. 1652), and was instituted Vicar of All Saints in Northampton 15 Feb. 1679 on the presentation of the Corporation. When most of Northampton perished in the disastrous fire of 20 Sep. 1673 the neighbouring gentry paid him his salary of £100 for that year which his parishioners were not able to raise. John Robartes Earl of Radnor, who had been his contemporary at College, asked a prebend of Worcester for him of Charles II with the words 'Sir, I come to beg a preferment of you for a very deserving man, who did never beg anything for himself.' In his declining age he could scarce be prevailed upon by his physician to drink now and then a little wine. He slept very little, having been an assiduous and indefatigable student for above threescore years together. Whilst his strength would bear it, he often sat up in his study till late at night, and thither he returned very early in the morning. An eminent and early instance of Dr. Conant's contempt of the world was his passing over to his younger and only brother then living (who married young, had many children, and was not so well provided for) his interest in an estate left him by his father, when he had but little more to live upon himself than his fellowship. He was highly esteemed by Bishop Bull and Archbishop Tillotson 1.

'Exeter College flourished much under his government. In his time it afforded a Vice-chancellor, a Proctor, a Doctor of the Chair in Divinity, a Moral Philosophy and Rhetoric Reader to the University, a President of S. John's, a Principal to Jesus, and a Divinity Professor to Magdalen College; not to mention such as were transplanted thence to scholarships and fellowships in other colleges, many of whom were men of eminency afterwards.' Some of these names are those of Francis Howell, Thomas Brancker the mathematician, and Abbey and Overton, The English Church in the Eighteenth Century i. 124.

Narcissus Marsh afterwards Archbishop of Dublin, who gave ten thousand volumes to the Library of Trinity College, Dublin.

Exeter sent preachers twice a month to the Tuesday lectures at S. Mary's (Wood's Life i. 159).

In 1657 it was proposed that Edmond Prideaux, Attorney General, and his successors, should be visitors of the College instead of the Bishop of Exeter, but this Act did not pass ¹.

On 18 Feb. $166\frac{1}{2}$ the great storm 'blowed down a chimney at the corner of Exeter next Lincoln, and if the schollers in the cottle-loft had not perchance rose had bin sorely bruised; both the crosses at the west end of their chappell also downe' (Wood's Life i. 432).

In 1662 Conant and six of the fellows were deprived², and Lord Petre tried to nominate to the vacant Petrean fellowships (but in vain) Christopher Harris, and John Prince the author of 'The Worthies of Devon 3.' The ejection on 24 Aug., S. Bartholomew's Day, deprived Oxford and the Church of some of their best men, and was quite contrary to the spirit of the union of the two great parties which had brought about the Restoration. Through the stringent nature of the new Act of Uniformity, she lost the services of some of the most devoted of her Puritan sons, men whose views were no way distinguishable from those which had been held without rebuke by some of the most honoured bishops of Elizabeth's time. An attempt was made by John Walker, a fellow of Exeter College, in his book called 'The Sufferings of the Clergy in the Great Rebellion,' to justify the ejection by showing how many royalist clergy had been ejected previously, so that the Act of 1662 might be considered a sort of legitimate revenge. But the episcopalians did not return in 1660 after a victory. They returned by virtue of a union between the two great parties analogous to that which had closed the Wars of the Roses, and by the military predominance of Monk's presbyterian army; and, though the Declaration of Breda reserved the whole of the religious question for the consideration of Parliament, yet that Declaration was certainly not carried out fairly when the bishops used their influence in Parliament to prevent any toleration. The king himself complained of their conduct. The result of their action was disastrous, and Ken, grieving at the orgies of the Restoration, sadly anticipated some new visitation of God's wrath 1. The new Rector Joseph Maynard, brother of Sir John Maynard, held office less than four years; Wood says of him (Life i. 455, ii. 56), 'Exeter College is now (1665) much debauched by a drunken governor; whereas before in Dr Conant's time it was accounted a civil house, it is now rude and incivil; not respecting the magistracy of the University but soe bold as to clap him on the back and cry for new parks when Exeter and Queen's fought Feb. 15 or 16, 1664. The quarrell was between Exeter and Queen's, viz. North and West [possibly arising out of a football match²]. The rector is goodnatured, generous, and a good scholar; but he has forgot the way of a college life, and the decorum of a scholar. He is given much to bibbing; and, when there is a music-meeting in one of the fellows' chambers, he will sit there, smoke, and drink till he is drunk, and has to be led to his lodgings by the junior fellows 3. Maynard wrote in favour of his native place Tavistock (Mrs. Bray's Borders of the Tamar and Tavy, 1879, ii. 240),

'Go to our Oxford University,
Ask who is best skilled in divinity,
Who hath the fathers or the schoolmen read,
They'll single out a man at Tav'stock bred.'

² Penalty for playing football in 1666 inflicted on William Breton of Queen's Coll., John Hortop of Exeter Coll., and William Trevethick, B.A. of Exeter Coll.

Probably the football had ended in a free fight (Wood's Life ii. 97).

Ayliffe ii. 243 quotes two cases of attempts to check the claims of privilege during this century. In 1628 Fryer v. Dews (in the King's Bench), 'Dews, being sued, prayed his privilege, because at the time of the suit commenced he was a commoner in Exeter College in Oxford, and brought letters under the seal of the Chancellor certifying their privilege: and he certified that Dews was a commoner of Exeter College, as appeared by the certificate of Dr. Prideaux, Rector of the College; whereas he ought to have certified, that he was upon his own knowledge a commoner of the said college, and not upon the certificate of another: and afterwards a certificate was made of his own knowledge, and then it was allowed to be good.' Was this Thomas Dewe, pleb. of Oxford, who matriculated 13 Dec. 1615 age 16?

Again in 1674, 'Prat being plaintiff exhibited a bill in Chancery against the defendant Taylour, to have an account of several sums of money, which the defendant, a fellow of Exeter College, and a tutor to the plaintiff's son, received towards the necessary occasions of his son. The Chancellor by an instrument in writing set forth the privilege of the University granted by Charters and confirmed by Act of Parliament: and the defendant was a scholar and resident in the University, and that they had a Court of Equity, and thereupon prayed that Taylour might be dismissed. But the Lord Keeper did not allow the claim, for that cognizance of pleas in Equity could not be granted, tho' precedents were shewn of the same claim allowed in Queen Elizabeth's time. He asked whether any could be shewn in my Lord Ellesmere's or my Lord Coventry's time; but none could be shewn; and thereupon he disallowed the claim and said that it must be put in by way of Plea: but withal declared that it should not be on oath, but it should be sufficient to aver the defendant to be a scholar resident within the University.' Was this Isaac Tayler B.A. 19 June 1666, M.A. 27 Ap. 1669?; he was not a fellow.

A rather curious notice occurs Reg. 19 Dec. 1668 'decretum est ne dies sabbati deinceps pisculentus sit. Ut autem damnum eis inde emergens resarciatur, pecuniae ad finem cujuslibet termini coquo stipendii nomine solvi solitae pars quinta subrectori, partes quatuor bursario solvantur. Ut autem Collegio pro decrementis plenius quam hucusque factum est satisfiat, socio-commensales denarios tres, suggenarii et batellarii duos addant. Liberentur autem battellarii onere suas sibi quadras pecunia propria coemendi.' Decrements at first meant deductions from a scholar's endowment, for fuel, candles, salt &c., and then any one's payment for these. For fish days see Hallam's Const. i. 398, ed. 6.

Wood (Life i. 274) notices that music flourished at this time, and mentions, among other musicians, Narcissus Marsh of Exeter College, who 'would come somtimes among them, but seldome play'd, because he had a weekly meeting in his chamber in the said Coll. where masters of musick would come, and some of the company. before mention'd. When he became principal of S. Alban's hall, he translated the meeting thither, and there it continued when that meeting in Mr. Ellis's house was given over, and so it continued till he went into Ireland and became Mr. of Trin. Coll. at Dublin.' Wood's Life iii. 52, on 21 May 1683 the Duke of York visited Exeter, among other colleges, 'they went on foot into Exeter College back-gate which joyns on the west side to the [Ashmole's] musaeum, where, in the quadrangle, they were received with an English speech by Dr. Bury the rector, with his fellowes and the rest of the societie in their formalities by him; afterwards seing their chappell, where the duke complained that the communion table stood contrary to the canon (viz. east and west).' Bury was not a successful ruler. He was a strong royalist, and was recommended for the Rectorship by Archbishop Sheldon and the Bishop of Exeter, and by a letter from Charles II requesting his election 'notwithstanding any statute or custom thereof to the contrary, with which we are graciously pleased to dispense in this behalf.' The Visitor in the Visitation of 1675 found serious fault with Bury's management of the College property and general laxity. In the election of 1669, when there was a dispute about the number of fellows on each foundation, Bury suspended five of the fellows and by this means gave the candidate he favored a majority. The Vice-chancellor Dr. Fell declared the suspension unjust and invalid, and the next Vice-chancellor Dr. Mews ordered Burgh the other candidate to be admitted fellow. Bury gave way, Burgh was admitted into Hawkey's place who had just resigned, and both the candidates became fellows under a Royal Letter of 30 June 1670, which dispensed with any clause in the statutes that might interfere with this settlement 1.

On 10 Oct. 1689 Bury 2 expelled James Colmer one of the fellows

¹ Some fellows had protested 28 June 1668 against there being 5 Cornish fellows, and on account of Burgh's election 1669 Bury suspended 3 Cornish fellows, Polwhele as elected when there were already 4 Cornish fellows, Paynter for having succeeded to a Devon fellowship, Verman for succeeding to predecessors of an uncertain county: and he further suspended Gooddall and Hawkey. Burrington had 10 votes, Burgh 8 besides the 3 suspended, on which Bury pronounced Burrington elected.

² Bp. Trelawney sent an inhibition 14 Nov. 1689, and directed an account of the proceedings to be sent him, and that Mr. Cleaveland and Mr. Maundrel should come to him at London. Bury refused to obey, and the Visitor by a parchment notice fixed to the Chapel door 18 Mch 1689 cited the Rector and Verman, Lethbridge, Huchinge, Archer, Cleaveland, Adams, Thorn to appear before him on 21 Mch when the Rector and three others entered a protest (but Hutchins and Cleaveland did not agree in it) against the Visitation, and so again on the 25 when the Visitor's Commissary Edward Master LL, D, restored Colmer's name to the Buttery Book. The Rector brought a new charge against Colmer and again crossed his name from the Books, Colmer again appealed and the Visitor summoned all to appear before him on 16 June, when the great gate was shut against him, but he entered another way, and on the Rector presenting a fresh protest snatched it from him and trod it under foot. The Visitor appealed to the Privy Council against the College for contempt of his jurisdiction. At the election of 30 June 1690 the Rector, Subrector, Hearn, Lethbridge, Archer, Adams, Thorn, Crabb, Vivian, Bonamy, and Kingston elected John Vivian in Colmer's place; Hutchins and Ratcliff voted for him conditionally 'if his place were vacant'; Cleaveland, Read, Harris, Bagwell, Maundrel, Webber, and Levet denied that there was any vacancy. The Visitor came again 24 July and another attempt was made to shut the gate against him. On the 25th he suspended 11 Fellows for three months for contumacy, and afterwards excommunicated Kingston. On the 26th he expelled the Rector and ordered him to give up the management to the Senior Fellow on pain of the greater excommunication. The non-suspended Fellows elected William Paynter Rector 15 Aug. 1690, who took the oath in December. The case then came before the King's Bench, which on 13 Jan. 1691 ordered the management of the College to be left with Dr. Bury till the case was settled, but Vivian's title to the fellowship was held over and he was not to vote. There were double elections to several fellowships by the rival Rectors and the Fellows who adhered to them. For the case in the King's Bench and the House of Lords see Skinner's Reports pp. 447-516, Trin. term 6 William and Mary, tit. Philips and Bury, Lansdown MS. 614. i; Heywood on Univ.

on a charge of incontinence, but the evidence was so worthless that the Vice-chancellor disallowed it, and the Visitor Jonathan Trelawney bishop of Exeter ordered Colmer to be restored. The Rector again crossed Colmer's name out of the books, and on this the bishop held a formal Visitation of the College, when the Rector tried to shut the gates against him. At last the Visitor expelled Bury and the fellows who joined him in opposing the Visitation, and William Paynter was elected Rector in his stead, but it was four years before the case was finally settled on appeal to the House of Lords. Other charges were brought against Bury in the Visitation.

John Meddens M.A. of Wadham was 'moderator' at Ex. Coll. about 1690, 'the Fellows being at variance among themselves,' Hutchins i. 236; Athenae iv. 394, 484-5. The Bishop's Articles of Enquiry 1690 are in the muniment room.

He had sold the place of cook to Robert Harding for £150, and received £50 from Hedges the next cook that Harding might resign in his favour. He had also sold the place of butler to William New for £170. The Rector's answer denies most of the statements 1. and there is so much cross-swearing among the witnesses that it is difficult to make out the real state of the case about Colmer. but Bury's conduct had been very arbitrary. The main circumstance in Colmer's favour is that he was supported by two of the fellows Ezra Cleaveland and Henry Maundrell, who were men of high character. Colmer states that Thomas Kingston the chaplain who supported Bury 'is registered in Mr. Dangerfield's Diary as one of his singular friends and companions.' But probably what told most against Bury was his having published in 1690 The Naked Gospel, for which he was ultimately charged with Socinianism 2, and the book itself was ordered by the University, 19 Aug. 1690, to be burnt. Bury published a new edition with alterations and explanations, but could not get a hearing. He anticipated the view of Locke, that the fundamental points of religion were few and simple, and that the main part of the existing theology was an accretion from the time of the Middle Ages: if we returned to the primitive doctrine, there would be more hope of union among Christians: he appealed to such texts as Acts xx. 20, 'I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews and also to the Greeks, Repentance towards God, and Faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ.' Bury's case was thought one of some hardship and there was a debate on it in the House of Lords, but ultimately Paynter was confirmed in the place of Rector. Bury was Rector during James II's reign, when-perhaps as part of the king's plan of giving University appointments to Roman Catholics-Lord Petre sent a letter naming a Petrean fellow 3. The College thought it unbecoming to demand the £60 expenses from the descendant of their second founder, and the relations between Lord Petre's family and the College have generally been of a friendly character, Sir John Maynard and Sir George Treby pleaded for the College, and Chancellor Jeffries said in his familiar way that a pretended statute appealed to by Lord Petre's counsel was nothing to the point, and that Sir William Petre had no more power of making such a statute than John a Stiles.

about the clock and cloths, but none concerning the plate. He was accused for being one of the knot of robbers who committed several robberies in the night time last winter in Oxon; but he several times denied it to the vicechancellor in prison and at the gallowes; otherwise, as 'tis thought, if he would or could have confessed the knot he would have been saved. He was a handsome yong man and therefore when he was to be executed the maides of the towne had dres'd up an ordinary body to beg him to be her husband, and shee appeared at the gallowes and desir'd him; but [this was] denied unless he would confess the knott.'

The list of Nonjurors in Kettlewell's Life, App. p. xii, shows few names at Oxford, only about a couple of dozen, for most of the Jacobites took the oath to the new king and then conspired against him. Thomas Polwhele, fellow in 1664 and V. of Newlyn, was one of the two nonjuring incumbents in Cornwall: the other was also an Exeter Coll. man, James Beauford of Lanteglos by Camelford. At the election in 1719 Betty, Bartlett and Eastway had equal votes with Philip Hicks, George Snell and William Hume, and Dr. Robert Shippen the Vice-chancellor, a well-known Jacobite, selected the three former; but Bartlett and Eastway were rejected 6 July 1720, at the end of their year of probation, for disaffection and drinking the Pretender's health 1.

Since the Restoration discipline had been bad². The state of the College (and of the University) had altered much for the worse since the time of Rectors Prideaux and Conant. Cicero's words became applicable to many a man (Cluent. § 72) Ea vitia quae a natura habebat, etiam studio atque artificio quodam malitiae condivisset. Prideaux 1 speaks of Exeter College as worse than Christ Church, 'nothing but drinking and duncery,' 'Exeter College is totally spoiled and so is Christ Church.' The Solitary in Tom Jones who relates his history to the hero describes himself as having been at Exeter, but perhaps only as being a western man: the story however is not a flattering one. The humorous notices of Oxford in the Spectator all point the same way. We have the evidence of Swift, Defoe, Gray, Gibbon, Johnson, John Wesley, Lord Chesterfield and Lord Eldon all agreeing in this point, that both the great Universities were neglectful and inefficient in the performance of their proper work 2: Lord Eldon and Vicesimus Knox agree in stating that the examinations had long been a fiction, and this may have led to Adam Smith's view of the uselessness of endowments for promoting real knowledge. Chesterfield says of Carteret lord Granville 'he degraded himself by the vice of drinking which, together with a great stock of Greek and Latin, he brought away with him from Oxford'; his devotion to Greek and Latin was his own. Clarendon makes one of the speakers in his Discourse concerning Education complain of the great schools for sending up 'lubberly fellows, after they are 19 or 20 years of age, who bring their debauchery with them.'

² Wood's Life ii. 83 (1666), 'One Drinkwater, an undergraduat of Exeter College with a red face was taken at the taverne by Dr. John Fell vice-chancellor. He asked him his name. Drinkwater, answered he. Is this a place for you, saith the vice-chancellor, who is your tutor? Mr. Goodall (quasi good-ale) replyed he. Excellent and verie ridiculous; get you home for this time.' Wood's Life iii. 3, S. John's and New College in 1682; 139, '18 Ap. 1685 Sat. at night, a bastard laid neare the dore of Mr. William Paynter at Exeter Coll. and laid to his charge, but knowne to be a tric of malice by a pupill of his that he caused to be expell'd; 6 May, John Jago of S. As late as 1775 Campbell says in his visit to England, 'The Fellows of All Souls did nothing but clean their teeth all the morning, and pick them all the evening . . . almost all the gownsmen we saw were tipsy.'

It was during this time that the Library was burnt down 2 Dec. 1709. Hearne says in his diary (ii. 318, 320, 330), 'This morning, very early, began a fire in the scrape-trencher's (quadrae sculptricis) room of Exeter College. This room being adjoyning to their Library, all the innerpart of the library was quite destroyed, and only one stall of books, or thereabouts, secured. The wind being low, and there being good assistance, it was extinguished by eight o'clock, otherwise it might have burnt the public library, which is not many yards distant from it, on the east side. This library was formerly the college chapel, which so continued till the year 1625. The wind at this time was west. Though the writer of these memorials be not at all given to superstition, and does not very easily give credit to the great number of instances that are given in miscellaneous discourses of dreams, yet he cannot but here observe two considerable accidents that happened to himself. The night in which the fire broke out at Exeter College he had little sleep, being strangely disturbed with the apprehensions of fire, which seemed to him to be so near as to come to the hall (Edmund hall) and to catch the upper part of it. This apprehension continued violent, and he had only a sort of an interrupted broken sleep, till such time as he was called up to go to look after the library.' As the wind was west, it may have blown the smoke to Edmund Hall, and if Hearne's window was open and the smoke reached his nostrils during his sleep, it might account for his dream. The library was soon after refurnished. But in 1778 it was taken down and rebuilt, the College having received in 1774 a large accession of MSS. and printed books by the benefactions of Edward Richards Esgre and Joseph Sanford B.D., sometime members of this House, and the latter afterwards fellow of Balliol (Reliquiae Hearnianae 16 Mch 1726, see Coxe).

A considerable improvement was effected in the College by John Conybeare and some newly elected Fellows. Conybeare, elected in 1710, was tutor to Archbishop Secker and to Chancellor Talbot's sons. In 1732 he published an answer to Matthew Tindal's Christianity as old as the Creation (Matthew Tindal and his nephew Nicholas were both at Exeter College). Conybeare's answer was highly appreciated by his contemporaries, and Lechler the German historian of English Deism expresses his admiration of it2. In 1735 he published 'Calumny refuted, an answer to the personal slander of Dr. Richard Newton.' Newton had become Principal of Hart Hall in 1710 and had procured an act of parliament for converting it into Hertford College 3. He now maintained that Hart Hall had always been really independent of Exeter College; and Dr. Hole the Rector of Exeter, who was a weak man 4, gave him free access to the muniment room to consult the old documents. Conybeare thought that Newton on this occasion removed the early documents about Hart Hall, which are now missing. Newton was more honourably distinguished by his effort to diminish the expenses of a University career (Brodrick 135), for which he was made the subject of many jokes by the Terrae Filius, Nicholas Amhurst, afterwards so well known as editor of Bolingbroke's journal 'The Craftsman.' When poor Newton said that 'he supped in the Refectory and neither varied the meat nor exceeded the proportion set before the lowest commoner,' Amhurst notes 'This part is liable to dispute. I will only put you in mind of the late instance of Pease and Bacon. You remember what you said, upon that occasion, viz. Is such diet as this to descend to the populace.'

Conybeare became Rector of Exeter 1730, after Hole's death, and his exertions in the restoration of discipline and learning recommended him to the Crown, which appointed him Dean of Christ Church 1733, 'to cleanse out that Augean stable.' In 1735 West writes to Gray from Christ Church 'a country flowing with syllogisms and ale, where Horace and Virgil are equally unknown 1.' At Exeter Conybeare put a stop to the habit of selling the servants' places 2, and restored the long neglected lectures. An account of his reforms is printed from the College Register below a. 1733, and later regulations a. 1739. Hearne however, who always means a Jacobite when he speaks of 'an honest man,' speaks disparagingly of Conybeare, who was by no means a Jacobite. Sir John Saint Aubyn, a leading Jacobite in the Commons, was of Exeter College. Walpole said of him, 'All these men have their price except the little Cornish baronet,' and on Walpole's disgrace Sir John was a member of the committee appointed to inquire into his conduct. Faction was still strong in Oxford. In 1719 there was a disputed election in the College and three Jacobite candidates had an equal number of votes with three others. Dr. Robert Shippen the Vicechancellor a well-known Jacobite selected the three candidates of his own party. Two of them however, William Bartlett and Richard Eastway, were dismissed the next year for disaffection and drinking the Pretender's health. We have a rather pathetic Complaint in 1754 by rector Bray against the members of Trinity, then a Jacobite College, for grossly insulting him, breaking the College windows several times, and behaving in a very ungentlemanly way. The authorities of S. John's in a similar case had made reparation, but the president of Trinity, George Huddesford, although Vice-chancellor, had refused to listen to what he called 'personal complaints.' The high character of Ken and a few others has shed a lustre over the Nonjurors and Jacobites, but Johnson had a low opinion of the Nonjurors, and the Jacobite chiefs in Oxford had not only notoriously perjured themselves, by taking the oath to the new dynasty, but had largely contributed to injure the morality and discipline of the place. Their ablest man, William King, principal of S. Mary Hall, wrote obscene poems, notorious even in that unscrupulous age. Perhaps the last occasion on which the Jacobite feeling was strongly displayed was in 1755 when the County election was held in Broad street. The Tory and Jacobite party guarded the approaches to the polling booths and prevented the Whigs from coming to vote. Some 'Queries' published on the occasion ask, 'Did not the Old Interest mob, on the morning of the first day of the Poll, seize every access to the front of the booths, and guard it almost twenty men deep? Was not the same done, early, every succeeding day of the Poll?' The Whig voters however passed through Exeter, and got to the booths. On this Vice-chancellor Huddesford made some remarks in Convocation on 'the infamous behaviour of one College,' which led to a series of Pamphlets. Wadham, Merton, Exeter and Christchurch were the four Whig Colleges 1. The accession of George III however ended Jacobitism. They changed the idol, says Burke, but preserved the idolatry.

On 14 Ap. 1761 'were appointed by the Rector and seven Seniors, Charles Curtis and Ann Horner widow jointly to the office of Promus, Charles Curtis appointed by the Rector Surveyor of the buildings, Ann Horner Tonsor'; for the intervention of the seven Seniors in appointing servants, see a. 1733. Charles Curtis proved dishonest, and on 9 June 1786 William Brickland was made Book-keeper (Promus) and William Taylor Storekeeper (Subpromus), and Robert Smith Overseer of Buildings; Brickland was dismissed for drunkenness 26 Mch 1790.

foundations. In 1710 Meriel Symes of Somerset founded an exhibition for a poor scholar. There was some trouble afterwards about the claims of founder's kin, for families not really connected with Meriel Symes put in claims 1. It was the number of forged claims at All Souls that caused the publication of the valuable Stemmata Chichleana. In 1715 Dr. Hugh Shortridge acting for Dame Elizabeth Shiers founded two new fellowships for Herts and Surrey, though it was not until S. Stephen's day 1744 that they were actually created. Shortridge also gave the College the best part of the funds of the Library, and a fund for buying advowsons2. Dr. John Reynolds founded the Several of his family had been members of Exeter College, and he returned to the College in 1679 with his pupil Sir George Shiers, only child of Robert and Lady Elizabeth Shiers and heir to Slyfield in Surrey. Sir George died 1685 at the age of 25 and Lady Elizabeth 14 Aug. 1700 of cancer at the age of 66, and was buried at Fitcham, her husband had d. 1669 age 56. Reynolds exhibitions in 1756, three from Eton and three from Exeter; Eton has appropriated her three, it is not clear by what right. St. John Eliot founded two Eliot exhibitions from Truro school.

Some of the Fellows of this period redeemed the fame of the College. Joseph Atwell, George Stinton and Francis Milman (a learned physician) were fellows of the Royal Society. John Upton was known for his edition of Arrian's Epictetus and of Spenser's Faerie Queen, and for his Observations on Shakspere; James Edgcombe wrote in answer to Chubb the Deist; Benjamin Kennicott was the leading Hebrew scholar of his day and collated the Hebrew

No timber was to be felled on the estates for 40 years except for repairs, then the proceeds of felling timber to be paid to Ex. Coll. Library; see Reg. 19 May 1744; the first two Fellows on the new Shiers foundation were elected 26 Dec. 1744, S. Stephen's day; Manning and Bray's Surrey ii. 692; Clutterbuck's Hertfordshire i. 340. On 29 Dec. 1781 the Visitor determined that the Rector might take one of Dr. Shortridge's livings; but Rector Bray who d. 1785 left a bequest of £500 to augment the Rectorship (Reg. 5 June 1786), as long as the Rector shall not take a Shortridge living (otherwise to go to Domus); and 1794 £100 a year was added by the College to the Rector's income as long as the Rectors refrain from taking a Shortridge living-the question arising about Bushey in Herts; this was confirmed 10 Mch 1798 when it was further resolved that the whole payment to the Rector should be made up to £500 a year, the overplus to be repaid to the College if it should be more than previous deficiencies, this money payment to include receipts from dividends, Bursars, clear income of Kidlington, interest on Dr. Bray's £500, the £100 voted in 1794, room rent, receipts from allowance of commons, future donations or bequests (£800 was voted 16 June 1798 for improving the Rector's lodgings); on the improvement of the Rector's income see 3 Nov. 1825 and the Report on Domus at the end of the third Register. The Reg. 27 Jan. 1803 contains an account of the Shortridge Fund for buying advowsons. When the timber on the Shortridge estates came to be cut in 1813, the Vicars of Leatherhead &c., who had the right to the underwood only, claimed all, but after a friendly Chancery suit the College right was allowed (Reg. 12 Mch 1813, 19 June 1817, 27 May 1818, 4 Feb. 1822). On 22 Aug. 1822 the Rectories of Rype and Waldron near Lewes in Sussex were bought out of the Shortridge and Richards living funds (see particulars in the Register). On 7 Feb. 1840 the R. of Shillingstone near Blandford in Dorset was bought for £3350 out of the Shortridge Fund. See further 24 Feb. 1824 on Bushey, in 1835 the College gave £100 towards the erection of a Chapel of Ease, and a Communion Service for its use (Reg. p. 49).

MSS. of the Bible; John Stackhouse's edition of Theophrastus 'de historia plantarum,' Critical remarks on Ælian and other authors, and works on British plants and algae had some reputation; Stephen Weston was known for his Oriental studies, and some of his Chinese studies were remarkable: William Holwell Carr made a fine collection of Italian paintings which he bequeathed to the National Gallery; Demainbray was Royal Astronomer at Richmond; Stephen Peter Rigaud was Savilian professor of Astronomy, and printed Bradley's Works and Harriot's Papers and the Arenarius of Archimedes, and Notices concerning Newton's Principia; he further selected the contents of 'Correspondence of Scientific men of the 18th century.' Among those who were not fellows Jonathan Toup held a leading place as a critical scholar, and had some influence on Porson.

A letter from Walter Kerrick to Edward Weston, dated Uxbridge, 8 June 1767 (Hist. Comm. 1885, p. 406) gives an interesting picture of a pupil being introduced to his tutor. 'I take the first opportunity of informing you that I have settled my friend Stephen Weston at Exeter College. His name was put into the Books on Monday night. Dr. Kennicott was at his villa about 7 miles from Oxford, but he returned to College on Tuesday, and we had the honor of drinking tea with him and Mr. Stinton Mr. Weston's tutor. He is reckoned a very sagacious good tutor, and I conclude from the fullness of the College that the character I heard of him is a just one. They found a difficulty in accommodating Mr. Weston with a room. The income to it was only 4 Pound, and I think a little papering and a few more chairs will make it very neat and commodious. The young man seemed to like his destination very well and, from my knowledge of him and his conversation, I must promise myself everything that is good from him. It would be injustice to him not to acquaint you with what Mr. Stinton told me; He said, after overhawling him, that he found him an admirable scholar. If the little I have done in conducting my cousin to Oxford is agreable to Dear Mr. Weston, it will be the highest pleasure to him who has the honor' &c.

The question about rooms was always a difficult one. On 30 June 1761 'it was decreed that whoever is permitted to take a chamber shall continue to be tenant of that chamber and pay the rent, unless he obtains leave to move into another chamber that may become vacant and untenanted; and tho' he should be permitted to retire into the country in vacation times, yet he shall not be permitted to throw up his room under colour of renting a garret, but shall go on paying his quarterly rent for the room he had taken, in the same manner as if he were personally resident in College.'

Matriculation Examinations only began in 1827, and at Oriel and Balliol only. The Final Examinations in the last century were a farce; Lord Eldon humorously describes the two questions asked him viz. What is the meaning of Golgotha? and Who founded University College? Scholars were looked down on, and hardly regarded as gentlemen by the regular commoners 1.

John Wesley's father Samuel had been at Exeter College; and one of the fellows, Thomas Broughton, had already come under Wesley's influence in 1732, before his election, and was in 1743 secretary of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge. George Thomson V. of S. Gennys is referred to in Doddridge's Life of Colonel Gardiner, as the second remarkable instance of conversion: and Samuel Walker of Truro was a name known far and wide in Evangelical circles. Some of the later fellows also belonged to the evangelical school, such as John David Macbride.

It has been remarked that the revival of religious feeling in the 18th and 19th followed the same course as in the 16th and 17th centuries. First came the renewed sense of personal relation to God, among the Reformers; then the idea of church authority among the Caroline divines, then the Latitudinarian movement. Similarly the Evangelical revival of the last century led to the High Church and Broad Church phases of thought. But there is a danger in drawing sharp lines, and when it is said that the Evangelical party declined and the High Church took their place, it is not really meant that spiritual and personal religion declined, but that its activity took another form²; the young men who in the previous generation would have followed the lead of Simeon, now followed the lead of Keble and Newman. The essential feelings co-existed in all three periods, but in different proportions and relations. Such constituent elements of religion tend to clear themselves gradually of the accretions that have grown up under the influence of successive schools of thought. And, again, the movement of 1833 was not a sudden revolution. The way had been prepared by the steady efforts of the Evangelical, High Church and Liberal parties in the church, to restore religious feeling; efforts that already showed a marked success, which those who write about the new movement are apt to suppress or minimise. When that movement 1 gave a new direction to the activity of the English church, Exeter contributed several men of mark to its ranks, such as J. B. Morris, Upton Richards, J. D. Dalgairns, W. Lockhart (whose secession caused Newman such trouble at Littlemore 2); but of these the ablest man was William Sewell 3. He did much to raise the intellectual tone of the College, was a many-sided man, and the earliest advocate of University Extension 4. His pamphlet Suggestions for the Extension of University Teaching 1850 states his object as 'the diminution of the expenses of education, its extension in the best form—that form which the Universities alone are capable of supplying—its expansion to its utmost limits, so that it may embrace the whole kingdom, not even excluding the most distant colonies. Though it may be impossible to bring the masses requiring education to the University, may it not be possible to carry the University to them? The University possesses a large amount of available resources and machinery, consisting partly of pecuniary means, partly and principally of men of high talents and endowments. These may be made instrumental in establishing professorships, lectureships, and examinations in the most important places in the kingdom. The institution of these professorships and lectures would be strictly analogous to the original foundation of the Universities themselves. The authorities of the places would no doubt gladly provide the requisite accommodation for the delivery of lectures, holding examinations, &c. Cambridge would take its due share of the work. The cycle of instruction would embrace the various subjects comprehended in the University examinations. By originating such a comprehensive scheme, the Universities would become the great centres and springs of education throughout the country and would command the sympathy and affection of the nation at large, without sacrificing or compromising any principle which they are bound to maintain.' It should be added that all this was, of course, to be in the interest of the Church, for one of his main principles was 'that the Catholic Church only has the power or the right to educate.'

He was the first person I heard dilate on the theory of Folklore, and explain the permanence of detail in early stories by showing how conservative nurses and children are in always repeating a thing in the same form of words. A child will correct you if you happen to vary the wording. He used to say that Herodotus was largely indebted to the Arabian Nights, meaning of course that common fund of Eastern stories, which the Arabian Nights have preserved in their latest and fullest literary form. He was a great conversationalist, and what Johnson called a clubbable man.

He at first warmly supported the new movement; but when Newman began to move away from the influence of Keble, and fell under the influence of De Maistre and Lamennais¹ (he had begun to lose his hold on Anglican church views as early as 1839), and his younger supporters, such as J. B. Morris, Ward, and others claimed to hold all Roman doctrine in the English church², and especially after the appearance of Tract 90 in 1841, Sewell like Hook, W. Palmer of Worcester, and other steady churchmen, recoiled and made a stand; they saw at last that Whately had been right in issuing his warning note Tendimus in Latium. Mozley speaks of Ward's monstrous cobwebs, and it was a common saying that it was hard to have to face a new dissolving view once a month. Sewell's article in the Quarterly³ of March 1842 marked the turn of the tide. In form it was quite innocent, it made no allusion to existing controversies. It was only an account of the Caroline Divines, showing how they did not speak evil of the Reformation or the Reformers, did not reject the name of Protestant (Laud said on the scaffold, 'I have always lived in the Protestant religion established in England, and in that I come now to die'), did not spend their time in pointing out the defects of the Church of England, while glossing over those of Rome, and palliating what they could not praise; on the contrary, Andrewes, Laud, and others carried on a strong polemic against Rome. But all these things were just what the younger men of the movement were doing, and the article naturally irritated them. Morris said, 'Is he not rightly called Suillus, for he will never go the whole hog'; but the pun was perhaps borrowed from Whately.

Most leading men, from Newman to Darwin, have been great novel-readers. The chiefs of the movement, from Newman down to Gresley and Paget, wrote novels 1 to illustrate their views, often with a large element of caricature in them; in one, the puritan, Melchizedek Howl, is made to say, 'Behold I will build unto myself a pue.' Sewell's novel Hawkstone was of a very sensational character. The low-church parson is let off easily, he is only taken by Irish conspirators into an underground cave and has to take an oath, with his lips set to a cup of blood, that he will not tell. But of the two chief villains (Jesuits) one fled away shrieking into a secret passage, where he was eaten by rats, who had evidently begun at the extremities, and the walls were convulsively scrabbled over with gory fingers; the other fell on his hands and knees, during a fire, into the melting lead of a reservoir. This was not quite original, for Tony Foster had fled into a secret passage at Cumnor, and Chowles in Old St. Paul's had gone down in the molten lead. All these caricatures have perished, but the religious idea took a gentler form in his sister Miss Sewell's Amy Herbert, and other tales; while Miss Yonge's stories have been the delight of two generations of readers. Miss Yonge notes the change in the general view, when she makes Lucilla Sandbrook say, 'The last generation was that of mediaevalism, ecclesiology, symbolism, whatever you may call it. Married women have worked out of it. It is the middle-aged maids that monopolize it.' Sewell wrote many books, of which his Christian Morals and Christian Politics were perhaps the chief, but they were very paradoxical. When he wrote of Tract 90 as leading men to receiving paradoxes and therefore errors, Church notes 'good, vide Christian Ethics'.' He was perhaps thinking of such passages as that which Lecky notices², 'I believe that a geologist deeply impressed with the mystery of baptism—that mystery by which a new creature is formed by means of water and fire—would never have fallen into the absurdities of accounting for the formation of the globe solely by water or solely by fire. He would not have maintained a Vulcanian or a Neptunian theory. He would have suspected that the truth lay in the union of both.' There is a curious smatter of scientific talk in these books. Some were shocked at the comparison, in the Christian Politics, of the three parts of the British Constitution to the three Persons of the Trinity.

When A. P. Stanley came up to Balliol in 1834, Moberly at Balliol, Johnson at Queen's, and Sewell at Exeter were spoken of as the three best college tutors in Oxford. Sewell's lectures were very interesting, partly because he wove in whatever he was thinking about, with little regard to the subject of the lecture. Once, when we ought to have been construing the Georgics, he spent nearly the whole hour in discussing Newman's Theory of Development. 'There are little machines,' he said, 'which will develop a small portrait into a large one, preserving the proportions. But if the machine so enlarged the nose and dwarfed the rest, that you could see little else but nose, it could hardly be called a legitimate development. Yet that is Mr. Newman's idea of development. He has really taken his idea simply from the actual growth of the Roman church, and almost ignores the existence of the Greek church, merely saying it is a case of arrested development like China.' It is curious to note that R. H. Froude³ wrote as early as Aug. 1835, 'You lug in the Apostles' Creed and talk about expansions. What is the end of expansions? Will not the Romanists say that their whole system is an expansion of the Holy Catholic Church and the Communion of Saints?' Sewell adhered to Keble's rule Quod primum, verum. He was fond of saying that the same end might be arrived at by a variety of means, sometimes quite opposite means. Thus the Baptist's ascetic life, and our Lord's presence at feasts were both means to the same end. So again S. Paul recommends celibacy as good in a time of mission work and persecution, but in a settled church it is better that the clergy should be married, and the parson's wife and daughters are often his best curates. Miss Mozley was gratified by finding Newman once (though in a bantering tone) say, 'Parsons' wives are useful in a parish, and that in a way in which no man can rival them.' But Newman spoke satirically of the married clergy in Loss and Gain. Ward's sudden marriage, after his fierce denunciations of that state, was a great shock to the party.

Sewell said, 'They call a miracle a suspension of the Laws of Nature. Why, we are always suspending those laws. Iron naturally sinks in water, but we bend it into shape, and use the law of displacement of fluids, and the iron ship floats. But properly speaking no law is suspended, we do but fight one law of nature by another. And this is what most of our improvements come to.' When some spoke slightingly of the 'Evidences,' Sewell said, We need all the help we can get. The men in S. Paul's ship did not ride at one anchor only; no, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished for the day. He upheld the divine right of kings, but with a reservation. Kingship arose, he said, often from force or fraud, but long possession sanctified it. Three generations are enough for this. Even if the Jacobites might rise against George I or George II, yet George III had the divine right. If Cromwell had made himself king, and his son Richard had succeeded, and then Richard's son, that son would have had the divine right. This did not please some of our Stuart devotees who held that the divine right lasted for ever in one family. But, subject to this reservation, he upheld the theory of Passive Obedience.

What the men most complained of was his forcing them into the schools before their sixteenth term; which, as they then came into residence only in the fourth² (sometimes fifth) term after matriculation, gave them too little time; and this, when other colleges such as Balliol fixed no such limit. One man went to Alban Hall rather than submit to the rule, and got his first class from thence. The College rule was not really so strict, but Sewell so applied it.

But he was sometimes as fanciful in his lectures as in his books. C. H. Pearson was shocked at his dictum that the highest class of animals, the vertebrate, was constructed as a type of the Cross. Marcus Southwell was once so annoyed that he said, 'Why does he call it lectures on Plato, on Butler and so on, when it is all lectures on Sewell.' His etymologies were more than pre-scientific. Once he derived periwig from the Greek περιοικος, 'a house round the head,' 'the w is the Greek digamma, represented as usual by omicron.' Every one was taken aback, and only one man ventured to say, with hesitation, 'I—I thought that periwig was another form of the French perruque.' Sewell laughed and said, 'Of course you are right.' Another time, after some similar derivation, Mackenzie Walcott, who had little regard for his brother Wykehamist, said, respectfully, 'Might we not, Sir, on these principles, derive teapot from tepeo.'

It was at one of these lectures that Sewell burnt a book which he thought obnoxious, in 1849, the last time a book has been publicly burnt in a College hall. The scene is thus described by the owner of the book, Arthur Blomfield 1, now R. of Beverston and R.D. of Dursley, Glouc .: "I had just bought the "Nemesis of Faith," or as it was called, "Faith with a Vengeance," when on Tuesday morning, Feb. 27, 1849, I, an undergraduate of Exeter College, attended a lecture in hall. The Rev. William Sewell, Sub-Rector of Exeter College (not "Dean of the Chapel") was lecturer. He declaimed loudly against Froude's "Nemesis of Faith." Hearing, on my own confession, that I possessed it, he requested me to bring "that book" to him. No sooner had I complied with his request (Sewell was my college tutor) than he snatched the book from my hands and thrust it into the blazing fire of the college hall (not "quadrangle"). I see him now, with hall poker in hand, in delightful indignation, poking at this, to him, obnoxious book. In a few hours this "burning of the book" was known all over Oxford. As your article justly remarks, "the burning only served as an advertisement."

It was a sight to see Sewell lecturing, or rather talking, in the hall.

1 Letter in Daily News 2 May 1892.

He used to stand with his back to the great hall fire, and his gown gathered up in his left hand. His gown and surplice were usually nearly as ragged as those of Pusey and Burgon, which were said to be a grief of mind to their lady friends. But let us be just to them. They were thinking of other things, it is doubtful whether they ever thought about their dress. Sewell used to tell a story about himself, which illustrates the communistic system that prevails on a College staircase. Often you do not get your own glasses, teacups, spoons, forks, &c., but those that happen to be ready to the servant's hand, no matter whose they are. But this does not often extend so far as in Sewell's case. One Saturday his laundress said to him with a curtsy, Please, Sir, you want some new shirts. Why, Mary, he answered, looking down at his wrists with justifiable pride, this seems a very good shirt. Yes, Sir, she replied, with another curtsy, but, for some time you have been living on the staircase (i. e. wearing other people's shirts). This communism had its objectionable side. A man on the staircase, who was fond of natural history, kept a hedgehog, unknown to Sewell, and the creature sometimes strayed. One night, Sewell, hearing something scuttling about the room, jumped out of bed to see what it was, and came with his bare foot down on the hedgehog: naturally, for some little time, he did not walk quite easily.

Sewell objected to University Commissions ¹. He said the Colleges could and should reform themselves. All old laws tend to become obsolete, and much is gradually dropped or adapted to new requirements. Let the Colleges make the necessary changes, throw open the close fellowships and scholarships, at least in part, and public opinion would support them. Unfortunately there were two objections to this view—plausible as he always made his views; first that the favoured districts would not give up the close endowments without an Act of Parliament, and secondly that a large part of the Oxford fellows opposed an obstinate non possumus to every change, and appealed to the intentions of the founders, which few of them carried out either as to residence or study. The only resource to compel the performance of the trust, or to carry out the changes made necessary by the lapse of time, was to call in the intervention of the sovereign power, the State, which was done at last in 1854. Even then only 3 Colleges, Exeter, Lincoln, and Corpus, availed themselves of the privilege allowed them of drawing up their own statutes. The remaining Colleges left it to the Commissioners to draw up 'Ordinances' for them. Sewell wrote a squib called The University Commission or Lord John Russell's Postbag (an idea taken from Thomas Moore), issued anonymously at Oxford in 1850 in 4 parts, and J. T. B. Landon wrote, anonymously, two supplements to it, called Eureka, 1850 and 1853.

Sewell did a considerable thing in founding the Colleges of S. Columba near Dublin and Radley near Oxford. His books are forgotten, but his memory will survive as the founder of Radley. A sad disregard of economy in carrying out his ideas loaded him with debts, which marred the happiness of his later years, and severed his connection with Radley College over which he presided; but the work was taken up by other hands, and continues to flourish.

J. B. Morris, a fair scholar and theologian, was one of the most curious men of that excited time. In 1842 he gained the prize for an 'Essay towards the Conversion of Learned and Philosophical Hindus.' Newman says of him¹, 'he is a most simple-minded, conscientious fellow, but as little possessed of tact or common sense as he is great in other departments. He had to take my church in my absence. I had cautioned him against extravagances in S. Mary's pulpit, as he had given some specimens in that line once before. What does he do on S. Michael's day but preach a sermon, not simply on angels, but on his one subject, for which he has a monomania, of fasting; nay, and say that it was a good thing, whereas angels feasted on festivals, to make the brute creation fast on fast days, so I am told. May he (salvis ossibus suis) have a fasting horse the next time he goes steeple-chasing. Well, this was not all. You may conceive how the Heads of Houses, Cardwell, Gilbert, &c., fretted under this; but the next Sunday he gave them a more extended exhibition, si quid possit. He preached to them, totidem verbis, the Roman doctrine of the Mass; and, not content with that, added in energetic terms, that every one was an unbeliever, carnal, and so forth, who did not hold it. To this he added other speculations of his own still more objectionable. This was too much for any Vice-Chancellor. In consequence he was had up before him; his sermon officially examined; and he formally admonished; and the Bishop written to. The Bishop is to read his sermon, and I have been obliged to give my judgment on it, which is not favourable, nor can be. I don't suppose much more will be done, but it is very unpleasant. The worst part is that the Vice-Chancellor [Gilbert] has not said a single word to me, good or bad, and has taken away his family from S. Mary's. I cannot but hope that he will have the good sense to see that this is a mistake.'

Morris and some others led a very ascetic life. All through Lent Morris took no food till sundown, and then only two handfuls of peas which he immersed in a little saucepan till they were soft enough for mastication. Dalgairns nearly lost his life at the close of the Lent of 1840; for 36 hours before Good Friday he had abstained from food altogether; late on the evening of Holy Thursday his scout found him lying on the floor, and he would not have recovered from his swoon but for prompt help. Froude (Remains i. 49–50, 212) remarks that fasting incapacitated him for work or thinking.

Morris' conversation consisted largely in turning the English Church into ridicule. He passed his time in rooms in the front Tower, reading the Fathers, and cutting jokes upon our stepmother, the Church of England. Just before his secession the Bursar named him University preacher, to show that his brother fellows did not mistrust his loyalty to the Church. He accepted the nomination quite cordially, and went over almost immediately. The College naturally thought this an ungenerous return for their confidence. But Morris found that his convictions were no longer such as were consistent with the obligations incumbent on a fellow of the College at that day, and he resigned his fellowship. Morris lived in London during the latter part of his life, in very poor circumstances. Old friends would make him come and dine, but after two or three times, when he found his attempts at converting them a failure, he would refuse to see them again. His special devotion was to the Virgin, and he wrote a book called Taleetha Koomee, to show how Christ's words 'Damsel, I say unto thee, Arise' were a type and prophecy of the Assumption of the Virgin. Once when walking with a friend by a fine new church, his friend said, 'Who will be worshipped there, Morris, in fifty years' time?' and he answered, 'Either Mary, or Mary Anne!' Other persons have shared Morris' belief that posterity will run into one of two opposite extremes, and that either Romanism or Socialism will be the dominant power in the future. But the dilemma is a very unsafe argument.

He was the last believer in the Phœnix¹, and his letter about it is a good illustration of the fanciful reasoning of that time. 'If an animal existed which served a particular prophetical function when the reality had been in one Person, there might be no more need of it, and so it might become extinct, if it is extinct... All dispensations of Providence contain anomalies, and so the anomalousness of the Phœnix seems to be almost positive evidence to induce one to believe it.' The reader who consults the writings of that troubled time may smile or sigh over them. Morris was a very likeable man. T. Mozley² says, 'My sufferings at the hands of "Jack Morris" I have already described. But people love those most they have taken most pains with. What would I give to have a day with him now, and hear his searchings and ramblings into the region of the supernatural! not but that all nature was supernatural in his eyes.'

But in the turmoil of the Tractarian movement the proper work of the University and of the Colleges had not been wholly neglected. There were other men who were carrying on the regular teaching of the College with very different aims and interests; and Frederick Denison Maurice refers with deep gratitude to the kindness and generosity shown him by Jacobson (afterwards Bishop of Chester) and J. L. Richards (afterwards Rector 3). Jacobson, a friend of Sterling, had arranged that Maurice should enter at Exeter, and be allowed to count his Cambridge terms. Jacobson writes, 'As to your talk, about not keeping next term—were you not just beginning, before the long vacation, to do something like an ordinary mortal? Is there a chance of your doing half as much at home? Would anybody but a feelosofer the likes of you have set to work to write a new three-volume novel [Eustace Conway]. As to money I have no doubt that I shall be able to help you. Indeed I know that I shall without any inconvenience; so don't go and borrow dishonestly, neither stay away rusticating and psychologizing, but come here and mind your books like a good boy. I see every reason for your coming, and so did Sterling.' Richards writes, 'I hope you will allow me to do for you what I have done before now for other pupils, which is, advance any money you require for your immediate use, and that you will come up and keep the term. I recommend you to get the examination over as soon as possible. It might be more for your interest to aim a little lower than your merits might justly entitle you to aspire to, than to encounter the anxiety and expense which a lengthened time of preparation must entail.' The confidence and friendly tone between Maurice and the tutors shows how the Tutorial system acted when properly worked. Maurice soon betook himself to the real work of his life, a prolonged effort to reach the mind of the working man, and help him to improve his condition. He thought that the Church of England, as an institution, ought to grapple with contemporary forms of social evil, so as to exhibit Christianity as the true source of every effective social amelioration. If the movement had affected him, he soon took his own line, and after 1848 many others did the same. 'Experience like a tide soaks all absorbing in,' and the present leaders of the movement have their minds opened to the claims of Criticism 1, and still more to the position of Labour and the need of a higher organization of work. When Canon Scott-Holland refers to Maurice's Kingdom of Christ as authoritative; when Mr. Gore presides over a meeting in Exeter College hall, held in 1893 to consider the claims of labour, and Mr. Tom Mann is one of the chief speakers, it is clear that the old views have changed. The early leaders took no interest in the efforts of Maurice and Kingsley to improve the condition of the working classes in London and elsewhere 2.

The interest in the controversy between the Churches of England and of Rome began to flag. The secession of 1845 cleared the air, and the political events of 1848 turned men's minds into other channels. They no longer discussed such questions as, whether the Church of England was bound by the four first or six first General Councils, whether England was in a state of schism or no, whether our position was one of continuous appeal to a General Council, &c. The question too of University Reform and the relation of the Professoriate to the Collegiate or Tutorial system attracted general attention.

² Newman's imagination was attracted (Letters ii. 285) by the account of the Capuchin in I Promessi Sposi.

Here we may put together some notices about the more material aspects of the College. There have been considerable changes in the buildings during the last hundred years. In 1778 the Library was rebuilt after a design by the Rev. William Crowe. On 8 May 1788 it was resolved to remodel the front and windows of the College. On 10 June 1820 a new porch for the Hall, surmounted by a clock, was completed: the porch cost £103 118 3d, the clock £125 128 3d; a water tank also was constructed in the Library Court, for £88 17s 3d, containing 350 gallons. In 1821 a servants' hall was constructed for the use of the Common Room 1 and Bursary in the adjoining cellar, with a passage under the Bursary, at a cost of £309 3s. As far back as 10 Nov. 1740 it was ordered that a lamp should be put up to light the quadrangle (Wordsworth 688). Gas lights (Wordsworth 408, 410) appear in 1820, perhaps to give way in turn to the electric light in 1894. The new buildings east of the gate in Broad Street were commenced 1833, and completed May 1834, they cost £3574 115 3d. In 1833-4 also the buildings from the Hall round to the Chapel were new faced towards the Turl with Bath stone, oriel windows inserted, and the tower considerably altered; the upper part of the tower was found to be so weak that the face of it was made to recede somewhat, and four turrets added to carry off the awkward appearance occasioned by the projection of the quoins; the garrets on this side were raised considerably; the inner face of the tower towards the quadrangle was also refaced. In 1836 the interior of the Chapel was repaired and coloured and the glass cleaned.

In 1854 New Buildings were begun with a tower facing Broad

Street; they contained 18 sets of rooms in addition to a large room over the gateway in the Tower, and the first contract was for £3976. Next year the foundation of the New Library was laid, the first contract being for £2988, exclusive of the foundations. (The commissioners allowed first £4500, and then £1200 more, of the Library funds to be thus used, see Reg. 1854, and 8 May 1858.) In 1856 a new Rectory House was built, together with eight sets of rooms between the Rectory and the Old Broad St. Buildings; the first contract was for £5000. In 1856 the Chapel was begun, the first estimate being for £7045, with £500 for a turret, and £405 for doors, floor, &c. but all these estimates were much exceeded. The architect was Sir Gilbert Scott, who had reported that the North wall of the Chapel was in a very dangerous state, but there was great difficulty in pulling it down. The first stone of the Chapel was laid by the Bishop of Rupert's Land (David Anderson, an old scholar of the College) 29 Nov. 1856. It was consecrated on S. Luke's day 18 Oct. 1859 (Cox 426) by the Bishop of Oxford in the presence of the Visitor, Bp. Phillpotts. The money for these buildings had been accumulating for some years, the late Rector J. L. Richards gave £1000 and many persons then or previously Fellows of the College gave £100 each (which was nearly the value of a year's fellowship at that time), some of the Fellows also each giving a couple of the marble or serpentine pillars, and great liberality was shown by old members of the College; the screen and organ were given by the undergraduates. The organ has been twice reconstructed since that time. The new Chapel occupies the site of the former Rector's house at the east end of the old Chapel, in addition to the ground on which the old Chapel stood. As part of an old City Ditch ran close to the north side, very deep foundations were required, and many cartloads of stone besides all the stone work of the old Chapel were used in these foundations. The new Rector's house was built on the site of the old S. Helen's Quadrangle, which included 22 sets of rooms, so that there are only 14 sets of rooms gained in addition to the previously existing accommodation.

Many portraits were placed in the Hall during this period. In 1780 William Peters painted a picture of Walter de Stapeldon (said to be copied from a portrait of Bossuet), and it was placed at the east end of the Hall¹. In 1785 William Holwell painted a picture of Sir William Petre and gave it to the College. In 1832 a portrait of Bishop Prideaux was placed in the Hall. It is a copy from an original picture at Laycock Abbey in Wilts, made by an artist called Smith, who made another copy for Dr. Burton, the Regius Professor of Divinity. Smith also copied the picture of the first Earl of Shaftesbury at the Charterhouse in 1834. The portrait of Rector Jones was painted by Phillipps 1833, but the engraving by Cousins, who introduced some alterations, is a better resemblance. The portrait of J. T. Coleridge was painted by Pickersgill in 1835, but it is not so good a likeness as the engraving from Mrs. Carpenter's portrait of the Judge. The portrait of Sir Charles Lyell is a good copy. That of Rector Cole by John Opie the Cornish artist is an original and good.

In 1833 sermons were delivered in the Chapel every Sunday evening for the first time, the duty being undertaken by Richards the subrector, and Sewell. In 1871 the Visitor ratified a shortening of the week day service in the Chapel. A musical service has been added on Sundays, Saints' Days, and Eves, and the Organist Scholarships have brought forward several men of mark.

There have been disputes at different times about the respective rights of the Colleges and the City of Oxford. In 1843 the City of Oxford endeavoured to rate the Colleges to the Poor Rate and tried the case with Exeter College. A parishioner of S. Michael's was found to object to the rate, on the ground that Exeter College was not rated. The rate was referred to the Recorder to be amended, and he placed the College on the Rate Book. A distress was levied and some College plate taken. The College brought an action of trespass, and the issue was tried at the Summer Assizes, but a verdict was given for the College on three points, (1) That the Recorder had no jurisdiction under the Local Act which regulated the Poor Rate in Oxford; (2) That the Rector's lodgings should have been rated separately from the College; (3) That the old foundation of Exeter College is not in the parish of S. Michael's (see Jackson's Oxford Journal 20 July 1844). The city was therefore nonsuited; but the University felt that the exemption from the Poor Rate was unfair, and a friendly arrangement was come to on the question.

In 1846 the College settled a suit with the City about some ground lying on the south side of the old City wall and extending from the Turl to the wall that divides the College from the Theatre court, about 18 poles in length, and running from north to south about 3 poles from the City wall to the ancient part of the College (except a bit of ground called 'The Mount with the two studies,' a part of the freehold conveyed by the City to the College about 1780 and known as Mr. Alderman Wright's house in Prideaux buildings; this excepted piece may have been that on which two rooms stood, one above and one below, which adjoined the north side of the Rector's lodgings and the south side of Prideaux buildings, uniting the two). The buildings on that site at this time were a considerable portion of the Rector's lodgings, nearly the whole of the north aisle of the Chapel and about nine sets of rooms west of the Chapel. The City stated that the ground in question was leased to the College for 99 years from 1622; that this lease was surrendered 1682 and a fresh lease taken of 99 years from that date, and the City contended that from 1781 the College were tenants at will at a quit rent of £1, as it was doubtful if there was any subsequent transaction. The College now agreed to pay £2000 to the City for a conveyance in fee of the property, the £1 quit rent and any other acknowledgment to cease; the City was further to grant a new lease for the strip out of the street extending along the whole of the west and part of the south front of the College and held under the City for 1000 years from 1698-9. The fine and fees in 1682 were paid by Mr. Alderman Wright, and this may account for the absence of such a charge from the Rector's Computus of that year; it is explained in some degree by the fact that Alderman Wright obtained at this time a new lease of Rector Prideaux' house of North Hall by some arrangement with the College, for which the payment of the fine and fees may have been a consideration. The lease of 1682 and that for the 1000 years were however not to be found in the College archives (see Reg. 1741 1), and there was great difficulty about the whole matter. See Reg. pp. 99, 137. In 1849 the College bought of the City the fee of the site and buildings in Broad Street, heretofore held under lease, for £2100.

In 1848 the servants were all urged by the Rector to insure their lives and distinctly informed that, if they neglected to do so, no provision would be made by the College for them or their families. Nearly all insured their lives in sums varying from £200 to £500 (Reg. p. 149).

We may here put together a number of detached occurrences. On 9 July 1745 the Rector was allowed to invest £800, taken from the Common Chest, 'collybo vel trapezitis vel alicui alii mensae publicae nummariae,' so long had the old custom lasted of keeping money unemployed. At the same time it was proposed, and carried 8 Nov. (Bray dissenting) to sell part of the garden near the Radcliffe Library to the University. Few parts of Oxford have been more altered in their appearance than those which now form the Radcliffe Square. In 1821 Leadenhall was sold to Jesus College for £400.

On 2 Dec. 1788 a sum of five guineas annually was voted to Dr. Holmes for collating manuscripts of the Septuagint.

In 1793, 16 Colleges employed Bolton of Witney as brewer, as the Oxford brewers had raised the price per barrel from 30s to 32s by a combination: only three Colleges brewed for themselves, Merton, Queen's, and S. John's.

In 1794 the College gave £50 towards the Home Defence of the country. The Funds were so low that in 1797 the College bought £1000 consols at $50\frac{1}{4}$ per cent., thus giving only £503 15s, including commission of £1 5s.

On 11 Ap. 1818 £100 was voted to the Public Fund for building churches and chapels.

But who will give us a history of the social changes during this century 1, and tell us how constitutionals came in, just before Arnold's time, and have since been largely superseded by athletics; how the change of the dinner hour from 5 to 7 made afternoon teas a necessity and, more generally, how the habit of rising later and going to bed later has altered so many things in our daily life. This change brought in Sunday evening services¹, though the clergy at first opposed them as Methodistical. But the Evangelicals, as usual, led the way in this movement. Bowls used to be played in the College gardens after dinner, from 7 to 9 in the summer evenings; but, when the dinner hour moved on to 7, it was too late to play, as it got dark and the dew began to fall. For the same reason the custom of taking a walk in the summer evening has ceased. All games have altered. Football, which in Laud's time was played in the streets, and was therefore forbidden, has now reached a dignity which assimilates it to the tournaments of the Middle Ages. And Golf has conquered England as well as Scotland, and become a fanaticism. Cricket was always played, but was not such an institution or such a show as at present. The poet says truly:—

Then cricket rules the noontide hours,
And maidens in and out of teens
Peruse each other's lace and flowers,
And wonder what on earth it means.

But the maidens now know all about cricket, and Miss K. Gent reports ² that it is sometimes played at the Ladies' Halls. The benighted Londoner who thinks these Halls are frequented by long rows of pale heavy-eyed girls bending over books on a lovely summer afternoon, would be astonished to see the energy and animation which they devote to all sorts of games on the lawn.

The way in which men dressed in Keble's and Arnold's time now seems strange to us ³.

The order of gentlemen-commoners has disappeared. They dined at High Table with the fellows, and only attended such lectures as they liked. For these privileges they paid somewhat higher fees; and often bequeathed their silver tankards when they left to the College, or requested that their caution-money might be laid out in tankards for the use of the Hall; and some tankards still preserve their names. They at last objected to the fees, and were abolished. But the system suited some men who came up at a more advanced age, and wished to reside for a time at the University.

With the coming in of the Examination system, reading ceased to be contemptible, the Scholars of a College were no longer looked down on by the Commoners, and the greater facility of travel made readingparties common, commoner at one time than they are now. In olden days tutors taught their classes in their own rooms, now every College has lecture-rooms. Of course, as soon as the system of inter-collegiate lecturing came in, more space was required. And now there are not a few lady-students. The men's rooms too now boast sometimes of sofas and easy chairs, comforts unknown to the primitive age. The Indoor has grown with the growth of the Outdoor life. The sanded floors and spittoons of the common rooms gave way to carpets in the early part of this century. Dr. Lightfoot told us that, when it was first proposed to have a carpet, the then senior Fellow put his back against the door and said, 'Gentlemen, if you will introduce such a monstrous luxury, I will never enter this room again.' And he never did. One great modern improvement is the abundance of artificial light for reading in the evenings. Men once had not the genial inspiration of good candle-light or lamplight. The quite modern institution of tubbing in the mornings made it necessary to lay water on every floor of every staircase. The paving and lighting of the streets has been a great benefit. In 1770 there was no pavement in the High except before S. Mary's. The streets were paved with small pebbles, a depressed gutter ran down the middle of each street to collect the rain, and it was difficult to avoid being splashed with the filthy mud. Johnson used to stand astride over these kennels wrapt in meditation. It was the Commissioners' Act of 1771 that enabled some active-minded men in the University and City to effect valuable changes.

It is difficult to collect information about College Clubs. There was a Debating Society at Exeter in 1793 (Wordsworth 587). Sewell founded a Moral Philosophy Society that had some vogue. About 1839–41 there was a good Essay Club in Exeter, of which Powles, King, Morton, Langhorne, Northcote, Cowburn, Crosse, and Ewart were members. Powles published an Essay on Greek Banquets, and R. J. King two Essays, 'On the Supernatural Beings of the Middle Ages,' and 'On the origin of the Romance Literature of the xii and xiii centuries, chiefly with a reference to its Mythology.' Ernest Hawkins was connected with the Oxford Club of the Ramblers, which was kept up in London at his rooms in Vernon Place under the title of the Vernon (C. H. O. Daniel, Our Memories, 89).

Most Colleges have their debating club, Exeter has its Stapeldon Club, which also acts as a committee of the Junior Common Room. Not to speak of Shakespeare clubs and chess clubs, the Musical Society is of repute, even beyond our College walls, as are also the Dialectical Society and Theological Seminar. These Societies and Seminars take the place of the mediaeval Disputationes in Aula. Not that they are descended from them, but that similar needs produce similar institutions. For there is something in the collision of intellects, in the living sparks struck out in conversation and discussion, that supplies a stimulus not given by merely reading books; and the recluse student misses a good deal by not mingling with his equals, and hearing their objections and opposing views. Almost more than anything else, this tends to clear up a man's mind and, even if he does not succeed in convincing his opponents, he often succeeds in gaining some access to fresh vistas of thought.

But Oxford has a social as well as an intellectual side, and athletics take a very leading place ¹. Mark Pattison once said, as he was walking round the Parks, that the main business of the University consisted in cricket and croquet, varied, occasionally, by a little reading and writing. Exeter College was the first to start an athletic gathering; some even ventured to say, the first in the world, since the Olympic Games. The following is an authentic account ². 'The year was 1850. It was the evening after the College Steeplechase (vulgarly called the College Grind). Some four or five congenial spirits were sipping their wine in the rooms of R. F. Bowles (brother to John Bowles, the well-known coursing squire, of Milton Hill). Besides the host there were James Aitken, George Russell (now Sir George Russell, of Swallowfield), Marcus Southwell, and Halifax Wyatt. The topic was the event of the day, and the unsatisfactory process of negotiating a country on Oxford hacks. "Sooner than ride such a brute again," said Wyatt, whose horse had landed into a road on his head instead of his legs, "I'd run across two miles of country on foot." "Well, why not?" said the others, "let's have a College foot grind;" and so it was agreed. Bowles, who always had a sneaking love for racing-born and bred as he was near the training grounds on the Berkshire Downssuggested a race or two on the flat as well. Again the party agreed. The conditions were drawn up, stakes named, officials appointed, and the first meeting for Athletic Sports inaugurated. On the first afternoon there was to be a chase, two miles across country, twenty-four jumps, £1 entry, 10s forfeit; and on a subsequent afternoon, a quarter of a mile on the flat, 300 yards, 100 yards, 140 yards over ten flights of hurdles 10 yards apart, one mile, and some other stakes for "beaten horses," open to members of Exeter College only. Notice of the meeting, with a list of the stakes, was posted in the usual placea black board in the porter's lodge. Plenty of entries were made, in no stake less than ten; for the steeplechase there were twenty-four who started.

'The course chosen was on a flat marshy farm at Binsey, near the Seven Bridge Road; it was very wet, some fields swimming in water, the brooks bank high, and a soft take-off, which meant certain immersion for most, if not all, the competitors. Twenty-four went to the post, not twenty-four hard-conditioned athletes in running toggery, but twenty-four strong active youngsters in cricket shoes and flannels, some in fair condition, some very much the reverse, but all determined to do or die. Plenty of folk on horse and foot came to see this novelty, for in modern as in ancient Athens men were always on the look out for some new thing; and in this instance, judging from the excitement and the encouragement given to the competitors, the novelty was much appreciated.

'As about half of the twenty-four starters left the post as if they were only going to run a few hundred yards, they were necessarily soon done with. Aitken, gradually coming through all these, had the best of the race until one field from home, where Wyatt and J. Scott, who had been gradually creeping up, ran level. They jumped the last fence together. Wyatt, who landed on firmer ground, was quickest on his legs, and ran in a comparatively easy winner. There was a tremendous struggle for the second place, which was just obtained by Aitken. The time, according to the present notion of running, must no doubt have been slow, but the ground was deep, the fences big, and all the competitors were heavily handicapped by wet flannels bedraggling their legs.

'Of the flat races, which were held in Port Meadow, on unlevelled turf, no authentic record has been preserved of all the events. The hurdle-race was won by E. Knight, R. F. Bowles being second. The 100 yards by Wyatt, and he also won one or two of the other shorter races; but for the mile he had to carry some pounds of shot in an old-fashioned shot-belt round his loins, and was second to Aitken, who won. Listen to this, ye handicappers of the present day!

'In 1851 Exeter followed up the autumn meeting of 1850 with a summer meeting on Bullingdon, and we think that both a high and broad jump were introduced in the programme. Lincoln was the next to take up the idea, then a college in Cambridge in 1855. Balliol, Wadham, Pembroke and Worcester followed the example in 1856, Oriel 1857, Merton 1858, Christ Church 1859, and in 1861 separate college meetings had become general. At the close of 1860 the Oxford University Sports, open to all undergraduates, owed their foundation to the exertions of the Rev. Edwin Arkwright of Merton. After this, the thing went like wildfire, spreading simultaneously on every side; but after colleges and schools, we believe that the Civil Service was the first association formed for the promotion of Athletic Sports, in 1864.'

Exeter was the third club to have a cricket ground of its own. Brasenose and the Bullingdon club had grounds in 1835, and Exeter in 1844.

It may be interesting also to give a brief summary of the boat races, for the latter part of which I am indebted to Falconer Madan Esq.

In 1824 Exeter was at the head of the river in the famous White Boat, of which there is a picture. The boats at that time were crowded into Iffley Lock and got away in regular order, thus allowing each in turn a considerable start. There were only three boats on the river that year, Christ Church, Brasenose and Exeter. Exeter bumped Brasenose the first night, and then Christ Church took off. The crew were J. T. Wareing, W. D. Dick, S. Parr, Douglas (? Thomas Douglass), J. C. Clutterbuck (fellow 1822), J. G. Cole (fellow 1825).

Roger Pocklington, stroke H. B. Bulteel (fellow 1823). The coxswain was Joe Pocklington (who took the name of Senhouse). Outriggers were not yet invented, and the men rowed in tall hats 1. The stroke's son and coxswain's son were both afterwards strokes of the University Eight. The original stroke was Henry Moresby, but he was displaced. He came from Plymouth and persuaded them to let him get a boat built there. It was brought round by sea to Southampton, and old Davis at Oxford arranged for bringing it up on a carriage, supposed to be the first time a boat travelled by land. When that genial old geologist, so well known in Torquay, Edward Vivian, was up at a Gaudy some years ago, and went in to see the junior Common Room, he looked up at the picture of the White Boat and said, 'Ah! that was the year I matriculated.' The men crowded round him as if he was a survival from prehistoric times, and he had to tell the whole story. He told them too that when he and William Pengelly explored Kent's Cavern, the Torquay book club expelled him, geology being then looked on as heretical 2.

Beginning with 1837, Exeter has been at the head of the river thirty-seven days, viz.: during all 1838 (6 times), all 1857 (8), all 1858 (8), 1859 (1), 1882 (2), all 1883 (6), all 1884 (6), keeping her place once during three years, and again during two. In the Torpids, beginning with 1852, she was at the head fifty-nine days, viz.: 1854 (2), all 1855 (6), all 1856 (6), all 1857 (6), 1858 (4), 1859 (4), all 1860 (6), 1863 (2), all 1864 (6), all 1865 (6), 1866 (5), all 1868 (6). In number of days (59) she is second only to Brasenose (103), but who can match Brasenose? There is a tradition that whenever the great chesnut tree in Exeter garden stretches out its boughs so as to touch Brasenose, Brasenose is fated that year to lose her place on the river; this happened in 1892, but usually her oarsmen have 'gained the weathergage of fate.' The Exeter colours are: Jersey, white trimmed with magenta; Jacket, magenta trimmed with black; Hat, black straw with magenta ribbon.

The 5th of November seldom troubles the present authorities, but it was not so in 1843. Some of the men who had bought explosives which they could not let off on the regular day stored them up until the 12th, when they exploded two small barrels of them in the quad at 2 in the morning, causing some damage and a noise that was heard far over Oxford. The 'dons' failed to discover the culprits. One of the conspirators, George Seton, now a Scotch advocate, famed for heraldic and genealogical lore, published (in London) 'The College Lark' in three cantos, now a very rare work. Another of the conspirators was E. H. Kittoe, V. of Boldmere, Birmingham (just dead, 22 Feb. 1894).

The Library contains about 40,000 printed books, and 184 manuscripts. Among the latter are two parchment Latin Psalters, finely gilded and illuminated. One is unique, in that it was the family bible of the Lancastrian and Tudor Houses 1. From the joint occurrence of the Royal arms and those of Bohun, and the words Domine salvum fac Hunfridum servum tuum in a collect at the end, it was probably written for Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, grandson of Edward I, who died 1361; and its probable date is about the time of the battle of Crecy, 1346. It may have passed to the royal family through his grandniece Mary, who married Henry IV in 1380 and died 1394. Her sister Eleanor married Edward III's son, Thomas of Woodstock, after 1374. It seems specially to have belonged to the Queens, for on the first leaf we have This boke ys myn Elysabeth ye gwene; and below This boke is myn Katherine the gwene, i. e. Elizabeth of York and Catherine of Aragon: and it may have been the book from which the royal children learnt their Latin.

In the Calendar are births, deaths and marriages of the royal family up to the time of Henry VIII, and no doubt it passed to Elizabeth, who gave it to Sir William Petre, and he gave it to the College which he had refounded. It is the sole source for the date of the birth of Henry VII, i.e. 28 Jan. 145%, 'the noble king Harry the vii was borne festo Agnetis secundo ² A. D. 1456, and wedded queen Elisabeth festo Sancte Prisce virginis [i.e. 18 Jan.] A.D. 1485, after the compteng of England.' The initial letters give the Biblical History of Genesis and Exodus, and at the end many figures of Saints. Folio 34 is a beautifully coloured double page, with two large and several small medallion pictures, and in the left hand margin musical instruments 1. dulcimer, rebeck, recorder, &c. At the end of the book is a metrical version of the Commandments—

i Love God aboven alle thing

ii Swere nat fals nor in vayn bi hym. iii Kepe the holy dayes devoutely iiii Obeye thy fadirs reverently.

v Slee noo man bi worde nor dede vi Bere noo false witnesse I the reed.

vii Steel nat but paye thi detts truely viii Doe thou never noo lychery. ix Thyn neyboures spouse or goods worldly desire nat in hert consentengly.

The other Psalter², written more towards the end of the 14th century, has a series of very fine Initial Letters, of English work (the Calendar too contains English Saints, e.g. S. Swithin), and several large illuminations. One of them represents David dancing before the Ark, while Michal is pointing her finger at him in scorn from the balcony of a fortress, just by the portcullis. Another shows Absalom caught in a tree, and Joab in the garb of a medieval knight is running him through with a lance. On Joab's golden shield is a black lion rampant. Below, David, seated on an uncomfortable looking gate, is tearing his hair as the messenger brings him the news. The first verse in the Calendar is 'Prima dies mensis et septima truncat ut ensis.' The Illuminator of those days took special delight in his Initial Letters-

> Finished down to the leaf and the snail, Down to the eyes on the peacock's tail; There now is a swallow in her nest, I can just catch a glimpse of her head and breast, And will sketch her thus in her quiet nook, For the margin of my Gospel Book; and in the luxuriant leafage, which starting from the Initial creeps round and clasps the whole page.

Among the invocations of Saints is Sancte Lodowice. At the end are twenty-seven Latin lines on the kings of England, from Alfred to Richard II (regnat), with the years of their reigns and their burial

The Library has the advantage of looking out on one of the pleasantest gardens in Oxford, an advantage shared by the reading room of the Bodleian. They say that gem-engravers, when their eyes are tired, look on a green emerald for a little rest and refreshment; perhaps the green turf and the trees of a garden may have the same effect. There is a tradition that the winding path in the garden was planned by Hogarth, to illustrate his idea of the line of beauty—but it is not easy to give any authority for such traditions, except what they say to you in Italy, ci si dicea.

This sketch of the history of the College in its relation to the history of the University may fitly be brought to a close with the first half of the present century 1. The old order has passed away, and a new state of things has been created by the action of the University Commissions of 1854 and 1877, and by the Universities Tests Act of 1871. The executive Commission of 1854, following the Commission of inquiry which reported in 1852, made some additions to the Professoriate, but its chief work was the removal of local restrictions on endowments. At the great mass of the Colleges the Scholarships had been confined to the natives of certain localities, and the Fellowships were bound by the same restrictions, which were to a large extent removed in 1854. In that year, before the new statutes came into operation, there were about 130 Scholarships in the University which were open, or might be thrown open in default of fit candidates from the favoured localities. At the present time there are not less than 420 such Scholarships besides the Close Scholarships and Exhibitions still retained, and a large number of Open Exhibitions of recent foundation. At Exeter College the Fellowships, with the exception of the Chaplain Fellowship to which the Dean and Chapter of Exeter still nominated, were thrown open in 1854, and were reduced in number to fifteen, the revenues of the suppressed Fellowships being applied to the foundation of Open Scholarships. clerical restriction on the Fellowships (except the Chaplain Fellowship) was partly removed, as a Fellowship under the new statutes was not vacated through failure to take Orders until the end of fifteen years from election, and any one who had served the College for ten years as Tutor or Lecturer was allowed to retain his Fellowship for life, if he remained unmarried and did not hold a benefice or possess property of more than a certain value. The Commission of 1854 on the other hand, in the case of the Rectorship, made the obligation of Holy Orders more binding than before, as this obligation had previously arisen only from the attachment of the Vicarage of Kidlington to the office (without any institution), and there had been some doubt whether the Rector might not still be a layman, and perform the duties of the Vicarage by deputy. All the Fellowships and Scholarships were still restricted to members of the Church of England.

The Universities Tests Act removed this restriction, except from the Chaplain Fellowship, but the Fellowships were still vacated at the end of fifteen years unless the holder were in Orders, or had earned his exemption from this obligation by service to the College. The Rectorship was still confined to persons in Orders.

The University Commission of 1877 carried still further the changes which had been introduced in 1854, and in 1871. The conception of the University as an institution distinct from the Colleges had been already revived, and had found expression in the statute for the admission of Non-Collegiate Students in 1868. The Commission of 1877 developed this conception, and endowed the University at the expense of the Colleges, giving at the same time a further extension to the Professoriate. The Commission also to a great extent released Fellows in the various Colleges from the restrictions of celibacy, while it made all Fellowships terminable, some absolutely, others concurrently with the College office to which they were attached. It sanctioned the establishment of a pension scheme for College officers, and it removed the obligation to take Holy Orders from all Fellowships, except a few which were still retained as endowments for persons discharging clerical duties in the Colleges, and from almost all the Headships including the Rectorship of Exeter College. This state of things, so far as the clerical restriction is concerned, is not unlike that contemplated by Stapeldon, as the Founder originally required only one Fellow, the Chaplain, to be in Holy Orders. In dealing with the Scholarships of this College the Commission did not alter the statutes of the former Commission, but it paid more regard to the wants of poor men 1, as it gave the

College power to found Exhibitions, while it limited all Exhibitions both in the present, and in the future, to persons who are in need of assistance at the University. An audit by authorised accountants is now required.

The changes which have taken place at Exeter College since 1854 are very similar to those which have been experienced throughout Oxford. There has been an irresistible movement drawing the English Universities into the current of national life in England 1. What has seemed to be a revolution has been to a large extent a return to the original conception of the relation of the Universities to the nation, with such alterations as have been made necessary by the course of time. The members of Exeter College welcomed the inevitable change. Exeter was one of three Colleges², which alone among the Colleges of the University co-operated with the Commission of 1854, and drew up its own statutes with the sanction of the Commission 3. It therefore enjoyed the privilege of altering them after the expiry of the Commission with the consent of its Visitor, the Bishop of Exeter. In 1877 a new body of statutes had been prepared by the College for the acceptance of the Visitor. These statutes contained most of the provisions which were afterwards approved by the Commissioners. The changes which have been introduced in the last forty years have no doubt had some injurious effects; but, like most changes which have become inevitable, they have done more good than harm, and have had many compensating advantages. When there was a number of Fellowships restricted to natives of Devon and Cornwall, many of the ablest men born in those counties held Fellowships in the College for a time, and reflected credit on it by their distinction in after life, that rich men's sons should be elected, as now, to Open Scholarships, but mainly as an honour, while Scholarships of the full value should be reserved for poorer men. This is one of the ideas now being brought forward on the subject. See Boase's Oxford 118, Burgon 186, 221, 233.

such as the late Sir John Coleridge, the present Lord Chief Justice of England, Mr. Froude, Mr. Justice Kekewich, and Mr. H. F. Tozer 1. But the freedom now accorded to the College, by which it is permitted to offer a Fellowship to any rising scholar or man of science, to some extent atones for the loss it has sustained. Even before 1854 the Petrean Fellowships had been accessible to the natives of several English counties, and had added many distinguished members to the College. Among these we may be allowed to mention Josiah Forshall, the editor of Wiclif's Bible, Professors Rawlinson, Ince, and Palgrave, the late Bishops Jacobson of Chester, and Mackarness of Oxford, Mr. Justice Chitty, the Bishop of Southwell, the late Canon George Butler, and Canon G. H. Curteis. Since 1854 while Professors Holland, Bywater, Ray Lankester, and Pelham, and Sir C. A. Turner (formerly Chief Justice of Madras) became Fellows by open competition, the late Professor Moseley, and Professor Sanday have been nominated to Fellowships in recent years; and Professor W. M. Ramsay, now of Aberdeen and formerly Professor of Classical Archaeology at Oxford, was enabled by the timely offer of a Fellowship to prosecute those researches in Phrygia which have added so much to the reputation of English scholarship 2. The Chaplain Fellowship is no longer in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter; but the Stapeldon Scholars, who in some respects more nearly than the modern Fellows answer to Stapeldon's idea of a Fellow of a College, still maintain the local connexion of Devon and Cornwall with Exeter College; and the old attachment between those counties and the College has by no means died out. The removal of the celibate restriction has no doubt materially affected the social life within the Colleges. it was impossible any longer to maintain the old system. former times, when laxer notions were prevalent, it had not conduced

² An unusually large number of Professorships has been held in recent years by present or former members of the College. To the names of Fellows or Ex-Fellows mentioned in the text may be added those of two former Scholars of the College, Professor Napier, and Mr. W. Baldwin Spencer, formerly Fellow of Lincoln, and now Professor of Biology in the University of Melbourne. Professor Butler of S. Andrews, son of Canon George Butler, was a commoner. Nor should we omit to mention here the names of Sir Gardner Wilkinson and Sir Charles Lyell, who early in this century were also commoners of the College.

to morality in the University. Dr. Macbride, who was elected to a Fellowship in 1800, when pressed to write the reminiscences of his early days, declined to do so on the ground of the scandals which he would have to record. There were not a few concealed marriages (Wordsworth 569)1. The religious movement in Oxford, and the general improvement in social morality had raised the standard of practice, and wiped away these reproaches; but when the majority of Fellows of Colleges no longer took Holy Orders, or had any other profession than that of College Tutor, it was impossible to retain the ablest men in Oxford without removing the obligation of celibacy. Its removal has been attended with a great increase of literary and scientific activity. It has necessarily been supplemented by a pension scheme which will enable the Colleges to provide for the retirement of men who have rendered them service, before they become incapacitated for their work. The life of the undergraduates in Colleges has been far less affected by legislative changes than might have been anticipated. Fashions vary from generation to generation. The University examinations are constantly undergoing changes, and are generally increasing in range and thoroughness. But the general character of College life has been little altered. Many of those who lamented the abolition of tests, and of clerical restrictions on Fellowships, foreboded a lapse into irreligion, or at least into indifferentism. It is true that compulsory attendance at Chapel has been abolished; but there never was a time within living memory when there were so many voluntary religious associations, or when there was so much genuine and intelligent interest in religious questions among the undergraduates. In fact the Universities reflect the state of feeling and opinion outside. The most prominent characteristic of University history in the present century is the action on the Universities of the various movements of thought on speculative, religious, political and social questions, and the counter-action of the Universities on these. Some people may regret that the University has ceased to be, if indeed it ever was, the home of lost causes; but an institution that was only the home of lost causes might perhaps in these days be somewhat peremptorily called to account. Yet, although the Universities have participated deeply in all the changes that have affected the life of the nation, their influence must continue to be in some respects essentially conservative. The best knowledge, which it is their special province to acquire and to transmit, is independent of the fashion of the day. The Universities have also exhibited a type of life which with many slight variations has maintained a strong identity. Hence both for University men and for the world at large the history of the Universities has had a peculiar attraction; and so long as it maintains its continuity, a sketch of the varying fortunes of one of the older Colleges of Oxford will not be without its interest both for the general reader and for the members of that College for whom it was originally designed.

Computi Rectoris, from the year 13241. From about 1396 the Computi often omit the Christian names of the Fellows, and hence some difficulty arises. References such as 'autumn 1407' belong to the Computi. The last parchment Computus is that for autumn 1566: in the previous one there occurs 'vid pro cartaceo quodam libello in quo inscribenda sunt singula quoquo tempore a Rectore recepta et recipienda.' This paper book, marked H, runs from autumn 1566 to autumn 1639. A similar book, marked B, runs on to 1734. More modern books follow. There are also Bursars' Books from the Stuart times, and Quarterly Books, and Kitchen Books, and Promus' Books (which are duplicates of the Bursars' Books), but some in each series are missing. There is one Quarterly book 1596-8, but the series begins with 1603, though with a gap between 1637 and 1651. There are Kitchen (Buttery) books of 1593, 1596, 1602, 1603, and then 1624. The Promus' books begin at Lady-day 1762, but have been preserved only when the Bursars' books are missing. There are also some 'Cate books' from 1670. All these books contain curious information, e.g. 'the size of bread: a penney white is 10 oz. 14 p.zv., a penney wheaten 16.6, a penney household 21.13; Feb. 12 1745 a penney white 9.12, wheaten 14.10, household 19.8.

Caution books, due to Henry Tozer, who remodelled the mode of keeping the accounts. The first book begins 30 May 1629 (transcribed 1639 from an older book), but the place of birth or abode is not entered until Feb. 166 $\frac{6}{9}$, when John Hearne began the practice, perhaps owing to the disputes which led to the contested election of Burrington and Burgh. The second book runs from 17 July 1686 to 28 Jan. 174 $\frac{3}{4}$, the third from 3 Feb. 174 $\frac{3}{4}$ to May 1823. The first index extends from 1629 to 1776, the second from 1776 to 1843.

Matriculation books, beginning 16 May 1768.

The College Register begins 25 Oct. 1539, but the binder has put 1541-2 first by mistake. The second Register runs from 30 June 1619 to 1737; the third from 1737 to 1824 and has an index. The first has this entry, 'Hunc librum emebat Johannes French Rector huius Collegii A. D. 1541.' Francis Webber entered the birthplaces of the Fellows chosen during his Rectorship in a small catalogue, and many testimonials for Orders, of Fellows and others, in the Register. Rector Stinton made a volume of Excerpts from the Registers.

Old List of Fellows, made by W. Wyatt, Fellow 1562.

There are no contemporary lists of Fellows prior to the commencement of the College Register on 25 Oct. 1539. The previous names are given as they stand in the Computus Rectoris of each term, and as a Fellow is only named there when his commons are diminished by his going out of residence for a time, the lists are anything but complete, especially as some of the Rectors' Accounts are missing. Not a few men must have been Fellows for some time before their names appear. It is also difficult to assign the Fellows to their respective counties. The Chaplain is sometimes known by the larger yearly payment he receives. Some of the names belong to well known Devonshire or Cornish families, or the Fellows are ascertained from other sources to have been born in one of those counties. The dates when one Fellow vacated and another was elected in his place are sometimes given in the computi, but the records are too imperfect to offer much help of this kind. Help is sometimes gained from other sources. Thus William Franke is given as Fellow in 1370; but, as a document of 26 Oct. 1371 calls him Senior Fellow, he must have been Fellow at least as early as 1362. The same document shows that John Skylling, who occurs as Fellow in 1385, must have been Fellow as early as 1371. See also the case of W. de Heghes 1337. It is not till 1372 that a complete list of 15 Fellows can be made out. To quote the names under one year from the Old list will show its imperfection: '1423 Edmund Fitchet A.M. and Rector, Benet, Treinges, J. Brente, J. Beawcombe A.M., Stone, Zeate, W. David A.M.; here Treinges is a misreading for Walter Trengoff, Zeate a misreading for Yeate, and four have no Christian names assigned them. By comparing the names as given in the text it will be seen how little help was to be got from the Old list, and how necessary it was to reconstruct the whole account from the computi and other documents. Nevertheless some names have been inserted, for which the Old list is the only authority, as documents now missing may have been used in its compilation. After the Register begins the names are given more correctly, and after some time a few particulars are added to some names, but rarely more than a line or two, and it cost much labour to find out what became of the Fellows, what preferment they held, and so on.

It should be noted that the first edition of this work still retains a value of its own, owing to the Latin documents given in it, not reprinted here, and to a, in some respects, fuller text and index.

A volume published by me this year, The Commoners of Exeter College, completes the list of members, and gives fuller accounts of many names incidentally mentioned here.

Mr. H. Hurst has kindly taken in charge the illustrations and the accompanying tables. He found it very difficult to make sure of the exact situation of the old Halls, most of which perished early; but had the benefit of working on a previous plan kindly supplied by Mr. F. P. Morrell, who had it from his father. One main difficulty occurs at the SW. corner of the College, which is not described as occupied by any Hall, and where we are not quite certain about the position of the lane and of S. Mildred's church. Wood (City i. 115) only says of Castell Hall 'about the corner at the W. end of S. Mildred's Lane.' An Osney rental of 1259 (Wood D. 2. p. 458 S. Mildred's) says 'domus in occidentali parte ecclesiae quae fuit Johannis de S. Johanne,' &c., next to which is 'domus super terram Wyger ex opposito eiusdem ecclesiae,' &c. There is also some doubt about the two towers on the N. side of the College. The summary at the end of Prideaux' Survey says '2 Towres which were formerly in the Rector's backyard and garden, now all demolished.' The eastern of these, south of the centre of the Ashmolean, seems from an old map (B) in the Rector's possession to have been Almond's (p. 313) and may be part of the land sold to the University (Wood's Life iii. 78, Comp. Vice-Canc. 1678-9 'to Dr Bury for ground bought of Exeter College for Ashmole's Repository 80 li.'). About the other there is no doubt, as the foundation has been seen by many people.

Some apology is due for reproducing a copy only of Agas' view of the College. The original is rather small for easy comparison with Bereblock; and it is so torn, blotted and stained, that it is doubtful if a tolerable negative can be obtained from it; it is also defective towards the bottom. Whittlesey's copy of it contains a few departures from the original. Mr. Hurst has therefore worked out an enlarged copy of the Agas, and supplied the defective parts from Whittlesey. A dotted line in the lower part of the view shows how far Agas and his copyist have been taken as authorities. The Clarendon Press has shown its usual skill in taking the negatives.

The Author is much indebted to the Rector and Bursar, to Professor Bywater, Falconer Madan, Esq., Sub-Librarian of the Bodleian, W. B. Gamlen, Esq., of Exeter College, Secretary to the University Chest, and other friends; but, above all, to his brothers G. C. Boase and F. Boase, who have devoted much time to reading the proofs, and have contributed much additional information; and to Prebendary Hingeston-Randolph, and to J. Ingle Dredge, Vicar of Buckland Brewer, who have done him a similar kind office, the former supplying details from his unrivalled knowledge of the Episcopal Registers, the latter by the use of his Collections amassed from the parish registers of Devon and through an unwearied correspondence with the Western clergy. For special family history he has not seldom consulted Winslow Jones Esq. Any one working on these subjects must acknowledge his obligations to Clark's University

Register (O. H. S.), and to Foster's monumental work, the Alumni Oxonienses; as well as to Crockford's Clerical Directory, with its ever-increasing fullness of information. Nor must he omit his obligations to Horace Hart, Esq., Controller of the Clarendon Press, for giving him the benefit of his experience, and it would be ungrateful not to thank the Compositors and the Pressmen for their care.

The author will be grateful for any further additions and corrections. A few lines of facts and dates (as all engaged on such tasks are aware) often represent the work of hours; Facilia putant omnes quae iam facta.

REGISTER OF EXETER COLLEGE.

THE College was founded in 1314 by Walter de Stapeldon, bishop of Exeter, under the name of Stapeldon Hall. Deeds of 1314 and 1315 mention the Rector and Scholars, i. e. Fellows, but no names occur until 1318. The contractions Corn., Chapl., Dev., Guer., Jer., Petr., Sar., Shi. denote the Cornish, Chaplain, Devon, Guernsey, Jersey, Petrean, Sarum, and Shiers foundations; small letters show that the attribution is doubtful.

John Parys, Dev. 1318; M.A., Rector Oct. 1318-Oct. 1319, when probably not in full orders. Stapeldon's Reg. 28 Ap. 1321 'apud Lamhethe optinuit M. Johannes dictus Paris clericus ad minores quos nondum etc., et omnes sacros ordines, literas dimissorias in quibus non erat facta mencio de titulo in huiusmodi sacris ordinibus exhibendo' (was his fellowship his title?); ordained acolite in the Bishop's chapel at London 7 June 1321; subdeacon at Bishop's Waltham 13 June 1321 by Rigaud de Asserio, bishop of Winchester (with Philip de Chalvedone); 19 Sep. 1321 Master John Paris deacon received V. of Laundeghe, i.e. Kea in Cornwall, de gracia domini. He covenants in a deed dated 9 July 1319 that the Chapel shall not prejudice S. Mildred's Church, witnesses Masters Richard Noreys, Henry Bloyou, Stephen Pyppcote, John de Sevenasche; for Noreys see Stapeldon's Reg. 295:—a Richard Noreis, R. of Inwardleigh 21 July 1317, acolite, had leave of absence to study 2 Oct. 1317, 11 Feb. 1317 (with letters dimissory), 27 Sep. 1319, 9 Sep. 1320, 22 Aug. 1322, 22 Sep. 1324; Henry Bloyou, R. of Ruan-Lanihorne 10 June 1320, ordained subdeacon 20 Sep. 1320, had letters dimissory for deacon's and priest's orders 3 Feb. 1320. Were all these Fellows? Philip de Chalvedone (? from Chalvedon, now Chaldon, Dorset); ordained acolite at Totnes 18 Sep. 1316; had letters dimissory for taking any orders 19 Feb. 1320 at London, as M.A. of Stapeldonehalle; deacon at Bishop's Waltham 13 June 1321 by Rigaud de Asserio, bishop of Winchester, as Master Philip de Clauedone; priest at Exeter 19 Sep. 1321 on a title given by Ralph Vautort.

Stephen de Pippecote (Pippacot in Braunton), Dev. 1322; M.A.; acolite 18 Dec. 1311, witness to a Chapel deed 9 July 1319, Rector 1322-25; his Computus 13 Oct. 1324—19 Oct. 1325, the first extant, says he was Rector the previous year, and a Ledeneporche deed 10 May 1323 calls him Rector, so that he was Rector 1322-25.

John de Nymeton (Nympton in Devon), Chapl. 1324.

John de Sevenaysshe (a place Sevenashe, see Pole 406), Dev. 1324; M.A.; tonsured at Totnes 6 Mch 1310, witness to a Chapel deed 9 July 1319, Rector 1325-26; and his name occurs in Winter 1329; Wood D 2 p. 88; his Computus for Lent 1326 mentions Richard Pyn, and Masters Richard de Bynescote [? Wynescote, R. of Iddesleigh and Preb. of Crediton, subdeacon at Axminster 20 Sep. 1320, also called de Honemanacote]; and Walter de Lappeflod [R. of Bridford 21 Sep. 1318, had letters dimissory 23 Sep. 1318, subdeacon at East Horseley, Surrey 7 Ap. 1319; deacon 20 Sep. 1320, with Wynescote; had letters dimissory 20 Oct. 1322]. Bishop Grandisson wrote to Master Richard de Ratforde from Chudleigh 5 Dec. 1329: 'Regraciamur vobis quod Librum Sermonum Beati Augustini pro nobis, prout Magister Ricardus filius Radulphi, ex parte nostra, vos rogavit, retinuistis, nobisque et condiciones ejusdem significastis et precium. Et, quia ipsum Librum habere volumus, lx solidos sterlingorum Magistro Johanni de Sovenaisshe, Magistro Scolarum nostre Civitatis Exoniensis, pro ipso Libro tradi fecimus, ut nobis eundem, quamcicius nuncii securitas affuerit, transmittatis. Libros, eciam, Theologicos Originales, veteres saltem et raros, ac Sermones antiquos, eciam sine Divisionibus Thematum, pro nostris usibus exploretis; scribentes nobis condiciones et precium eorundem. Et parati erimus pro vobis facere prout convenit locis et temporibus.'

Henry de Tiverton (Tuuerton), Dev. 1324; M.A., Rector 1333-34. His Computus is the first that gives the expenses for each week.

John de Kelly, Dev. 1326; M.A., Rector 1326-27. He is mentioned in the winter term of 1329; perhaps R. of Kelly, Devon.

William de Ponte, Chapl. 1326. Two of the name occur, as acolites 21 Dec. 1308 and 13 June 1310, subdeacons 6 Mch 131⁰/₁ and 11 Mch 131¹/₂, priests 22 Dec. 1313 and 21 Dec. 1314 (a monk at Tywardreath, Cornwall). The chaplain must be distinguished from the monk. The name Pontey still survives in Devon. A Chapel deed 25 Ap. 1326 calls him chaplain; the witnesses are Robert Kary, Henry Wall, Henry de Tiverton, Robert de Middellond, scholars of the University. Kary and Middellond were Fellows of Merton 1322 and 1330. Middellond was also Treasurer of Exeter Cathedral, and d. 1367. Several Fellows of Exeter became Fellows of Merton.

Richard de Pyn, Dev. 1326; M.A., occurs Lent 1326, Rector 1327–30; R. of Wittenham 1333; d. before 1355, when Roger Cristemasse is called his executor. His first Computus is for a whole year, 15 Oct. 1328—14 Oct. 1329.

William de Polmorva, Corn. 1333; Polmorva is in S. Breock; the form 'Palmorna' arises from u, i.e. v, being misread as n; called dominus in 1333, M.A., Rector 1336-37, perhaps Fellow till 1340; Fellow of Univ. Coll. 1341 (Smith 98); of Queen's 1341-48, one of the Fellows named by the founder; subdean of Exeter 9 June 1349—29 Dec. 1355; Chancellor of the University 1350-51, adm. by the Archbishop of Canterbury, after the Bishop of Lincoln had refused to confirm his election, Canon of Windsor 1352-62, Archdeacon of Middlesex 21 Sep. 1361, d. 1362, his bequest of £5 to the College was paid in Lent Term 1363; Bodleian Charters 3, Wilkins' Concilia iii. 3-8; Patent 36 Edw. III part 2 memb. 27, Le Neve i. 389, ii. 328, iii. 378, Anstey 168-72, Hist. Comm. ii. 139, Gutch i. 451, 481, iii. 139; Rolls of Parl. i. 16; Lyte 169; Bibl. Corn. 505, Coll. Corn. 744-5; Wood D 2 p. 462.

William de Brokelond, Dev. 1333; received the first tonsure as a boy 23 Sep. 1319, M.A., Fellow till 1337; V. of Dawlish 26 Jan. 13³⁹/₄₀-1341, Eccl. Ant. ii. 143, 169; a John de Broclonde was Preb. of Exeter 1260 (Bronescombe 480).

William Dobbe, dev. 1333; two of the name received the first tonsure 21 Dec. 1308 and 23 Sep. 1319; M.A., Rector 1334-35, in 1334 he taught in one of the College 'schools.' In 1333 he gave two schools in Scolestrete to Stapeldonhalle; he is referred to in the Computus of 1337.

John de Hemeleston (? Helmeston in Bishop's Tawton, or Broad-Hempston), dev. 1333-7; 'capellanus,' took the service for the regular chaplain 'dominus Stephanus' at the end of 1333.

Walter de Blachesworth, dev. 1333-7; called dominus in 1334. There is a manor named 'Blackworthy' in Stoodleigh near Tiverton; a Walter de Blaccheworthy was bailiff of Bampton, Oxon, 1326

(? father of the Fellow). Stapeldon's Reg. 7 Aug. 1323, Osney, Walter de Blaccheworthe acolite obtained letters dimissory.

Stephanus, Chapl. 1333; 1334 'dominus Stephanus capellanus,' 1337 'magister Stephanus.'

Thomas Trener, corn. 1334; M.A., occurs in Lent 1334. See Phillipps a. 1337.

John Casse, corn. 1334-7.

William de Heghes, Dev. 1337; called M.A. and M.D. in a University petition of 1348 to Clement VI. Sir William atte Heghen collated to R. of Clist Fomison [now Sowton], Devon 10 Ap. 1322, exch. for Nans Founteyn, i. e. St. Petrock Minor, near Padstow, 19 May 1337, but instit. the same day to V. of Halberton, which he exch. with Master William de Brokelond for V. of Dawlish 14 Aug. 1341; exch. with Sir Goceline de Snetesham for R. of S. Mary Steps, Exeter 14 May 1344; R. of Stythians 1361; Eccl. Ant. ii. 43, 143, R. I. C. vi. 246. If we read aright in the Computus of 1336–37 completurus annos suos, he may have been elected thirteen years previously.

William Capell (de Capella), Dev. Lent 1337, in place of Heghes; Bronescombe's Reg. 43.

Walter Polmorpha, Corn. 1337; probably related to William de Polmorva. In Old List.

Walter Molle, dev. 1337, M.A. In Old List. A Sir William le Mol d. R. of Alverdiscott 23 June 1320.

Walter Cotte, dev. 1337. In Old List. The name occurs at Dartmouth, Hist. Comm. v. 601, 603.

Thomas Trotter, 1337. In Old List.

John Tresulian, dev. 1337; called 'M.A. universitatis procuratori seu rectori' in the petition of 1348 to Clement VI; R. of Duloe, Cornwall 21 Sep. 1349, d. Avignon 4 July 1361. In Old List.

John de Blankeswille, dev. 1344; M.A., Rector 1344. The deed transferring Sheld Hall to Ex. Coll. 2 Aug. 1344 mentions John de Blatcheswall, Rector; John de Landreyn, John Estcolme, and Robert Fromonde, Fellows.

John de Landreyn (one Landreyn is in Northill, another in Ladock), Corn. 1344; called M.A., M.B., scholar in theology six years, in a University petition of 1362 to Urban V; D.D.; Fellow of Oriel 1360, one of the two Senior Fellows there 1386, and had joined in condemning the Wyclifite doctrines 1381 (Fasc. Zizaniorum 112, 288). Gutch i. 499; Wood's City i. 147; Statutes iii. App. pp. 31, 39; Le Neve iii. 548; Clark's Oxford Colleges 98; John Landyran was Canon of Windsor I Jan. 137 5, but exchanged with Richard de Brokelby for a preb. of Glasney near Penryn II Jan. 137 6 (Newcourt i. 750); summer 137 6 'iiiid pro vino dato magistris Johanni Landreyn et W. Stykelyngh quando tractaverunt de negociis Roberti de Trethewy.' See Coxe no. xxviii. Lambeth Reg., Langham, fol. 29, 18 Oct. 1366, William de Daventre, provost of Oriel, as proctor for Master John Landreyn, returns him as resident in Lincoln diocese, and as holding the church of St. Mawgan in Kerrier, Exon diocese, worth £10 a year, and as expecting a prebend at S. Asaph by provision of Pope Urban V, being M.A. and D.D. and M.D. He d. 1409 (Martin Lercedekne was R. of Mawgan 1410). In Oriel Treasurer's Accounts 140 occurs 'pro vino dato presbiteris pro exequiis M. Johannis Landreyn iiiis,' and next year 'in septimana Ascensionis pro vino pro Landreyn.'

John Estcolme, Dev. 1344.

Robert Fromonde, Dev. 1344; (a Robert Fromond was preb. of Exeter 1293, of Chulmleigh 1310); Proctor 1350; Grandisson's Reg. I. 161b letter of dispensation (under a permission from Clement VI, given 19 Jan. 134 at Avignon, to dispense in the case of 7 fit persons begotten 'de presbiteris aut in adulterio ex uno parente vel utroque') to Robert Fromond clerk to take orders though son of a priest and an unmarried woman; notary M. Richard de Todeworthe clerk, at Chudleigh 23 July 1349, in presence of M. Benedict de Pastone canon of S. Probus in Cornwall, Richard de Campo Arnulphi [Champernon] 'domicello Exoniensi,' Besanc' de Nauntre of the diocese of Besançon. Similarly Reg. I. 162b 'Dominus, virtute quarundam literarum apostolicarum sibi concessarum, quarum tenor superius in proximo folio de verbo ad verbum inseritur, dispensavit cum magistro Godefrido Fromonde [? Robert's brother], clerico, Exoniensis diocesis, de presbitero genito et soluta, quod, defectu hujusmodi non obstante, ad aliud beneficium migrare posset etc., juxta vim formam et effectum literarum apostolicarum predictarum, presentibus tunc in hujusmodi dispensacione Magistris Benedicto de Pastone Sancti Probi, Ricardo Noreys Exoniensis, ecclesiarum canonicis, R. Chambernon, J. Clifforde, et magistro David Aliam [Stapeldon's Reg. 503, 523], ac N. Braibroke clerico, qui eodem die creatus fuit in notarium, ut supra, et habuit inde literam sub data supradicta et sigillo Domini.'

Robert de Trethewy, Corn. 1353; one Trethewy is in Ruan Lanihorne, another in S. Levan; M.A., in jure canonico Scolari, Exon.

dioc., petition to Urban V 1362; Rector 1354—June 1357, still Fellow 1358. He and John Cergeaux obtained a grant of Culverd Hall from John Martyn and his wife Alice Pulteneye 28 Oct. 1353.

John Cergeaux (Serjeaux), Corn. 1353; M.A., ? preb. of Endellion 26 May 1391; Stafford's Reg. 53, 54, Maclean i. 500: a William Serjeaux is mentioned in 1356; Coll. Corn. 886.

Robert de Tresulian, corn. 1354; M.P. Cornwall 1368, advocate at Cornish Assizes 1369, Justice of King's Bench 6 May 1378; a Commissioner to repress disorders in the University 1380, Gutch i. 497; Chief Justice 22 June 1381. He was consulted by the College on law matters: Computus winter 1354 '1d pro potu ad Tresulian, Byrnely, et ad magistrum Galfridum, qui venerunt ad tractandum de convencione inter nos et Johannem Davyntru': autumn 1357 'xiiiid pro expensis R. Tresulian et J. Hall quando transierunt apud Wittenham et convenerunt cum Thoma Broun de fructibus': summer 1358 'iiiid pro vino dato M. Willelmo Stykelyng et aliis magistris cum Roberto Tresulian quando tractaverunt de emcione domus J. Daventre [i. e. Hambury Hall]: iiis iiiid traditis Roberto de Tresulian quos ad (se?) vendicabat pro labore quem habuit in negociis domus.' Pole 88, 347, 380 claims him for Devon, but the Manor of Tresilian is in Cornwall, where he also held Tremodret, Binnamy, Stratton, and Scilly: Ancient Deeds (D. K. Rec. 1890) i. 558; executed at Tyburn 19 Feb. 1387 (Foss iv. 102: Bibl. Corn. 786-7, Coll. Corn. 1268, Stafford's Reg. 273, 299; his son John indicted in Parliament on Monday after Holy Cross, 21 Richard II). Maclean ii. 23, 44; Eccl. Ant. ii. 202. He held some Halls in Oxford which, with the patronage of a chapel in All Saints, were, on his attainder, sold by the Crown to William of Wykeham for 240 marks; one was the Cross Inn in the Corn Market, Wood's City i. index, ii. 110, Oxf. Arch. Soc. 1880-82 p. 17, iii. 146. Reg. of Bishop Buckingham of Lincoln 13 Ap. 1388 'Ricardus Resingdon presbiter presentatus per . . . Ricardum etc., racione terrarum et tenementorum, que fuerunt Roberti Tresulian chivalier, in manu sua per judicium in Parliamento redditum existencium, ad cantariam in ecclesia Omnium Sanctorum Oxon per Johannem Stodley nuper fundatam, vacantem.' There is a curious entry in Rogers ii. 616 '1384 Oxford, expenses paid at Robert the Tiler's funeral by Tresilian, Chivaler: lintheamen 10d., beir 3d., wax 4d., pulsatio campane 2d.' He m. Note.—Reg. 1562, 'decretum portionem panis quo per singulos dies sumus pasturi (nimirum decimam terciam singulorum panum portionem que lucrum panis vulgo, Anglice the vantage, appellatur) haud ulterius aut in communem aut in economi sed rectoris duntaxat utilitatem transferri adeo ut in posterum semper liceat rectori decimam terciam partem singulorum panum per universum annum in collegium nostrum adductorum sibi quasi ius suum iustissimum vendicare, recipere et in proprium sui ipsius usum prout sibi soli quoquo tempore videbitur dispensare et collocare, preter stipendium sibi a fundatore concessum in statutis expressum.

Preterea quemvis tam sociorum quam commensalium et battillariorum intra mensem aut aliquanto minus spacium si recte facileque fieri possit quovis termino cuiuslibet anni finito economo statim pro battis omnibus satisfacturum ut is etiam ipse pinsoribus ceterisque quibus debet singulis (quantum ad nostram victus rationem spectat) debita statim persolvat.'

17 Oct. 'Chichester, Wiet, et Randall electi in communarum participationem nondum admittuntur quia hac tempestate (in tanta scilicet charitate rerum prope omnium) magis gravatur collegium quam ut singulos sustinere queat.'

14 Oct. Rector obtulit computum suum coram sociis (ut mos inolevit) reddendum. Sed quod duo duntaxat socii tunc temporis domi adessent, nempe Mr Pinche et dominus Brey, visum est illis et rectori eundem in aliud tempus cum plures socii sufficientes testes domum sese reciperent (consopita nimirum pestilencia que tam Oxonie quam aliis multis in locis ea tempestate ingruebat) differre, et inchoatum (prout suadent statuta) relinquere. Eademque de causa nec rector constituto tempore creatus erat nec computus sub natalem domini (inchoatus) conficiebatur quem tamen vicem gerens uti prius reddere voluit.'

1564, Mch 30, 'decretum ut cui liberet liceret sese absentare ingruente denuo pestilencia usque ad diem veneris sub festum Dionisii salvo cuiusque iure concessaque cuique ita absenti summa xiiiid' (i. e. weekly).

Some of the sojourners behaved badly, 'adeo dulce illis erat nondum ad virilem etatem provectis hominibus in summam licenciam parum pecunie parcentibus vivere; Unde profecto satis superque exploratum habuimus statutorum morumve quantumvis brevem intermissionem boni ordinis esse solutionem magistratuum et rectorum contemptum ac certe ansam et maximam quasi fenestram ad omnem fere nequitiam.'

Note.—Winter 1563, 'xls a M. Geare pro redditu nuper acquisito nobis per eas pecunias que nobis ea sola de causa date sunt et tradite a preposito et sociis

SCHOLARS, EXHIBITIONERS, AND BIBLE CLERKS1.

Scholar originally meant Fellow. Scholars in the modern sense do not occur till a late period (Shadwell's Reg. Orielense, pref.). We find exhibitioners perhaps earlier. A bible clerk is mentioned in 1403, 1529, and 1621.

Sir John Acland, besides contributing to the New Hall, gave £16 a year to two scholars at the College, Izacke's Register 1736 p. 11; and William Jesse, fellow 1639, is called pensionarius Aclandianus in 1632.

Robert Vilvaine, fellow, founded in 1637 4 exhibitions of £32 each yearly, to be paid through the Rector and Subrector; 2 from the High School and 2 from the Free Grammar School at Exeter, to be held for 7 years during residence without other preferment.

On 20 June 1877, in reply to the Visitor, the College did not oppose the Acland Exhibitions being made tenable at any University or other place of higher education; but, if the exhibitioner should come to Oxford, required that he should enter at Exeter College. It took no action as to the Vilvaine Exhibitions.

In 1622 (State Papers 27 Sep.) Thomas Stevens' sister was to pay £330 for her husband's legacies, viz. £100 to maintain poor scholars at Exeter College, £100 to the University Library, £100 to S. Michael's, where his son lay buried, £20 for a scaffold for scholars in that church, £10 to Dr. Prideaux.

Samuel Hill in 1634 gave £100, to relieve poor scholars and servitors, including at least 2 from Devon and 2 from Cornwall, by gifts of 30 shillings a year; Gutch iii. 106.

Robert Michell founded by will, 28 Mch 1641, an exhibition for which he gave the rent of 6 acres called Wild Arish in Withecombe Raleigh, 'the profits to be divided at Michaelmas among such poor scholars of the College as be servitors and apply themselves to the study of divinity.'

John Darell or Darrell, s. Edward of West Retford, Notts, M. Lincoln

¹ The letters B.C., Ch. I., Exh., Hist., Nat. Sci., Nat. Sci. Exh., Org., Stap., stand respectively for Bible Clerk, Channel Islands, Open Exhibition, Modern History, Natural Science, Natural Science Exhibition, Organist, Stapeldon; O. after another symbol means 'Open pro hac vice.'

24 Nov. 1637 age 16, B.A. 3 July 1641. He founded by will, dated 11 Nov. 1664, 'out of the lands which he himself had purchased,' an exhibition for 'some ingenious scholar whose father hath not above £30 per annum in land or estate, to be chosen out of Lincolnshire and Notts, upon the election of the Master of Retford Hospital [now the Subdean of Lincoln] and the Archdeacon of Nottingham, the same scholar to be admitted and educated in Exeter College, Oxford'; it is for Lincoln and Notts alternately; the property is quite distinct from the property of Retford Hospital, see Reg. 15 May 1793. It was long before the property was so applied. The first exhibitioner noticed is in 1705. The present rental is £75 10s., chiefly from 6 houses in a court at Retford, and a few acres of land in W. Retford parish.

Meriel Symes of Barwick, Som., y. d. of Sir John Horner of Mells, Som. by Ann Speke, b. 1635, d. 1717 (Misc. Gen. 1882 iv. 163), widow of Thomas Symes and mother of John Symes (who d. 6 July 1687 age 20, and was buried in the south aisle of the College Chapel), founded an exhibition for the maintenance of a poor scholar at Exeter College by deed dated 7 Nov. 1710; open to members of the College being of the kindred of John Symes, or, in default of such, to poor scholars born in Somerset or Dorset; in default of such, to natives of those counties at any other College; in default of such, to any poor scholar of Exeter College; the scholar must be examined touching his learning and abilities, and must intend to study divinity, and may hold the scholarship for eight years, unless otherwise provided for, but must reside without being absent above forty days in any one year, except in case of sickness, and even then the Rector must approve the cause of his absence; each scholar is to have the sums accruing during a previous vacancy, but, if the scholar becomes a Fellow of any College, he receives half the sums accruing during his year of probation, the other half going to the College Treasury. But if the scholar at the end of five years is not able to render any chapter of the Greek Testament into Latin and also any chapter in the Hebrew Pentateuch (upon examination by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, or some one appointed by him), the scholarship shall be void. The College may make leases of the lands for 21 years, but it must be at the full value &c. Meriel's own kin, the Horners, were included (see the Horner pedigree in Hutchins ii. 667); and, as her sister Ann married John Harington of Kelston near Bath, the Haringtons were admitted, though John Harington seems to have only had a daughter Ann (who married Sir Robert Chaplyn) by Ann Horner, and the rest of his children were by his three other wives, Misc. Gen. 1881 p. 23. Meriel (who d. 30 Mch 1813 age 78), great granddaughter of Meriel Symes' brother Sir George Horner, married John Williams of Herringstone, and their granddaughter Elizabeth Williams married R. A. Burney, which admitted the Burneys. Meriel Symes herself named the first scholar; the land she gave consisted of three undivided parts in ten of Norwood Park called Shortwood, a mile from Glastonbury, containing by estimate 142 acres, together with the tithes thereof. The scholarship is now held for 5 years (since 1875), and is divided into two.

John Reynolds, 1 s. of John Reynolds (d. 1692), and uncle of Sir Joshua Reynolds, b. 9 July 1671, fellow of King's Camb., B.D. Oxford 7 Oct. 1718, Master of Exeter sch. 1713–33, fellow of Eton 1734, canon of Exeter 1743, d. 27 June 1758, his will is dated 27 Feb. 1756, W. Antiq. iv. 24, v. 113. He founded 6 exhibitions, 3 from Eton, and 3 from Exeter School, nominated alternately by the Chapter and Chamber of Exeter, tenable till the holders were 24: the words of his will are 'that are designed for Clergymen to complete their education at Exeter College, preferably to all others if they can be accommodated there.'

The Rev. St. John Eliot founded 2 exhibitions of £30 each for candidates from Truro gr. sch.; the electors, after the death of his trustees, to be the Schoolmaster and the Vicars of Kenwyn, Gluvias and Veryan. The money was in the 3 per cents. Candidates were to have been 3 years at Truro School and to be members of Exeter College. The arrangements were settled by decree in Chancery 14 Mch 1767, see Allen's Liskeard 174–8, R.I.C.x. 423, Coll. Corn. 234, 1388, 1393. Latterly the money has been given in small sums to boys at the school or at parish schools with little beneficial result.

William Gifford in 1827 founded 2 Gifford Exhibitions of £30 each, Reg. 1827 p. 12, and 25 June 1832. By his will he left for this purpose £2000 in the 3 per cents. The exhibitions were to be given to youths educated at Ashburton gr. sch. or, in default of such, to youths of the County of Devon. On the evidence of Dr. Ireland Dean of Westminster, Gifford's friend and executor, Chancery by decree dated 8 Nov. 1831 settled the preference given to mean 'born, or educated (in part or wholly) in Devon.' There is no limitation of age or standing, under the degree of B.A. The exhibitions are tenable for four years, and dividends accumulated during vacancies are to be invested for the fund.

Thomas How of Balliol, R. of Huntspill, Som., who d. 15 Mch 1819, founded an exhibition at Balliol. On Balliol declining the gift, it was transferred to Exeter by decree of Chancery 4 Mch 1831. It was for sons of Clergy resident in Somerset and Devon, alternately, provided they were actually members of the College, and under 19, and was tenable till the holders were of standing for M.A., or were elected Fellows of the College, or ceased to be members of the College. The sum given was £2400 in the new $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cents. The exhibition was divided into two in 1863.

Joseph Loscombe Richards, Rector 1838, left by will £350 in 3 per cent. bank annuities to found a divinity prize (Reg. 1836 p. 46–48 his letter and extract from his will, and p. 197); and the reversion, after his sister's death, of some fields in Kidlington (Hist. of Kidlington 137) to found an exhibition for a poor scholar, already matriculated at the College. His friends subscribed £644 18s., which bought £707 8s. 11d. in the funds, to found an exhibition for any poor scholar.

Mr. George Redsull Carter of Deal, who d. 13 Feb. 1879, founded, by will dated 11 Ap. 1873, proved 24 Mch 1879, a scholarship of the value of £80 a year, for which persons born in the County of Kent, who are already members of the College, have a preference ceteris paribus. Subject to this reservation the scholarship is open. He made a similar bequest to S. Peter's Cambridge, and the sum divided between the two Colleges was £4139 1s. 2d.

Miss Marianne Hasker, of 61 Eversfield Place, S. Leonard's-on-Sea, founded 2 Hasker Scholarships in 1883 for divinity students. She gave these and a stained glass window Jan. 1855, in memory of her father the Rev. George Henry Hasker who d. 26 Sep. 1881, and her mother Sarah Anne Hasker (1 d. James Jell Chalke, of Sheppey), who d. 9 Jan. 1883. George Henry Hasker, o. s. Thomas of Loughton, Essex, b. 10 Ap. 1794, ed. Winchester, M. 9 Dec. 1813, 2 Classics 1816, B.A. 24 Ap. 1817, at Lincoln's Inn 1815.

In 1831 the Bible Clerkship was suspended (Reg. 9 Feb.; and 7 Ap. 1841). It was restored 13 Nov. 1841, when an anonymous gift of £50 was made through Robert Jefferies Spranger. In 1862 it was made into two open exhibitions for poor scholars. The clerk used to dine off the joint that came from the High Table.

There were no open scholarships till 1831, when the College founded 4 of £30 a year each, tenable for 4 years, and open to all candidates above the age of 16. But the University Commission of 1854 threw the fellowships open, and (Reg. p. 205, New Ordinance of 9 Oct. 1855) suppressed 10, partly to found scholarships, 10 Open, 10 Stapeldon for (in the first place) the diocese of Exeter, and 2 for the Channel Islands; the first election of scholars under the new Ordinance was held 1856. In 1882 the numbers were made 12 Open and 8 Stapeldon. The College besides gives some scholarships or exhibitions for Modern History and for Natural Science.

Only a few names occur before 1705. William Jesse, fellow 1639, is called pensionarius Aclandianus. As the College does not appoint to some of the exhibitions, no list was kept; in fact, the authorities have not always been informed who hold the exhibitions. Unfortunately the schools also have no complete lists.

Afterwards follow the names of Benefactors during this century.

LIST OF THE PICTURES IN THE HALL, AND LISTS OF ARMS.

Beginning with the East end of the Hall, and proceeding round the South, West and North sides, the order of the pictures is as follows, the upper row being given first, and the rows separated by semicolons: East side, I J. Prideaux, rector 1612, 2 A. A. Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury; 3 Walter de Stapeldon, 4 J. C. Jones, rector 1819-38; 5 H. Richards, rector 1797-1807, 6 Sir C. Lyell; South side, 7 Stephen Weston, fellow, d. 1830; 8 J. L. Richards, rector 1838-54, 9 J. Conybeare, rector 1730-3; 10 Sir J. Maynard, d. 1690, 11 G. Hall, Bishop of Chester, d. 1668; 12 W. Noy, attorney general 1631, 13 Sir J. T. Coleridge, judge; 14 J. Selden, 15 G. Bull, Bishop of S. David's; 16 Sir W. Morrice, d. 1676, 17 Luke Milbourn, d. 1720; West side, 18 Thomas Lord Ducie, d. 1840, 19 Walter de Stapeldon, 20 Charles I; 21 Narcissus Marsh Archbp. of Armagh, 22 Sir W. Petre; 23 G. Parker, son of Earl of Macclesfield, picture given by him to rector Bray 1777, 24 T. Bray, rector 1771-85, 25 Sir J. Acland 1618; North side, 26 Lady Elizabeth Shiers, d. 14 Aug. 1710, 27 (name lost); 28 J. Periam 1616, 29 F. Webber, rector 1750-71; 30 H. Shortridge, d. 1720, 31 G. Hakewill, rector 1642-9; 32 J. Cole, rector 1808-19 (by Opie), 33 T. Secker, Archbishop of Canterbury, d. 1768; 34 T. Stinton, rector 1785-97, 35 B. Kennicott.

On the wainscot behind the High Table are these arms of Benefactors, running from North to South: I Charles I, 2 J. D. Macbride (? impaling Radcliffe), 3 P. Orchard, 4 Viscount Parker, Earl of Macclesfield, 5 J. S. Enys, 6 Hon. R. Jocelyn (Earl of Roden), 7 Archbishop Secker, 8 Lord Talbot, 9 Lady Elizabeth Shiers, 10 Sir G. Treby, Knt., 11 Sir F. Drake, Bart., 12 Dr. Arthur Bury, 13 T. Rowney (impaling St. Lowe), 14 Bishop Hall (impaled with see of Norwich), 15 J. Pulteney, 16 Dr. J. Hakewill, 17 Sir W. Petre, 18 Walter de Stapeldon, 19 Sir J. Peryam, Knt., 20 Sir J. Maynard, Knt., 21 J. Prideaux (impaled with see of Worcester), 22 G. Bull (impaled with see of S. David's), 23 J. Halse, Bishop of Lichfield, 24 R. Hutchins, B.D., 25 Narcissus Marsh (impaled with see of Armagh), 26 Sir N. Morrice, Bart., 27 Earl Cowper, 28 Dr. Radcliffe, 29 J. Conybeare (impaled with see of Bristol), 30 H. Webber, Dean of Exeter, 31 Earl Ducie, 32 Dr. Cole, 33 Dr. J. C. Jones.

The arms carved on the stalls of the Chapel are (1) on the South side, Stapeldon, Stafford, Courtenay, Palmer, Acland, Maynard, Shiers, Cowper, Webber, Bray, N. Marsh, Richards, Reynolds, Phillpotts, Hasker; (2) on the North side, Petre (ancient coat), Charles I, Bishop Bradbridge, Periam, Hakewill, Hall, Hole, Talbot, Radcliffe, Bury, Morice, Symes, J. L. Richards, Ridding, Tozer.

The University Almanack for 1739 gives busts of Stapeldon, Stafford, Petre, Charles I, Dr. Hakewill, Sir J. Acland; and whole lengths of Primate Marsh, Bishop Bull, Chancellor Shaftesbury, George Treby, and Henry Pollexfen, Judges; Sir J. Maynard; arms of Sir F. Drake of Buckland, Sir W. Morice of Werrington, Sir R. Vyvyan of Trelowarren, Edward Richards, Treby of Devon, Gilbert of Devon, the principal contributors, after Primate Marsh, towards building the Tower, &c., about 1700.

For arms that once existed in the old buildings and windows, see Gutch iii. 110, seq.

The windows in the Chapel given in memoriam are as follows: North side (the antechapel and first window blank), two to Dr. Lightfoot, given by old members; one to Rev. G. H. Hasker and his wife, by Miss M. Hasker; Apse, I S. Marshall (undergraduate, d. 1860), by the undergraduates; 2 T. B. Colenso fellow, by members of the College; 3 and 4, centre, J. L. Richards rector, by members of the College; 5 given by Old Fellows at dedication of Chapel; South side, Mrs. Lightfoot, by Dr. Lightfoot; Mr. and Mrs. Tozer's parents, by Rev. H. F. and Mrs. Tozer; H. W. Moore fellow, by old members; Dr. Sewell, by old members; (antechapel blank).

There are tablets in the antechapel to Rectors Jones and Lightfoot, Fellows S. P. Rigaud and his son S. J. Rigaud (one tablet) and T. H. Sheppard; other members, W. E. Maynard (d. India 1887), J. F. White (d. 1871), J. W. Barne (accidentally shot 1868), W. P. Barnes (drowned in the Isis 1877), A. L. Burleigh (d. 9 May 1872), Gerald Evans and W. R. Harvey (d. 1889 and 1890; one tablet), H. T. Hope (d. 1892), Isidor Goldstein (drowned in the Isis 1885), H. L. H. ffolkes (drowned at King's Weir, Oxford, 12 Feb. 1892, in trying to save a friend).

For inscriptions in the old chapel see Gutch, 118-21; some of the Prideaux ones are still visible.

DOCUMENTS.

HART HALL.

- (1) HEC est convencio facta ad festum S. Michaelis anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis quinquagesimo primo inter Henricum Punchard carnificem Oxon ex una parte et Priorissam de Stodle et conventum eiusdem loci ex altera: videlicet quod dictus Henricus dimisit et tradidit dictis Priorisse et Conventui quandam placeam terre sue ad caput curie sue iacentem in eadem curia sua in parochia S. Petri in oriente Oxon, que placea continet in longitudine octodecim ulnas cum pulicis et in latitudine ad superius caput decem ulnas et dimidiam ulnam et unum quartum unius ulne cum policis. Tenendam et habendam dictam placeam terre cum pertinenciis dictis Priorisse et Conventui et suis assignatis, usque ad finem decem annorum proximo subsequencium libere et in pace. Et predictus Henricus et heredes sui warantizabunt acquietabunt et defendent predictam placeam terre predictis Priorisse et Conventui et suis assignatis usque ad finem termini predicti plenarie complete contra omnes homines, mares et feminas: pro hac autem dimissione tradicione warantizacione acquietacione et defencione dederunt predicta Priorissa et Conventus predictus predicto Henrico duas marcas sterlingorum pre manibus. Et post decursum dicti termini dicta placea soluta et quieta ad dictum Henricum et heredes suos vel suos assignatos revertatur. Ad hanc autem convencionem fideliter inter se observandum, fidem suam affidaverunt et huic in modum cyrographi confecto alternatim sigilla sua apposuerunt. TERRA WYDONIS1.

Notum sit omnibus presentibus et futuris quod ego Thomas filius Beatricis 2 concessi et dimisi et liberavi Willelmo filio Widonis hoseri totam terram meam que iacet inter terram Roberti filii Oweni et terram Henrici Chaudre, illi et heredibus suis, habendam et tenendam de me et heredibus meis in feodo et hereditate libere et quiete,

² Thomas son of Beatrice held land in S. Mildred's 1180-90, Bodleian Charters 309; Wood D. 2 p. 88 Thomas son of Beatrice, with the consent of Cristina de Sandford his wife, gave Hamo mercer of Oxford unam placeam terre ejus ad caput curie ejus, sicut murus camere ejus ex utraque parte condonat in longum ipsius Hamonis, et in latum inter terram que fuit Roberti filii Seman et terram ejusdem Thome filii Beatricis; witnesses Torold Cordwaner, Thomas and Henry sons of Edwin [Henry Edwyne occurs in a Lincoln deed, Wood D. 2 p. 65], Thomas son of Wydo and William his brother, Ambr. pistore, W. Specer, Gregory mercer, R. cuteler, H. Socham and Elias his brother. Wood says 'about 1174-but no, it can't be so soon, because Hamo mercer lived 1243: ? written about 1200.' Thomas Fitzwido m. PEYNTOUR'S HALL.

Peyntour's hall (called Culver hall in Henry IV's time) came to Exeter College in 1478 with these title deeds. John de Bereford (Wood's City i. 359) gave it to Henry Malmesbury, who left it 1361 to Alice his wife, 'without north gate, near to Gose Court on the south.' On 18 Aug. 1407 John Abel gave John Sutton and Alice his wife a messuage called Peyntour hall or Culver hall, in S. Giles' street, between the tenement once belonging to John Hartwell on the north and the tenement called Gosecourt once belonging to John Bereford on the south, which messuage Abel lately had from the feoffment of John Southam; given at the Hundred outside the north gate. On 30 Ap. 1421 John and Alice Sutton grant to their son Stephen their tenement in the North Hundred, lying between the garden of Thomas Daggevill on the south and the tenement of John Spicer senior on the north, except a shop with a chamber over it on the north of the tenement, which they reserve for their lives, with access to the fountain in the tenement for drawing water; Stephen to have the reversion of the shop with all belonging to the 'bracina' there. On 5 Feb. 1431 Stephen grants the tenement and reversion to William Thomas of Abberbury, Oxon. On 6 Feb. 1436 William Thomas alias Thomlyn granted it to John Bailly mason of Oxford; witnesses W. Brampton mayor, Robert Tretherf and Robert Watford bailiffs, T. Coventre, W. Herbfeld, T. Daggeville, J. North aldermen etc. On 8 Mch 1444 Bailly granted it to John Say Esq., William Brown [? Brome], William Bruges, and Walter Baron; but on 16 Jan. 1458 Bailly granted it to Nicholas Robyns brewer of Oxford; and on 17 Jan. William Brome of Halton [Holton, Visit. Oxon. 104, 230] in Oxon gentleman quitclaimed to Robyns at Halton. On 12 Feb. 1461 Robyns granted it to Richard Andrew, James Andrew, and John Harrys. On 6 Mch 1477 James Preston clerk and John Harrys bedell granted it to the Rector and Scholars of Exon College, 'which we lately had jointly with Richard Andrewe clerk now dead'; and on the same day they named John Stapulhille and John Bradeston their attorneys to deliver seisin; on 8 Mch Robyns and his wife Agnes quitclaimed; while on 1 Ap. 1478 the College granted Robyns and his wife for their lives a 'Parlour sette on the north side of the tenement of the College in which Robyns now dwelleth, with all from the hay dore into the fylde, and with 2 palasses with all within them, beryng yerely therfor at the fest of Seynt John Baptist a rede rose.' An indenture follows, 30 Nov. 1478, between John Orell rector and Nicholas Gosse chancellor of Exeter, who gave £15 for the purchase, by which the College is to spend 13s 4d on the day of his obit annually. Lastly on 28 Jan. 1487 Edmund Gille grants Thomas Ruer rector, and the scholars, a garden in S. Giles.

GARDEN.

Leave of a garden and stable from Robert Roper, Master of Baliol, and the fellows, to John Neale, Rector of Exeter College, and the fellows, 19 Mch $156\frac{5}{6}$; adjoining the Divinity School on the north, and abutting to Exeter College wall on the west, with Brasenose lane on the south, and abutting upon Baliol and Exeter Schools on the east; from Ladyday 1581 (at the expiring of a lease to Mr. John Lewes), for 41 years, at a rent of 20s, and a fine of 3s 4d for every time they neglect necessary repairs, and Exeter shall not make any bowling allee or tennisse court which may be noisome to students, or any hogsty or dunghill or any other filthy savour. If the University should build schools on this ground by virtue of any commandment of the Queen or her successors during the lease, Exeter is to pay such rent for the remaining part as four honest men, two for either party, determine.

Exchange 6 Oct. 1572 of 3 garden grounds belonging to Baliol, in the occupation of Walter Bailie M.D., Garbrand Harks, and Richard Hanson, lying west of School Street [as above], for a messuage and garden, lately occupied by Thomas Kerialls doctor of law, lying north of the way that leads from Baliol to Magdalen church, on the west of the wall of Baliol, and on the east of certain Baliol tenements; but Hanson is to hold for the remainder of his lease, on which the rent of 2s 6d is reserved; and Exeter grants Baliol a rent of 12s 6d, issuing out of a house in Magdalen parish, now occupied by John Sommersbye, with power of distraint on that house; Witnesses William Germin, Jasper Best, John Roscarrocke, Trevenor Roscarrocke, William Connocke, William Kyrckham. A Bond of £200 is attached from Adam Squire, Master of Baliol, to Robert Newton, Rector of Exeter, to secure observance of the conditions.

A SURVEY OF EXETER COLLEGE

Taken by Dr. Prideaux 29 Dec. 1631; beginning at the West Tower [built 1605], now the Fore Gate, and so circuiting on the right hand till it end where it began. [From a copy made by Rector T. Stinton, with some additions by Rector J. L. Richards. Stinton abridged in parts, and it is not easy to make out what he added.]

1. Of the Privy Kitchin Buildings 1. In that place stood the ancient Privyes, from the foundation. In Processe of Tyme, when the Colledge became inlarged and the Company increased, these were found too straight, and have been so often drayned on all sides and within so short a space that the rottenness of the ground about admitted no more emptying. Wherefore necessity caused the burying of these and the building of new Privyes [1614].

These Buildings have in them five rooms. The 1st lower that hath a dore to the Colledg is allotted to the Bible-Clearke in lieu of his old chamber that was annexed to the old Chapel now the Library. An old bedstead without any covering, and a chest opening in the side, are implements [furniture] in it. It is now in possession of Wm Rowland, Bible-Clarke. The chamber over it, with a chimney in it, hath in it, and another opposite to the same, house implements in them. In ye kitchen under, cockloft over, ye boards and ye luggage there belongs to ye Rector. In ye kitchen and larder under, ye dresser and larder boards are ye College's.

These buildings were erected at the Colledg charges, the Rector conferring about 40s to it. They belong to the Rector, in that they stand upon the ground which appertained to his Back Side and house of office before the alteration by reason of building the Chapel.

2. From that the space between the Walls, keeping of the same breadth to the City Walls, the ground was not consecrated, but was reserved so in case Benefactours might be led by God to build lodgings there ²; which was also the consideration that the Chapel hath no west window. In that space the narrowe garden and mound were at the Rector's charge. The little Privye of 12 deepe was erected at the House-cost to remayne for the Rector's familye.

3. The new building ¹ behind the Chaple erected at the Rector's charg (especially when the Earle of Carnarvan, Jo. Robarts sole son to the Lord Robarts, the Lord Wharton and Sir Tho. Wharton his brother, with Mr Lorenzo Carye the Lord Falkland's son, were togither pupills under him). Of the space ² between the Chapel and Towne Wall y^t is consecrated ground as runneth even in length with the Chapel, and noe more; as appeareth by the Instrument.

The Tower house standing between the butts, heretofore ³, before the Rector's stable was taken in lease from the Towne by Dr Holland, who builded it and left it to his wife Mrs Susanna Holland; she sold hir right therein to Dr Prideaux, the succeeding Rector, in whose possession it now remaynes, paying yearly for it 2s to the Cittye, until Dr Holland's lease be ended. This, being before a stable, was turned into a Kitching, with the Lodgings over it, at the charg of the sayd Rector Dr Prideaux; who, yielding up his lease which he had of Mrs Holland, took a new of the Colledg for 40 years, for the entrance of that lower rome and studye which stands on the Mount. The Colledge was at the most charge, as also for the rayles about the new part, and walling of it. The Dyall on the Mount is the said Rector's, given unto him by Richard Standish (?), mason, when he was Vicechancellour.

4. Without the Rector's Back side, ranging along by the Cittye Wall, stood 3 little gardens, which were demolished when the East part of the publique Library and Schooles were built. They belonged to the Colledg, but were let out to Principal Bradwell⁴, widow Almond⁵, and goodwife Hollyday. That next the Schools Principal Braddle was well paid for by the University. The 2 others rest yet to be reckoned for, both for the stones and lease.

All that space of ground upon part of which the Mount and our Chapel stand, and out of which we had our Bowling Alley 6, was formerly a common Cart-Waye¹, which we gott to be interrupted and inclosed, from the Citty, in a lease of 99 years, by King James's mandatory letters to the Maior and Aldermen, who before withstood us: which letters were procured by meanes of the now Marquesse of Hamilton, some tymes student of our Colledg, which we and our successors will acknowledge with thankfull Remembrance.

5. Ranging with the Bowling Alley, without the doore in the City-Wall stand our publique Privyes². Builded at the Colledg charg (cost 200 li), in the dongeon of w^{ch} are left two Arches opposite East and West, about the midst: to be taken notice of by Posterity that may have occasion to empt them.

Of the 3 Roomes into the web they are divided, that next the Wall with the Roome over it is only for the Rector's use. The second for the Fellowes: and the third for the Company of the House. Over these 2 Roomes are Woodhouses belonging to those that had their Woodhouses demolished at the building of the new Hall and Sellers. The tenement of one Davye Waters without it is part of the ground whereof we have a lease from the Cittye for [? 40] years, paying yearely for the whole.

6. Eastward from the Privyes, the Tower in the Towne Walle is a part of the mentioned ground lease of 99 years, but a lease of ... with a garden before it was granted by the Cittye to one Thomas Almond for the Terme of 41, weh terme the Colledg is bound in their grand lease quietly to suffer to. . . . But, anno 1632, the interest of Almond was bought in by John Prideaux, Rector, for the summe of 30 li for 23 yeares, weh Almond had then in it: who renewed that lease to make it up 40 yeares, and so to pay 1sh yearely for it to the Colledg.

The Bowling Alley, Rayles, and the two Freestone Walls that bound it were erected and perfected at the Colledg charg, which was no small thing, to turne a place so deformed and incommodious (being a stinking unpitched Cartway before) to the Use it now serves: both for Recreation, Comlynesse, and benefit of the lower chambers that open their windows to it.

So much of the Outworkes or Suburbs.

A new Bog-house was built on the same site 1706, which cost £149 178 9d. [The rebuilding in 1887 cost a large sum.]

- 1. In Chapel Row (called before Rector's Row) the Chapel there erected was at the charg of Geo. Hakewell Dr of Divinitye, Chaplayne to his Majtye Charles the 1st both when he was Prince and King. He was an Exceter man, born of pious and worthy Parents: Fellow of this Colledg, wherein he took all his degrees: afterwards was Archdeacon of Surrye. His learning appears in his printed workes. But his piety and bounty in this, that having two sonnes of his owne to be provided for, he notwithstanding gave 1200li by the least for the publique good of the Place he was bred in. For the waynscoting of and paynting the Sowther Isle the Colledg was at the charge of about 200li, in regard the Building Plott by the Founder was by so much and more exceeded.
- 2. Adjoyning to the Chapel are the Rector's Lodgings: which howsoever indamaged by that neighbourhood in the loss of a garden and private walkes, with the stopping of three western windowes, the far best light to the roomes abutting that way, yet all these are more than recompensed by the Fitnesse of the place for his own private entrance to it, and the separated seates for his Familye.

To the Rector's Lodgings 1 there belong

1st Cellar, divided into two roomes.

¹ The part of the Rector's Lodgings looking eastward, and containing the Kitchen, the Dining Room over it, and the Long Garret over that, were built by Dr Arthur Bury in 1671, the House fronting northwards by Dr Prideaux himself, subsequently to this Survey in 1631. The windows of the Dining Room were new glazed in 1785; having been before glazed in 1733 by Dr Atwell in the manner of Italian Balcony-windows, which let in Pools of Water in rainy weather.

The south front of the Rector's Lodging towards the Quadrangle was new sashed together with all the other windows of the Quadrangle, and great West Front of the Coll. towards Jesus Coll. in long Vacation 1789 (Soluta Varia 3 Dec. 1789, 6 May 1790).

The same front cleansed, with a stone-coloured wash, and the windows and cornice new painted, early in June 1793. [In pencil] This front, or rather the whole Lodgings, taken down and rebuilt, being raised to a height corresponding with the rest of the College 1800-2.

The Stillings, Bynns, and Shelves, and old Table there standing, belong to the Colledg.

2^d Waynescote Parler: which was so fitted at the Colledg charge, and these two ... windowes added to it to supply the Light taken from it by the Chapel.

3^d Rector's Bedchamber: enlightened by the two larg windowes at the Howse charg by Dr Prideaux, who turned the passage, from it into the Dyning chamber, into a little studye. The waynscote Presse in it, with cubbords, is an House implement.

4th Entry: wch was before with open stayres to the Colledg, with much deformity and inconvenience: this altered by the appoyntement of the same Rector, and that division of . . . with a door opening to the back side, for most of the materialls were at his own charg.

6th Studye gained from under the old Stayres, looking to the back side, conveniently shelved at the House cost.

7 Hall: much mended in the changinge. A table in it, 2 Formes, and a . . . waynscote cubbord are House implements in it, togither with an old flat Chest.

8 Studye: lately gayned from an obscure Passage to the Tower, by breaking out the window to the Colledge.

9 Waynscoted great dyning Roome over it: wherein the cubbord of the same Worke, and Bench annexed, are House-implements.

10 Tower-Studye: at the Stayre-Foote of the Rector's Studye, with some shelves in it put up by Mr Hoffman when he had it.

11 Treasury over; is only for the Colledg use: to the Doore are 3 Lockes, of weh the Rector, Subrector, and Deane, have alwayes the Keyes, as also of a Chest² in it, where the money is kept. The Waynscote Presse in it with distinct Boxes for Colledg Evidences, and a Roome for plate, was set up at the Colledg charge by Mr. Will^m Helme when he was Subrector.

added to it in Dr Holland's Tyme; the Chymny in Dr Prideaux's; together with the Stydye towards the Colledg by Mr John Robarts the Lord Robarts's only sonne; who there left the Hangings and Travasse [Traverse] to it to the Rector, at his going from it. In this Cock-loft the great Standing Bedsted with the old Court-Cubbord, belong to the Colledg.

² This Chest is now in the muniment room, which also has 3 locks.

- 13 Middle Chamber next under it: having but one studye formerly in it, and another added in Dr P.'s Tyme, with the Dore and Stayres that descend from it to the lower Roome.
- 14 Lower Chamber: in wch the . . . Waynscote was at the charg of the Colledg, with the new building the Chymny and altering the Window.
- 15 Larg Grund-Studye within it: with the window altered and convenient shelves which belong to the House. This Ground-Chamber and Study, with that above it, and the 2 Studyes in it, were granted by a Decree of the Society to Dr Prideaux, to belong to his Lodging for his Tyme of Rectorship only, but not to his Successors but uppon a new Grant.
- 3. The next Under-Chamber eastward, belonging to the House, togither with a dark Woodhouse annexed, were turned into a Bursary by Dr P., with addition of the 4 windowes in it, newe flooring, and the Waynscote and Portall in it, with the Doore and Lock about it: the Table and Chayres in it are the sayd Rector's; the Formes and Germane's Hutch in it, with 2 other Coffers, belong to the House. Then follows a Detail¹ of the rest of the Rooms in Rector's Row, viz: what are in the present Library Court in Staircases marked and named in the present Register [1792] of Chambers as no. 7, no. 10, no. 11². These three Staircases were new-roofed and otherwise substantially renewed and repaired in the Time of the Rectorship of Drs Conybeare and Atwell 1732-3.

Cap. 3. Of the Library List.

The Library at this Time (1631-2) was the old Chapel of Bishop Stapleton turned into a Library, and having one Room (some Time the Bachelors or Junior Common Room), and two small Places, latterly used, the one for a Barber's Room, and the other a Hole for Ashes; by means of which last the Library was burnt on Dec. 2. 1709. But being refitted, it was used as the College Library till 1778; when it was taken down. This old Chapel, afterwards a Library, being much too near to the Buildings of Rector's Row, being within 25 feet of them, the new Library was built farther off viz. near sixty feet south from those buildings, by which the windows in that Area, which were before much obscured by the height of the old Chapel or Library, and its steep Roof, are now much lighter and more chearfully situated, and open to the Air and Sunshine, making a decent oblong quadrangular Court, about 60 F. by 110. Dr Prideaux remarks that the Bible-Clerk was allowed a Room under the old Chapel, but on the Building of Dr Hakewell's Chapel, he had another Room assigned to him nearer to that new Chapel. The Society have of late allowed him one of the House-Rooms, of the inferior Class as to Rent, viz. Kitchen Staircase or no. 3, 2 pair Stairs middle; or one of the Rooms no. 11 at the East End of the Library Court viz. the North East Corner next the Pump.

² These staircases were pulled down when the present Rector's House was built. They were popularly known as Hell Quad.

Cap. 4. Of Bentley's Nest 1.

Filling up the space between the West End of the Old Chapel (at that time turned into a Library) and Periam's Buildings (the Common Room Staircase) were Timber Buildings, made over the oldest and original Library; for them see Loggan's Print, where the oldest Library, and its Superstructure may be seen very distinctly. The old Library was turned into a Fellow's Chamber with 8 Studyes: called a Fellow's Right, but probably let to younger members, having one Room in common, and the Studies or Closets severally. [Thomas] Bentley was Butler of the College in Dr Holland's Rectorship, and a native of Plymouth.

Cap. 4. Of Peryam's Mansions.

The 4th Parcell of building termed Peryam's Mansions in regard of the Firmenesse and Magnificence of it, in comparison of weh Bentley's wooden Stuffe may be termed a Nest. Mr John Peryam, a merchant of Exeter, gave 560li towards the erecting of it, which the Colledg made up 700li to perfect it 2. The Place where it stands was before a Tennys Court. In digging of the Foundation, 12 Foote deepe in the Earth was found a Stone mortar full of small Peeces of Silver, of divers stamps, but about the same value, of 2^d—whereof some were distracted by the workemen, and others knew not what to make of them at first. A Part of them were brought to the Rector, who changed them for —li, wherewith the Brasen Candlestick weh hangeth in the Hall was purchased. The Arms uppon both sides of this

² In 1618. The senior Common Room, being the southern Ground Room of Peryam's Building, was new-floored with Oak in the long Vacation of 1792, and a new Window made in that, and the Room over it. New furnished and carpeted 1820.

Building are Peryam's, and Prideaux; his first wife being a Prideaux; who brought with her the Ground of his Estate. He never saw what he had done for us; nor required Account of the money he gave; neither conditioned with the Colledg in any sort for the disposing of the Lodgings, with Reference to himself or any of his. A worthy Benefactor. God rayse us many such to follow his example.

Here follows a Recital of 8 Chambers. It appears from Loggan's View that the original Building was a story higher than at present, and it was reduced probably to match the Armagh Buildings, and the rest of the Fabrick.

Cap. 5. Of Acland Alleye.

This may be diversed from the rest in Honour of that worthy Knight Sir John Acland of Devon who gave us 800 li to the erecting of our new Hall1; to weh the Coll. added 200li before it could be furnished as it is. The Hall before stood in the midst of the Quadrangle, having the Kitchen and Buttery 2 annexed to it. It was in latter Tymes augmented with Lofts at the West End over the screen (?), but never could conveniently intertayne the Company: Whereupon Sir John Acland (having formerly bene of this Colledg) uppon the Persuasion especially of Mr Isaiah Faringdon, Fellow sometyme and Bacchalaur of Divinitye of this House, was brought to take such an ... Worke in Hand; which he never saw after it was built: and was so far from reserving any Interest to him or any of his for performing it, that he gave 16li yearely for a Pension to be payd unto 2 poore Scholars to be chosen out of Exceter Schoole, which at this Time fayleth, God knoweth by whose Fault. The Colledg affords them Roomes (?) in Honour of the Benefactor. In Tyme perchance the Cittye of Exceter will thinke uppon it to do some Good to Exceter Colledg, in weh it hath had . . . The Place where this new Hall stands was voyd, having in it only an old Worke-house and 2 patched Studyes to the Buttery-Chambers. The Pillars in ascending the Stayres are of ... bestowed uppon us by the Dean and Chapter of Christ-Church from Oseney.

2. The Buttery adjoyning to the Hall³ was heretofore a Fellow's Right.

- 3. The great Cellar under the Hall was made when the Hall was builded. But
- 4. The little Cellar within was formerly a vacant Place where dark Woodhouses stood w^{ch} belonged to the Fellowes, whereof the Larder within . . . is Part.
- 5. The Kitching also next to it was a Fellowes Chamber web had 2 Studyes in it. The former Kitching stood in the midst of the Colledg very disgracefully, long after the Hall was down. Over it was a Fellowes Right, as also over the old Buttery, taken away with the old Hall, web Rights were recompensed fully in the Colledg by other new Buildings. Seniors... of a private Garden paled in and annexed to the Kitching Chamber, with a Vine in it that took up a great Part of the Square, so that then the whole Colledg was but a confused number of blynd Streats.

This old Kitching was removed and the other finished 1632, Robt Vilvayne Dr of Physicke of the Cittye of Exeter and Mr William Orford Bacchalour of Divinitye Parson of Clyst-Hydon in Devon contributing to this Work 20li a peece, to which the Rector added for the Tyme that weh finished it for Use. Under the Kitching is a fayre Sinke of 12 long and 4 foote broad, to receive the washing of it and the Larder, as Use shall require. The Pastry within was a Part of the next Chamber, formerly a Woodhouse.

The Water ¹ comes from the Comduit at Carfoxe. It came to the old Kitching from a Cisterne in the Wall by the Chapel Doore, which Cisterne at the building of the new Kitching was taken away as not being of farder Use.

Then follows an Acc^t of the Rooms over these, demolished together with the Kitchen and Buttery under them, as above described by D^r Prideaux, in order to make Room for the Kitchen and Buttery substituted in their Room in the Rectorship of D^r W^m Paynter 1700-3.

coin of the Hall westward to Jesus College (i.e. to the Corner facing Jesus College) containing the Buttery and Kitchen; Length 62 Feet, Breadth 28 Feet, 2 Inches. The Buttery, and Passage from the Kitchen to the Hall; Breadth 23 F., Breadth of Buttery alone 18 F. (From an original in the handwriting of Dr Wm Paynter, in whose Rectorship that Part of the College was rebuilt 1701-3.)

The Kitchen at the S.W. Angle of the Coll. was supplied only by a Pump in the said Kitchen till 1795, when a new Pipe for Water from the Hinxey Conduit was laid from abt the north Gate of Lincoln College, in order to supply the new Culinary Apparatus for which the Pump was not so well suited.

Cap. 6. Of Tower Range.

So denominated, says Dr Prideaux, from the Tower 1 at the End of it. This was the Range of Building from the South-West Corner of the great Quadrangle to the West or principal Gateway of the College towards the Street. This Place was formerly the back-Gate 2, a poore Thing, and a stinking pissing Place. At the Entrynge in at the Right Hand before the lower Chamber was a Piece of an old Wall, and then an i . . . with . . . before the Tower Windowes, full of Bones Filth and Nettles. All which were taken away at the Building of the Towre weh was done by the fore-mentioned Mr Everard Chambers uppon his own Cost, who had an Interest of the Colledg in it for certayne (40) yeares, for weh the Coll. afterwards compounded with him, as it appears by the Register-Booke.

OTHER LAND.

Some land was sold when the Theatre was built; Reg. 2 Sep. 1664 consensu Scholarium tunc domi petentium (?) decretum est ut major pars cujusdam areae posticae ad hoc collegium pertinentis a parte orientali sitae pro rationabili fine in usum Universitatis elocaretur, quo convenientius publici Theatri fundamina ponerentur.

The College perhaps had also a small slip of land projecting towards the Ashmolean; and part of the College was damaged in 1679 when some houses were being pulled down to make way for the Ashmolean; Hist. Comm. xii. 7, p. 158, Wood's Life ii. 452. In the summary at the end of Prideaux's Survey are the words '2 Towres which were formerly in the Rector's backyard and garden, now all demolished.' The Eastern of these, south of the centre of the Ashmolean, would seem from an old map (B) in the Rector's possession to have been Almond's (p. 313), and perhaps this was sold to the University. About the site of the other tower there is no doubt, as its site was clearly visible when the modern buildings were erected.

¹ Dimensions of Tower Range according to Dr Paynter. From the North side to the Kitchen is 74 Feet. The wideness of the Chambers with the walls 25 F. 3 Inches; Chambers within the walls (clear) 18 F. 3 Inches.

² Old Western Gateway purchased by the Coll. of Mr Everard Chambers who built it, in 1605: the same pulled down and a new one built 1701–3. The Parapet Wall and Balustrade at the top being decayed, were renewed about 1787, both the side Parapets, including 3 chimneys, and the like Parapets in the two Fronts without and within above the semicircular Pediments.

GWINEAR.

The earliest deeds connected with Gwinear are as follow:-

(1) Ralph abbot of S. Mary de Valle to all &c., 1267 Wednesday next after the Sunday on which Reminiscere is sung (16 Mch 1267), We have sent R. de Ponte canon as our proctor 'tam in Anglia quam in Cornubia,' to effect an exchange with the prior and convent of Merton, canons of St. Augustine, of our property in England and Cornwall, for what they hold in Normandy viz. at Kaignes in the diocese of Bayeux [S. Mary de Valle was on the river a little above Caen, there is a slight account of it in Gallia Christiana ix. 440. Gosselin de la Pommeraye and Petronilla were benefactors to it or perhaps founders about 1125; Dugdale vi. 246, 248; Whitaker's Cathedral of Cornwall ii. 51; Monast, Exon, xv. 33, 38, 41, 65, 188, Suppl. 5, 7 under 'Tregony']. (2) Brother R. de Ponte to all &c., Nemeton 4 Aug. 1267, I resign the priory of Treguny into the hands of Walter [Bronescomb] bishop of Exeter, the parish church of the same place, the parish church of Bery, with their rents possessions advowsons &c., held in England by S. Mary de Valle; that the said bishop, with the consent of Merton priory, may dispose of the same at his pleasure, only reserving the moveables belonging to the said abbey; witnesses the religious men Robert prior of Berliz of the order of S. Augustine in the diocese of Bath and Wells, R. his canon, Brother Vincent of the order of Preachers, Robert his confrater; M. John [de Bradlegh] archdeacon of Barnstaple, M. W. de Capella, M. Thomas de Bocland, M. R. Pace; dominis W. de Esse, Peter de Guldeford; presbyters Hugh de Plumpton, R. de Grangeys clerks: (printed in Monast. Exon. 7, where see the next document). (3) Brother Gilbert prior of Merton to all &c., at Merton the day of S. Margaret 1267, We have appointed Brother Roger of Norwich our canon, and dominus Roger de Eyta R. of Shirefeld our seneschal, as our proctors for the dioceses of Exeter and of Bath and Wells, to exchange &c., and assign over to Walter bishop of Exeter &c. (4) Brother Roger of Norwich canon of Merton, and Roger de Ayeta R. of Shyresfeld, proctors of Gilbert prior of Merton, to all &c., at Nemeton 4 Aug. 1267. Since Ralph abbot of S. Mary de Valle &c. have exchanged their priory of Treguny and their church of Bery, together with the advowsons of the churches of Uppotery, Bokerel, Clystwyk, S. Laurence Exon, Stockleigh Pomeray, Ascumbe, and Aure, with all &c. in the dioceses of Exeter and of Bath and Wells-for the priory of Kaygnes belonging to our church of Merton in the diocese of Bayeux, with the assent of the Bishops of Exeter and Bayeux; we place the 'statum' of the priory of Treguny, and the parish churches of Treguny and Bery (to which the bishops of Exeter are said to present), 'alte et basse,' in the hands of the bishop of Exeter; witnesses M. John archdeacon of Barnstapol, Sir Ralph de Arundel, Alexander de Okeston; M. W. de Capella, Thomas de Bocland, Roger de Dertford, R. Pace, Walter de Lacking, W. de Braddon, Peter de Guldeford chaplains. (5) Henry de la Pomeray, Lord of Treguny and of Bery to all, &c., Nemeton 4 Aug. 1267, Since the Abbot of S. Mary de Valle had these places from the gift of our ancestors, we consent, &c., witnesses as before. (6) Walter Bishop of Exeter to all, &c. Crideton, 16 Aug. 1267, we consent to the exchange, and ordain that the parish church of Bery shall belong to Merton Priory, and they are to present to the vicarage. As to the manor of Teygne Canonicorum and the land of Worthy, which S. Mary de Valle held from the family of de la Pomeray, Henry de la Pomeray is to have Worthy in compensation for the attendance of one priest, whom the abbey had to send from among their canons to attend him continually, and for other services due; and Merton is to have Teygne in frankalmoigne, but is to admit a fit person presented by the family of Pomeraye to pray for their souls, &c., and he is to give them three acres in Bery to store their fruits on, &c.; and three priests are to be maintained in the Priory of Treguny to keep up divine service, reserving to ourselves, &c., as to Uppotery, &c., the usual rights; witnesses dominis W. deacon and Roger [de Thoriz] archdeacon of Exeter, M. John archdeacon of Barnstaple, Thomas de Hereford, J. Fitz Robert, J. of Exeter canons of Exeter: Robert Prior of Berliz; Sir Wydo de Novant, Sir Warin de la Stane, M. J. Wyger, M. W. de Capella, M. Roger de Derteforde, M. W. de Braddon, M. Peter de Guldeford chaplains; Hugh de Plympton, R. de Grangeis clerks.

Nicholas Bishop of Sarum, in the visitation of his diocese 1292, ascertained these facts: clergy and laity say that M. Robert de Clifford R. of Earl's Wittenham 1 60 years since held all the tithe of the demesnes now held by domini Hugh de Plecy, John de S. Elena, and Robert de Saunford parishioners of that church; and so his immediate successor dominus Drogo de Turbeville, and so for a long time his successor dominus Almaric de Plecy. But now the Prior of Longa Villa, through his agent in England, began to take the tithes under a fiction by the connivance of this last Rector, and so it has gone on. The Bishop then issued a commission to M. Thomas de Eadburbiry canon of York and M. Nicholas de Rudham clerks, at Remesbiry 17th Nov. 1292. Brother Philip prior de Longa Villa Giffardi had appointed Odo prior of S. Andrew, Norhampton, his proctor in England 15 May 1292. Odo on 6 Oct. 1292 named as his commissary before the bishop John de Appelford. On 10 or 17 Dec. 1292 in the parish church of Hungerford the Dean of Abendon certified that notice had been served on the prior to appear. The prior's agent appeared and said that he had a special privilegium to receive the tithe of Wittenham as an exception to the common right, and asked a further day to produce it, and he was allowed till Tuesday after Epiphany, and then till Wednesday after Purification. Then he produced nothing and went away contumaciously, and was allowed till the next Thursday. He did not appear then and was excommunicated. The Dean of Abendon announced this from Stakeburn 25 June 1294 to N. de Rudham, but added that the Prior of Longa Villa was allowed till the first lawday after S. James the Apostle (the message to the Prior of Longa Villa seems to have been dated Remesbiry 7 June 1294). As no one appeared in the Church of St. Nicholas at Abendon on the Monday after S. James, sentence was given that the prior had no right to the tithe, and that the present rector William de Braybroke should have it, witnesses dominus Nicholas V. of St. Nicholas at Abendon, William V. of Boklond, William V. of Pusie, Reginald de Ocby and John James deacons (diaconibus), Richard Michel, Richard de Stiventon, William de Sancta Wteford, Henry Loby clerks. In 20 Edward I the 'taxatio' of the parish is given as xxv marks, tenth xxxiiis iiiid, pensio of the Prior of Longa Villa cs, tenth ixs: and in the Computus of 1380 we read

'xxiis iid ob ad subsidium domini regis per clerum sibi concessum, et pro porcione Prioris de Longa Villa xs, xd uni homini qui portavit dictum subsidium domini regis ad monasterium de Malmesb. et pro acquietancia, iiii marcis pro uno libro inpignorato pro utilitate domus in cista August.' Prior Philip on 6 July 1320 says that considering the distance and difficulty of collection and the smallness of his portion of the tithe he gives it up to William de Braibrok the present Rector of West Wittenham and his successors. The same day he named William de Benefeld of Cambroun and William Russel of Methe (Methe near Torrington belonged to the Giffards), Rectors of churches in the Diocese of Exeter his agents in the matter of the Wittenham tithe. Sealed with his seal and that of Walter Bishop of Exeter. In another deed he grants Walter Bishop of Exeter the advowson of West Wittenham, witnesses Sir Martin de Fishacre, Sir Richard de Stapeldon, John de Ralegh, John de Caignes, John de la Pomeray; and in another deed, also dated 6 July 1320, he makes M. John le Knyght clerk and Roger de Morthoe his attorneys, to give seisin to Bishop Walter. Before William de Bereford and other Justices of the King's Bench in Michaelmas term 14 Edward II, rotulo xxxix 'Philippus Prior de Longa Villa Giffardi in Normannia summonitus fuit ad respondendum Waltero de Stapeldon episcopo Exoniensi de placito quod teneat convencionem inter eos factam de advocacione ecclesie de West Wittenham,' &c.; a fine is levied, and the bishop gives the prior 100 marks (stated in the king's Breve here recited, 28 July 14 Edward II); the prior named John de la Slo and John de Caneford his agents. On 12 April 1322, at Exeter, the bishop gave the advowson to the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon Hall, witnesses Sir Richard de Merton, Sir Richard de Stapeldon, Sir William Hereward, John Caignes, John Prodhomme. Pat. Rolls 20 May 15 Edward II (1322) Pro Rectore et Scolaribus de Stapeldone Halle Oxonie (for the appropriation of West Wyttenham church). Teste Rege apud Ebor. On I Feb. 1329 at Poterne, Roger Bishop of Salisbury certifies that he found in the Register of his predecessor Nicholas Lungespeye that the Prior of S. Andrew, Norhamptone, agent of the Prior of Longa Villa, presented John de Sicheston to the Church of West Wittenham 21 July 1292 at Chardestok but owing to various defects his predecessor had not accepted the presentation, but gave that church to William de Braybrok deacon on Saturday after the Assumption of the Virgin, at Croel.

The following deeds show the enquiries made as to the presentation:

(1) The Official of the Archdeaconry of Berks to Robert Bishop of Sarum, Abyndon, 6 April 1361, I have received your letter dated Poterne 19 Mch 1360, stating that the Rector and Scholars of Stapeldon Hall have presented John Bremdon presbiter to the vicarage of Wittenham, and ordering full enquiries to be made. The vacancy is caused by John Folyot the late vicar holding the parish church of Slyndefold (Slinfold in Sussex) in the Diocese of Chichester. The vicarage is worth £10 a year. John Brindon is over 26, liber et legitimus, &c. The Rector and Scholars presented John Folyot. (2) Hugh Rector of Rugwyk to Robert Bishop of Chichester, Sullyngton, 22 April 1361, I received your mandate dated Aldyngbene, 21 Dec. 1359, stating that you conferred Slyndefold, vacant by resignation of the late Rector Reginald, on John Foliot, and ordering me to induct him; I therefore inducted Foliot 24 Dec. 1360 in presence of Godfrey sacrist of the said church, Gilbert Atte Hallond, &c. (3) Robert Bishop of Sarum to John Bremdon, Maidenbradeleigh, 9 April 1361, We admit you to the Vicarage of West Wittenham this day. (4) Robert Bishop of Sarum to all, &c., recites the presentation by the Rector and Scholars 'in our College Oxon' 7 Mch 136%, and the letter of the Archdeacon's Official, and a letter from the Bishop of Chichester, and that of Hugh R. of Rugwyk, and a certificate of the Dean of Abendon that John Foliot had held two incompatible benefices together for a year, and was therefore now pronounced deprived of Wittenham. (5) The Official of the Court of Canterbury to the Rector of Staunton in the Diocese of Lincoln, and the perpetual Vicar of Morton, and dominus Nicholas chaplain of the same place in the Diocese of Sarum; John de Brendon V. of Wittenham has been disturbed by the claims of John Foliot, you are to inhibit Foliot from all such conduct; dated Ocleford 6 June 1361.

By a convention between dominus Richard Pyn Rector and Henry le Hunt and Agnes his wife, 15 Mch 134\frac{3}{4}, they granted him a 'placea' of land for life at a rent of a quarter of barley. On 27 Dec. 1362 William le Blake of West Wyttenham and Agnes his wife daughter of John Kemp of West Wyttenham give Robert Bossorn, Robert Blakedon, John de S. Hillario and Robert le Ryche clerks a 'placea' of land 6 perches long and at the end towards the public road 32 feet broad and at the other end towards the cemetery 23 feet broad, 'which I Agnes lately had from Robert de Folham,' witnesses Thomas Stoyl, John Tyso, John Waryn, John Brid, William Lepesofte (at the back, 'West Wyttenham de quadam placea pertinente ad Rectoriam). Some other deeds follow: (1) John Bishop of Sarum to the Rector and Scholars, Sonnyng, 26 August 1381, We allow you to let out Wittenham to farm for 5 years. (2) Henry Bishop of Sarum to the Rector and Fellows, 6 Nov. 1607, This day John Best clerk, S.T.B., resigned Wittenham. (3) On 5 Feb. 161? William Prowse of Witnam clerk, John Reston of Culnham alias Cullam yeoman and Gregory Slade of Longe Witnam yeoman acknowledge being bound to John Prideaux Rector of the College in £100. (4) Whereas the College has granted William Prowse the present incumbent the next presentation of Wittenham, if it happens before Michaelmas 1622 by Prowse's death, provided a Fellow of Exeter is presented, if he will take it, &c.

Summer 1520 'vis viiid pro expensis magistrorum doctorum Wylton et Powell procuratorum in Convocatione episcoporum facta A.D. 1517°. Was this for Wittenham?

On I Feb. 154% the rule of 154I about not letting Long Wittenham and Gwinear before the end of a previous lease was relaxed for this once, and on 10 Feb. Wittenham let to Thomas Perse of Hincksay for 5 years from the Annunciation to 155I; 10 Feb. 154% let to him for 22 years, and on 27 Mch 155I for 4I years. (Perse of South Hinxey was father of John Pierse archbishop of York.) The land tax was redeemed on the rectory, and the vicarage augmented by redeeming the land tax 9 Feb. 1804.

CLIFTON FERRY, IN LONG WITTENHAM 1.

A genealogy of a family in one of the lowest stations, given both in narrative and in the form of a pedigree, written so early as 1437, and reaching back a century farther, is a curiosity and a rarity. Such is the following copied from the earliest document the College possesses about Clifton Ferry. It is a small parchment, written on both sides by the same ancient hand; the pedigree is in roundlets. I have expanded some contractions.

Johannes Brouns senior, Hythewarde de Westwyttenham in comitatu Berk., habuit issu viz. duos filios Johannem et Ricardum, et quinque filias scilicet Matildam, Aliciam, Ysabellam, Rosam, et Cristinam. Johannes primogenitus hereditavit dictum Hythe et ipse obiit sine issu, et tunc descendebat Ricardo fratri suo jure hereditario; qui Ricardus habuit issu, viz. Johannem et Willelmum; et post obitum dicti Ricardi descendit Johanni filio suo, qui Johannes decessit sine issu; et postea descendit Willelmo fratri, qui Willelmus habuit unicum filium Johannem nuncupatum; qui Johannes obiit infra etatem et sine issu, et tunc descendit jure hereditario ad le issu predictarum duarum sororum viz. Alicie et Cristine, duabus sororibus predictarum quinque. Alicia fuit nupta cuidam J. nativo, et habuit filiam Aliciam vocatam, que quidem Alicia filia fuit nupta Johanni Frensh, et generit ex ea filium Thomam nominatum modo superstitem; et alia soror viz. Cristina desponsata fuit cuidam Johanni Stevenes, qui genuit ex ea filium Johannem, de quo Johanne veniebat Emota uxor Willelmi Seward. Et dictus Thomas Frensh, alias Kynge, et Emota uxor Willelmi Seward, admissi fuerunt in plena curia pro heredibus coram Johanne Hore ad tunc senescallo, hiis testibus Ricardo Drayton armigero, Willelmo Borde, Johanne Stowe, et Willelmo Felys, ibidem tunc presentibus. Hec docta et informata fuerunt per Johannem Tubbe de Cliffton, etatis sexaginta annorum et amplius, anno regni regis Henrici sexti post conquestum Anglie xvimo.

This pedigree seems to have been designed to show that Thomas Frenshe, alias Kynge, grandson of Alice the second daughter, and (by failure of her brother's issue) co-heir of John Brouns, the hitheward or ferryman of Clifton, was one of the heirs-at-law to his great-grandfather's estate. By what means he satisfied the other heirs does not appear; but on Holyrood day 18 Henry VI (3 May 1440) he conveyed, under the name of 'Thomas Kynge de Wittenam Abbatis,' all his part of the 'hithe' and passage over the Thames at Clifton, with all chambers, houses, lands, meadows, pastures, ditches, waters, and fisheries, to Peter Shotesbroke Esq. of Newenham, John Shephard of Wittenham-Comitis clerk, and Thomas Haukyne of the same; one of the witnesses being John Tubbe, the old man from whose knowledge of the family the genealogy was drawn. These 3 persons re-infeoffed him and Joan his wife of the same estate, for their lives, and to the assigns of the said Thomas Kynge for ever, on Saturday in Easter week 19 Henry VI 1441. In 1483, 4 Nov. 22 Edward IV, Joan Goldry and John Frenshe alias John Kynge, of Redyng, (who seem to have been the widow and the son of Thomas Kynge) gave their half-part of the hithe to John Yonge of Watlyngton, his heirs and assigns; and on 30 Nov. the said J. F. alias J. K. released and quitclaimed to him, Sir W. Stoner being the chief witness to both deeds. John Yonge conveyed it to John Mercer clerk, William Buldry, and Roger Roper of Watlington, and to Roper's heirs and assigns, 12 Jan. 2 Ric. III (1484); appointing, on 14 Jan., Chr. Swan bailiff of Abingdon, and John Gibon of Watlington, his attorneys, to give seisin; and on 31 Jan. he released the same with the same remainder. Eight years after, this Roger Roper 'draper' demised it to Ric. Panter rector of Exeter College, Will. Ford, Walter Kyngdone, John Philipe, Will. Brue, Will. Merifelde, John Frendshipe, Tho. Laurey, Walter Cowse, and John Hickys, clerks, Rich. Robertis, Walter Dudman, Will. Glovere, Tho. Tremayne, and Peter Druet literatis, and to their heirs for ever, Oxford 1 Aug. 8 Hen. VII 1403; and on 28 Nov. he quitclaimed to them 'then in full possession'; Tho. Larkyne, Robert and Reginald Curteys, and Roger Aleyne being witnesses to both deeds. This is the substance of the only (nine) ancient deeds relating to Clifton Ferry.

MERTON.

Merton was impropriated to the monastery of Ensham (form given in Kennett's Parochial Antiquities 481) temp. Edw. III and rated at 17 marks 10s, of which 10 marks were secured to the Vicar or Parochus. There is an Inspeximus of Richard II; and John, bishop of Lincoln, on 20 May 1380 confirmed an ordinance of Geoffrey abbot of Ensham, made 4 Aug. 1379, about payments to the parish. See Dugdale, Monasticon iii. In the Valor Ecclesiasticus of Henry VIII the Vicarage is stated to be worth £8 by perpetual composition. It was granted, with Kidlington, to Sir W. Petre, and by him to Exeter College, as 'rectory and church of Meryton with all lands glebes tithes oblations obventions profits &c.,' and stated to be part of the lands &c. granted to Cardinal Pole. We have a copy of the lease of the parsonage, made by Abbot Antony Dunstone to Richard Gunter, one of the Bailiffs of Oxford, on 21 Aug. 1530, for 99 years (beginning after a previous lease of 28 years granted to John Camby 23 Dec. 1514) at a rent of 40s, reserving £8 for the Vicar, and some other small payments, and Gunter was to have the right of cutting wood in the woods of Wood Eaton for housebote, ploughbote, hedgebote, and firebote.

The parish was enclosed under a private Act 1762 (3 George III, c. 34), and the Enclosure Act of 1763. On 17 Jan. 1763 the College petitioned the House of Commons against Sir Edward Turner's bill for enclosing the common field of Merton; on 23 Feb. the matter was referred to the award of Lords Harcourt, Talbot, Strange, and Sir R. Newdigate; on 16 Mch it was agreed to pay £250 to Sir E. Turner for surrendering his lease, which had still 3 years to run; on 9 Sep. it was agreed to exchange some land with Sir E. Turner under the Enclosure Act, and on 26 Sep. £162 11s 9d was paid him for timber, &c. Before the enclosure the Rectory appears to have consisted of old enclosures 137a. 3r. 14p., with a common field of 86 acres, total 223a. 3r. 14p., also the great and small tithes of about 654 acres, and certain rights of common pasture. An allotment was made of 168a. 2r. 35p. in lieu of tithes, common field, &c. This, added to 137a. 3r. 14p., makes 306a. 2r. 9p., valued in 1763 at £173 13s 9d, 1798 at £361 1s 7d, 1806 at £439 7s 6d, 1813 at £727 6s 2d, 1820 at £586 158 3d. At first it was let on a fine system, and the fine on renewal in 1827 was £810.

Sir John Maynard's letter to Prideaux about the lease of Merton, 1629.

Reverend Sir

I received your letters by Mr Tozer, with which he proffered me a fee from the Colledge, to which I must ever both in the behalfe of my selfe and my brother acknowledge that I am so much bounden as I could not accept therof, my poore abilitys being indetted for themselves to that House, and therfore I desire you to do me that favor as to suffer some small payment of my dett in acknowledging Touching the lease of Meriton parsonage, I was with Mr Tozer at Sir Edward Harrington's lodging, who very readily showed me his lease, of the making whereof being under the seale of the Abot of Enysham I thinke there is no doubt, but thereby I find the case to stand thus. The abbot and convent of Enesham in 60 H. 8 21 Decemb by indenture made a lease to one Camby for 28 yeares, then in 220 H. 8 the successor reciting that Camby had and did hold the said parsonage by demise for 28 years, he and the convent made a 2d lease to one Gunter to have and to hold for 99 yeares from thend of the said 28 years, for which 28 years the said Camby did hold the same, so that by the frame of the 2d lease it is implyed that the first lease was determined at the making of the 2nd; expired in tyme it could not be but determined by surrender or otherwise it might. But this if it were so can helpe you nothing, for then the case is this. A lease is made for xx years, tenne years expird, then the lessee surrenders, and the lessor reciting the old lease makes a new, to comence after the 20 years for which the first lessee did hold; this lease begins not till the 20 years expired, but it had bin otherwise if he had said to comence after the first lease, for in our law we distinguish inter Tempus annorum and Terminus annorum; the terme of years in our construction is the Interest which is in the lessee, and may determine within the tyme, but the tyme that cannot be . . . But I conseive that there may be some question on Sir Edward Harrington's 1 lease another way: for by his deed it appeareth that the lease for 28 years was made by such an Abot as at the same tyme was also Byshopp of Landaffe, and so he no Abot at that tyme, for if an Abot be made a Byshop the abby becomes void unlesse he have for if a man make a lease to commence after another, and there was never any such, it comenceth forthwith.

a Comendam and Retinere, which must be lookt into. If it be otherwise, then the first lease was void in creation of yt, and then perchance the 2d lease will comence presently and then is now expired.

But this is but conjecture, because I know not whether there were a Comendam or no. You write that there is one lease inrolled. I pray send me a copy of yt and then I shall have more tyme to advise upon it, which now is no longer then the small space that I am in writing, and what I have out of Sir Edward's lease is but cursory, without the use of a penne but only my memory. My father remembers his service and love to you. As for my selfe I shall be very glad if I may expresse my selfe as I am

> Your loving kinseman and servant

London 4th of Dec. 1629.

JOHN MAYNARD.

Poster. I shal be able to give my selfe much more satisfaction if the coppy of that inrolled lease you write of were in my hands for an hower, and shall accordingly be able to give you further and more certaine satisfaction also. But for the inrolling or not inrolling of a lease, that makes no difference (as you write) for the inrolment is not a necessity of the conveyance, but security of the purchaser.

(outside) To the Right Worshipfull John Prideaux doctor of divinity Rector of Exon. Coll.

Dr. Paynter in 1695 wrote to White Kennett, remonstrating on a passage reflecting on Exeter College in his 'Parochial Antiquities' p. 671; the following is an extract, 'You mention Long Wittenham as Sir William Petre's gift to Exeter College, but that appropriation belonged to it long before his time; neither did he give advowsons of Yarnton and Cudlington: there being no presentation institution or induction to the latter; and the former is in the gift of the Spencers, though we conceive the College wronged as to that matter' [but J. Patteson in 1820 gave an opinion against the College, thinking the V. of Yarnton was in gross, while that of Merton was appendant to the Rectory, see Reg. p. 333, 336]. 'Again you say, that none of late years have been presented to Merton, I believe you have given the true reason, viz, the poverty of the Vicarage. The College never refused any, willing to accept a presentation. In the mean time the College hath taken care of the place and added to the maintenance of the curate. The case is common to other Colleges as well as Exeter College; and the appropriation of the donor's will is now applied to other uses, which must be answered before better care can be taken to provide more largely for such cures. We have much exceeded the dues of the Vicarage in our allowance, I might add also the ability of the College.' White Kennett answers 13 July 1700 'I assure you that these reflexions were meant purely on the abuse of the thing and not upon your Body as authors or instruments of it, I am heartily sorry that I should be thought to cast any rash and unjust censure on so worthy a Society.' Subsequently the College gave considerable sums (Reg. 13 Ap. and 24 May 1796): £100 on 19 June 1817 to repair the Vicarage, £560 in 1827 for the same object; and in 1840 £1500 to augment the living (to meet £200 from Queen Anne's Bounty), with further temporary allowance to the Vicar and other smaller donations; and paid besides £157 178 10d for extra work and the architect's fees; and in 1829 £30 was given towards a school; Reg. 19 Sep. 1730, 'M. Question electus ad curam ecclesiae de Meryton in annum sequentem, hac conditione, quod si officio suo hac in parte intra annum cedat, alius per Rectorem et Socios eligatur; 'third Register p. 31 a. 1744, and 5 Oct. 1745.

Some of the parishioners of Merton were married in the College chapel, during the years 1741-50 (similar cases occur from Kidlington 1747-54; see Hist. of Kidlington 194).

South Newington.

Reg. 13 June 1738, Peter du Bois M.A., Master of the school at New Woodstock, was el. V. of South Newington, Oxon, on a strong recommendation from the parishioners (Reg. 30 Sep. 1741 his widow); Andrew Wood the next Vicar, was instit. 3 and inducted 6 Aug. 1743 to R. of Headley in Surrey; James Williams, Fellow of Jesus, presented to succeed him 18 Oct. 1743, d. 11 Nov. 1802. For a list of the Vicars see 'History of Great Tew and South Newington' in the Transactions of the North Oxfordshire Archaeological Society 1875, printed 1877 by the University Printers. No Fellow took the living till John Cole 2 Ap. 1803. On 17 Oct. 1741 £10 or £12 was voted for measuring our manor of Little Tew, and having a map made; this Survey of Little Tew, copied from an older map, gives the strips of each owner in the commonfields in the way described by Mr. Seebohm at Hitchin, and in the maps printed by Mr. Mowat, Oxford 1888; 28 June 1742, constitutus est M. Ibbetson bursarius hujus Collegii qui, una cum seneschallo, Curiam Baron, intra manerium de Parva Tue teneat, nomine Rectoris et Scholarium, in qua Curia Eliz. Judge (quondam Ingram) sursum redditura est in manus dominorum manerii omne jus et titulum de et in uno messuagio virtute Rotulorum istius Curiae copiae'; 1 Oct. 1742 William Lord a tenant is appointed 'Viridarius' of the manor; 8 Jan. 1787 a gamekeeper. On the enclosure of the common at Little Tew, see 19 Nov. 1787, 14 Jan. 1788; an act was passed 1793 (Reg. 13 Mch 1793, 21 Ap. and 8 Oct. 1794); a manor court was held at Little Tew 17 May 1809. 13 June 1815, 19 June 1821, &c., the courts being held every three years. By the award under the Enclosure Act of 1794 the V. received land worth £10 a year, and the College was to pay him yearly £40. He now receives £78 from Queen Anne's Bounty, the Vicarage land of 13a. 1r. 3op. brings in £60 a year, and the Home field £10—the total from all sources is over £200. Originally, by old custom, the tenant of the Rectory had to pay the parish clerk 6s 8d, and to the parishioners yearly 12 bushels of mauslin corn or rye. On 27 May 1817 the College gave £200 and the materials of the rectorial house towards building a vicarage at South Newington, and on 29 June 1818 another £100 was given, and £40 a year added to the Vicar's stipend. For the lease of the estate allotted in lieu of tithes see Reg. 1819, p. 329; on 18 Dec. 1823 the Vicarage was augmented through an advance made by Mr. Hony, which the College repaid. In 1826 the College gave £1000 to augment the Vicarage, see Reg. 17 Nov. 1848. See Peshall Append. p. 16, Bodleian Charters p. 307.

COMPUTI RECTORIS.

The Computi date from 1324. The first account is for a whole year, and probably implies 12 scholars and one vacancy. The Academic year began on the morrow of S. Dionysius, i. e. October 10, but the Long Vacation usually extended from July 7 to October 18. Only 11 computi exist previously to 1354, 2 for complete years, 9 for single terms, and some are in a fragmentary state, so that sometimes the items slightly disagree with the total. Were the 17 years' computi 1337–54 destroyed in the riot of S. Scholastica's day 1355? Or is the Black Death responsible for this, and for 6 years and a term being missing between winter 1365 and summer 1372? The worst plague years were 1349, 1362, 1369–71, 1376. From the third outbreak Oxford suffered severely, and a similar cause may account for the year missing 1376–72. Besides the terminal accounts, there was a final account for the whole year.

It is worth while inserting here, since it throws light on the rental Arabic numerals begin to be used about 1374 (? the earliest date known, except two mentioned by Hunter, 'Archæol. Journal' vii. 84), and are often employed for purposes of distinction as in the computus of 1432; English words, such as 'strainer,' appear about 1365; see Rogers iv. 507, note in Hearne i. 370.

¹ The Latin of these and several other computi is printed in ed. i. p. 170.

The missing terms are, for the latter half of the fourteenth century, winter 1355—summer 1356, summer 1357, summer and autumn 1360, winter 1362, winter 1364—summer 1365, Lent 1366—Lent 1372, winter 1372—winter 1373, autumn 1374, winter 1376—autumn 1377, winter 1381—autumn 1382, Lent and summer 1383, winter 1383—summer 1384, winter 1384—autumn 1385, summer and autumn 1386, winter 1387—Lent 1388, Lent 1390, Lent 1390, winter 1394—winter 1395, summer and autumn 1396, winter 1396, these dates being in all cases inclusive. From the winter of 1354 to the winter of 1399 therefore the computi of 107 terms are extant (besides the Library Computus of 1383) and 74 terms are missing. For the fifteenth century rather more than 70 terms are missing out of 400.

EXTRACTS FROM THE REGISTER.

Chardon on the completion of his year of probation was accused by many of many wrong acts and those not light ones, which he confessed and asked pardon for with many tears as having been lead away by others and especially a Frenchman M. Harcot a seditious man whose blandishments, counsels, threats and instigation had acted like an enchantment on his tender years. On this his admission was put off till the next day, when the Rector and majority of the Fellows admitted him, having good hope of amendment in his future life, especially as the Frenchman had been deservedly expelled.'

3 Sep. 1594 'decretum ut quicunque inter prandendum vel caenandum aliquem, absentem, publico huius regni iure non convictum, detrectaverit, a mensa statim ipso facto (vel cum ignominia) removeatur;' 30 Oct. 'quod omnes scholares suscepturi gradum bachalauriatus solvant decano, vel ei saltem plenarie satisfaciant, priusquam presententur, sin vero decanus propter nimiam suam incuriam et negligentiam tunc non acceperit, nihilominus eam pecuniam Collegio solvere tenetur;' 2 Nov. 'ut quicunque commensalis aut batelarius rus esset profecturus illud Rectori vel subrectori vel Bursariis indicet, ut communarum ratio habeatur;' 'ut unusquisque commensalis vel batelarius ad gradum bachalauriatus vel magisterii promotus, vel eundem quem habuit, vel alterum fideiussorem producat e sociis, ut ratio etiam communarum habeatur;' 29 Nov. 'quod tam battalarii quam socii et commensales habeant in unoquoque ferculo tempore caenae (exceptis diebus pisculentis) cibum qui constat sex denariis.'

23 July 1621 decretum erat ut Guilielmus Hardinge Collegii nostri coquus primarius qui hactenus pro ligno carbonibus et aliis expensis minutioribus viginti tres libras et octo solidos annuatim recipere consueverat, haberet iam a nobis stipendium illud suum tribus libris quinque solidis et quatuor denariis auctius, adeoque a Bursariis nostris quadraginta marcas seu 261 13s 4d posthac quotannis acciperet: Ea lege et conditione ut post idoneum semel a Collegio paratum patinarum numerum ille postea sumptibus propriis omne genus patinas nobis suppeditaret, veteres confractas seu imminutas reficeret, novasque quoties opus esset, sine aliquo Collegii damno aut sumptu, in eorum locum perpetuo substitueret. Eodem tempore visum est decernere ut David Waters latrinarum purgator et janitoris vicem in Collegio implens quolibet prandii ac cenae tempore portam posticam seu occidentalem observaret, Boreali vero etiam clausae iisdem temporibus semper adstaret venientesque intromitteret vel excluderet, eoque nomine stipendii loco quadrantem a quolibet in Collegio commorante cujuscumque ordinis aut conditionis, etiam pauperibus scholaribus, hebdomadatim acciperet.'

27 Sep. 'decretum erat ut Bibliorum lector tempore disputationum presertim bacchalaureorum in aula habendarum scamna apte disponeret, et idoneum candelarum numerum suo semper sumptu parari curaret; stipendiique loco a quolibet commensali sociorum mensae adscripto, necnon suggenario, obolum; a quolibet autem battellario quadrantem, hebdomadatim acciperet.'

r Oct. 'decretum erat ut (quia scholarium Juniorum cubicula habitationi minus apta censebantur) tria inferiora cubicula in infima stega aedificii Bentleiani cederent posthac in usum perpetuum sociorum hujus Collegii: tria autem alia cubicula quae ad hunc usque diem a sociis incolebantur commensalibus dehinc locarentur eorumque reditus in usum aerarii nostri converterentur.'

Nov. 1661 'decretum est magistros commensales aeque ac scholares perpetuos in posterum teneri ad disputationes in sacra theologia obeundas et sub eadem paena,' 11 Aug. 1663 'decretum est ut baccalaurei omnes qui ante vices suas disputandi intra quatuordecem dies praesentes in Academia fuerint teneantur vices istas praestare vel per seipsos vel alios baccalaureos.'

12 Dec. 1684 'decretum est ad utilitatem Bibliothecae in usum juniorum institutae, quod quilibet socio-commensalis solvet decem solidos, suggenarius 7s 6d, battelarius 5s, pauper scholaris 2s 6d, a Bursario recipiendos, in usum Bibliothecae impendendos ex arbitrio Sub-rectoris et Decani.'

20 Feb. 1716 'Agreed that every determining batchiler pay in lew of the accustomed breakfast in the Hall on Egg Saturday and the Stipulators dinner the same day and in lew of the Aristotle supper Ash Wednesday night to the Dean of the College the sum of fourty shillings to be disposed of in the manner following: to the House for the Library £1 1s 6d, to the Dean for treating his assistants Ash Wednesday 10s, to the Aristotle 5s, to the Stipulators 3s 6d.'

3 Ap. 1733 'Cum exercitia hujus Collegii ordinaria nimis hactenus neglecta fuerint, unde jacent literarum studia bonarumque artium doctrina minus promovetur; cujus rei in causa sunt partim stipendia Officiariorum admodum exilia nec pro ratione conditionis illorum, vel laboris constituta; partim autem statutorum defectus et inopia praescriptorum, quorum ad normam exigantur Officiariorum labores, diriganturque praedicta exercitia; Nos Rector et Scholares Collegii Exoniensis in Universitate Oxoniensi in sacellum nostri Collegii solenniter convocati, re prius mature deliberata, et perlectis diligenter statutis perpensisque, ex unanimi nostro assensu et consensu, pro nobis et quantum in nobis est pro successoribus nostris Statuimus et sancimus Regulas et Ordinationes sequentes posthac observandas.

Primum statuimus et ordinamus quod nullum munus vel officium alicui scholari absenti, nec in Collegio personaliter residere in animo habenti, quo munus suum recte obire possit, quacunque de causa concedatur. Si vero contigerit quod scholaris in aliquod officium electus et ordinatus, idemque virtute juramenti Collegio olim in admissione sua praestiti capessens, fato vel aliter e sodalitio cedat, vel ob valetudinem suam minus firmam aliamve quamcumque causam juxta formam statutorum approbandam a dicto Collegio in tempus aliquod discedere cogatur, vel quovis alio modo minime aptus et idoneus ab Rectore, sive eo absente Subrectore et scholarium quorum interest Officiarium praedictum eligere, vel a majore parte eorundem inveniatur, ordinamus et statuimus quod praedicti Rector et Socii alium aliquem scholarem idoneum intra septem dies constituant, qui prioris munus gerat et mercedem accipiat, omne id tempus quo prius ille electus deerit officio suo.

Praeterea statuimus et ordinamus quod nullus scholaris (exceptis Subrectore et Theologiae Praelectore, uti infra pluribus exponetur) in officia duo vel plura eligatur; modo scholares ad munera singuli singula capessenda domi existentes inveniantur. Sin aliter permittimus et concedimus uni alicui scholari idoneo duo munera simul gerenda. Proviso tamen quod Officiarius ille cui minus incumbat laboris, quique minorem prioris sui muneris fructum speret, modo sit muneris istius secundi capax et ad id fungendum idoneus, Officiario alteri plus operae debenti plusque mercedis speranti anteponatur, adeo ut exinde labores et conditiones Officiariorum quantum potest inter se pares fiant.

Quoniam vero stipendium Subrectoris conditioni et loco ejus minus sit accommodatum, onus autem Hebraici Praelectoris satis leve; ordinamus et statuimus quod haec duo munera conjungantur; quodque praedictus Subrector virtute muneris Hebraici Praelectoris singulis anni terminis tres praelectiones portionem aliquam Veteris Testamenti ex natura Hebraicae linguae explicantes (ita tamen ut ne plures unâ in eadem septimana sint habendae) die martis tempore pomeridiano legere teneatur. Nihilominus si posthac contigerit Subrectorem non satis idoneum officio Hebraici Praelectoris eligi teneantur electores alium scholarem, modo reperiatur idoneus, huic muneri praeficere.

Quoniam autem Catechista stipendii nomine tantum viginti solidos annuatim habeat, nec ulla alia emolumenta percipiat; et cum officii sit in Christianae religionis elementis juventutem instituere, quod ad munus Theologiae Praelectoris merito attinere judicamus, nos ea consideratione moti haec duo munera semper esse connectenda volumus et sancimus. Ac insuper statuimus quod Theologiae Praelectori, singulis S. Michaelis et S. Hilarii terminis septem, Paschatis termino quatuor, et Trinitatis termino tres, praelectiones (quarum alternis saltem annis undecim continuas volumus esse Catecheticas) de argumentis theologicis vel de aliqua portione Novi Testamenti in diversis septimanis singulae praelectiones die jovis tempore antemeridiano sint legendae.

Praeterea volumus et ordinamus quod Dialectices, Philosophiae et Rhetorices Praelectores locis et temporibus per statuta constitutis sedulo praelegant vel a juventute ad audiendum destinata sedulo legi faciant eique exponant nempe Dialectices Praelector librum aliquem Aristotelis vel Porphyrii Dialecticam vel Georgii Diaconi Epitomen; Philosophiae Moderator librum aliquem Aristotelis Ethicum, Œconomicum vel Politicum, sed ut librum aliquem Physicum a recentioribus conscriptum alternis paribusque numero vicibus; Rhetorices autem Praelector Rhetoricen vel Poeticen Aristotelis, aliumve librum Rhetorum Graecorum Ciceronis vel Quintiliani rhetoricam artem tractantem; nisi magna sit Vacatio, qua durante alia argumenta tractari volunt statuta. Repetitiones quoque earundem praelectionum sexta quaque vice ab auditoribus exigant Praelectores praedicti.

Insuper etiam volumus et ordinamus quod singuli Praelectores videlicet Dialectices Philosophiae et Rhetorices librum aliquem cum consensu Rectoris et quinque scholarium maxime seniorum, vel majoris partis eorundem (quem quidem consensum in singulis necessarium decernimus) praelegere et explicare aggredientes eidem continuo insistant et ad finem usque perducant, priusquam eis vel eorum successoribus alium librum legere et explicare liceat. Cum vero qui ad auditionem destinati praelectionibus absint, vel praesentes minus decore et negligentius se gerant, ex antiquo more plecti pecuniaria mulcta soleant; quae poena patribus et cognatis ipsorum plus damni quam ipsis commodi inferre videtur; nos igitur juventutis ipsius bono consulentes et sumptus academicae disciplinae minuere pro viribus cupientes volumus et ordinamus quod in posterum penso aliquo literario, quale Rectori et Officiario visum fuerit, plectantur delinquentes; pecuniaria mulcta nunquam aut perraro irroganda. Hoc autem pensum ordinarie Dialectices, Philosophiae vel Rhetorices praelectionis quam neglexerint versionem esse ordinamus.

Insuper autem quo diligentius incumbant muneribus suis Officiarii atque operam majorem bonis literis et artibus promovendis navent, volumus et ordinamus quod omnes et singuli scholares commensales et battellarii, singulis anni quartis pro spatio quadriennii ab eorum admissione proxime numerandi, nisi forte intra id tempus a Collegio penitus recedant quinque solidos Officiariorum omnium mercedis causa solvant; ex qua pecunia Sub-rector Decanus et Philosophiae moderator decem denarios singuli accipiant, Rhetorices Praelector unum solidum et denarios duos, Dialectices autem Praelector unum solidum et denarios quatuor. Omnes vero bacchalaurei in Collegio residentes sive scholares sint sive alii et scholares non graduati quadriennio in Academia completo, singulis anni quartis Decano soli conferant duos solidos et sex denarios, remunerandi gratia laboris a Decano exercitationibus eorum impensi.

Quoniam autem jus designandi amovendique famulos dicti Collegii, arbitriumque omnium eorum ex statutis Rectoribus sit permissum, unde gravissima incommoda aliquando oriri possunt et jam olim orta fuerunt, quia nonnulli Rectores, reverendum virum Johannem Conybeare S. T. P. antecedentes, quem jure et honoris causa nominatim excipimus, contra leges hujus inclyti regni et piam fundatorum nostrorum voluntatem pecunia se suosve ambiri et corrumpi permittentes, famulos minus idoneos aut designarunt aut designatos continuarunt, nec postea delinquentes vel etiam manifesto scelere deprehensos punire commode et secure potuerunt: Nos, huic incommodo vel potius crimini remedium sedulo quaerentes, ultro et sponte sua proponente consentiente et instante ipso Rectore, volumus et ordinamus quod in omne posterum tempus Coqui Promi et Tonsores sive superiores sint sive inferiores, cum consensu Rectoris suffragium duplex habentis et septem scholarium ex domi existentibus maxime seniorum, vel majoris partis eorundem designentur. Per Rectorem vero solum peccantes vel minus idonei inventi amoveantur, nunquam in eundem aliumve Collegii locum quacunque de causa nominandi.

Si tamen scholaris aliquis amotionem cujuscumque famulorum praedictorum minus idonei aut providi justa de causa petierit, teneatur Rector, modo in Collegio exstiterit et commode id facere potuerit, intra triduum septem scholares praedictos in convenientem locum cogere atque famulum delatum una cum delatore vel delatoribus appellare ibique postulationi vacare. Et si causae sententia praedictorum Rectoris et Scholarium vel majoris partis eorundem satis probatae fuerint, tum volumus et ordinamus quod una alteraque admonitione praemissa, praedicti Rector et socii famulum sic tertio postulatum penitus amovere, aliumque idoneum mora quam minima subrogare hoc scito in perpetuum astringantur.

7 May 1737 'Orta fuit contentio inter dominum Byrdall et baccalaureos tunc temporis in Academia presentes, utrum dominus Byrdall vices suas disputandi praestare teneretur, qui ad Collegium rediit inter quatuor horas ante quaestiones traditas in proximis Disputationibus discutiendas. Delata est querela domino Rectori, qui Decreto considerato et perpenso determinavit dictum dominum Byrdall ex litera non vero proposito seu intentione istius Decreti vices suas praestare teneri. Quoniam vero compertum est literam potius quam propositum antehac observari, dominus Rector isti consuetudini obediens quod pro hac vice etiam consuetudo observetur determinavit, Volens tamen quod in posterum nemo baccalaureorum ad Collegium e rure regressus vices disputandi praestare tenebitur, nisi qui per biduum saltem ante Quaestiones traditas in Collegio vel Academia praesens fuerit; N. B. Quaestiones sunt tradendae baccalaureis proxime disputaturis immediate post priores peractas Disputationes.'

7 July 1739 at a meeting of the Rector and five Seniors, 'Whereas by the intent of our Founders it appears that public lectures and disputations should be kept up according to the form of our statutes, and whereas by certain orders and rules enacted in the year 1733 an augmentation of the salaries of the several officers was made in order to encourage them to do their respective duties, and yet notwithstanding there appears to have been great neglect in the officers, sometimes by not attending at all, at others by staying up so small a time as to render the exercise of little or no consequence, and whereas the authority of the Rector and five Seniors hath been very much slighted by the officers not consulting them, as the statutes direct, what books shall be read in their several lectures; wherefore to remedy these evils for the future, the Rector and five Seniors have thought fit to order and it is hereby ordered—

- r. That every Lecturer shall read such books only as shall be appointed by the Rector and five Seniors, excepting only the Subdean who is more properly under the sole direction of the Rector.
- 2. That during every long vacation the Lecturer in the classicks shall read (as the statutes require and as former Lecturers always did) either arithmetick or geometry, or the rudiments of cosmography at least four days in every week, unless such days are festivals.
- 3. That every Lecturer shall continue his lecture for the major part of an hour at least, that he shall require repetitions of the said lectures from his respective auditors at least every fifth lecture, and shall exact from those, who either absent themselves, or when present behave indecently or carelessly, translations of such lectures or parts of such books as shall be then explained, of which they shall provide two copies, one of which to be given to the Rector, the other to the proper officer.
- 4. That every person neglecting the ordinary disputations of the College shall be obliged to bring in states on the question or questions then disputed on and that all such disputations shall be continued for the major part of an hour at least, unless for the ease of young beginners the Subdean shall judge it proper (which should be but rarely done) to shorten the morning disputations in the Hall.
- 5. It is desired that the Rector, according to his oath, would be careful in exacting such mulcts or punishments from the respective Officers as the statutes require, and that no excuse may be admitted in bar of such punishments, allowing only in case of sickness an appearance by deputy to be approved of, by the Rector in case of the Subdean, by the Rector and five seniors in the case of the other officers.
- 6. That the Subdean shall be liable to the same penalties with the other Officers for neglect of duty, or for refusing to demand the punishment to be inflicted on those who shall not attend his exercise according to what is above required from the Lecturer and Moderator.
- 7. That the lecturer in the Greek Testament shall exact from all persons who do not attend, Translations or Collections from such commentators as he shall think it proper to advise them to consult and read upon those lectures.
- 8. That all persons neglecting to declame in their proper turns shall give up such declamations within three days at least, and to take the next turn of declaming.

9. That all other exercises of the College shall be kept up according to the true intent and meaning of the statutes, and that particularly the Hebrew and Divinity lectures, as they are called, shall be read according to the directions and penalties mentioned in the Injunctions of Lancelot Lord Bishop of Exeter, and the times settled in the Acts of 1733.

Lastly it is ordered these Acts of the Rector and five Seniors shall be entered in the College Register and signed by the persons making them, that copies of them be given to the respective Officers, and that they be strictly conformed to by all persons concerned.'

Reg. 24 July 1741 (on W. Tonkin being chosen to assist the Dean in Logic Lectures &c.) 'in hac re agenda electio facta est contra sententiam domini Rectoris, qui sentiebat se teneri aliquem ex baccalaureis nominare et eligere, et post maturam deliberationem dominus Rector nominavit et elegit M. Tonkin, et publice declaravit se in posterum baccalaureos solos in hoc officium nominare statuisse'; but on 30 June 1742 Tonkin was re-elected, there being no bachelor available. It was found difficult to get the Fellows to reside.

30 June 1747 'decretum quod Praelector Theologiae, singulis diebus Martis Jovis et Saturni intra terminum, nisi festus dies inciderit, aliquam portionem Novi Testamenti ad scopum et literam textus originalis perlegat explicet et exponat hora nona matutina. Auditores sunto omnes non Graduati post biennium ab adventu ad Academiam, ad tempus quo admitti possunt ad gradum A.B.'; see Reg. 30 June 1749 on renewing the theological Disputations ordered by the statutes for Regent Masters; 7 Aug. they were to be held in the Chapel every week in full term (except in Lent), between 1 and 3 o'clock; 9 July 1753 on keeping up Bachelors' Disputations in the order of Seniority.

Owing to the change in the value of money, it was resolved 17 Mch $174\frac{7}{8}$ that the Caution money should be increased, those admitted to the Fellows' table were to pay £9, to the sojourners' table £8, to the battellers' table £7; it was further resolved that money due to the College must be paid before the end of Term; on 28 Jan. 1758 it was ordered that the names of those who did not pay should be crossed in the Buttery Books on Crossing Day, 'and that after such crosses shall be affixed to their names they shall not be permitted to battel till all their former battels are discharged,' &c.

DATE-LIST OF BUILDINGS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

The authorities for the dates are given, in italics, just after the figures, in this form:—ch. Chalmers, gu. Wood as edited by Gutch, ms. Prideaux's manuscript survey, re. the College register; and the names of architects are placed at the end of the line, also in italics. Letters in square brackets refer to diagrams on pp. 360-1.

1894. Electric Light introduced into kitchen and 3 next staircases.

DIAGRAMS TO EXHIBIT CHANGES IN THE BUILDINGS.

N.B. There was no Turl-front to the College till after Elizabeth's days; previously to that, the main entrance was on the north side (it is now on the west), under Palmer's Tower. This tower and part of one set of rooms, to the east of it, are all the portions of the XV century College that remain, and they are indicated by F in all the diagrams which follow.

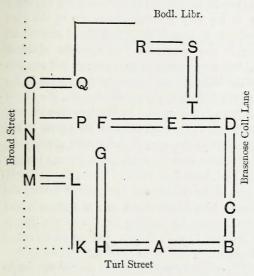

2. Loggan's

In Diag. I, E. E marks the position of the substructure of Bentley's 'Nest'; F of the earliest gateway tower; F. G and possibly H of the Rector's Lodgings; F. U is Rector's Row; X. X first chapel; and W. W is roughly the position of the first Hall of the College. Between the City wall and the College front Agas shows, 1588, a row of posts and rails to keep the cattle off.

In Diag. 2, a quadrangle is nearly enclosed and the buildings have been extended westward to Turl Street and southward to the present Brasenose Lane. A is the main entrance; A to B Halls variously occupied; B. C the kitchen; C. D Acland's new hall; D. E Peryam's 'Mansions'; E. E Bentley's 'Nest' on walls of earlier date; F. G to K Rector's Lodgings; K. K Alderman Wright's House, now Prideaux's, with a bastion of the City Wall at its south-east angle; G. H Hakewill's double Chapel; F. U and X. X unchanged,—between these a Court, 110 feet by 25 ft, politely designated St. Helen's, which, later on, was widened by placing a new library, Palladian in style (S. T), 35 feet farther south. The first hall W. W has been removed.

In Diag. 3, the old Chapel-library has disappeared; Rector's Row, then called Chapel Row, has been removed, but a frontage to Broad Street has been inaugurated, and the old Cart-wave is now blocked up at its two ends. M. O is the Broad Street front; F. P. N. M. L a small quadrangle with the bastion still under its surface; between F and G passage to small quadrangle; G. H the New Chapel; and K a portion of Prideaux's House blocking up the old lane or road 'under the walls.'

Remarks on the Plan.

This attempt to construct a plan of the College differs considerably from any previous attempt in the same direction: first, the number of documents consulted has been more numerous; secondly, the originals of all of those in College possession have been carefully transcribed and compared in all instances with Wood's transcripts in MS. D. 2. The result is by no means encouraging:—the more the material accumulated, the more discrepancies were noticed, one with another, and frequently, too, with the hasty conclusions of Wood. To have made the plan at all resemble that in his City i. 113, would have been plainly in opposition to several charters he himself must have copied.

In a few cases measurements were obtained, but they have scarcely proved of so much value as was hoped. Still, the relative positions of eleven of the tenements on the present site have been probably accounted for, but regarding a twelfth too little has been unearthed, and as regards 'St. Petir Hall on Wyger's land' its relative bearing to any of the known ones abutting on St. Mildred's Lane is nowhere given. The references to this hall mainly occur in the rentals of Osney which seldom advert to position; this fact, and the obscurity elsewhere, are the key to the very peculiar statements in the plan by Wood before noticed. It is almost clear that Wood omitted to notice that the wording in one instance is 'ex opposito ejusdem ecclesiae S. Mildredae,' but the position of that church still remains doubtful. He regarded the body exhumed from the foundation of the south extremity of Peryam's 'Mansions' as indicating the site of the church, but the remains were found so near to the lane that we may easily imagine an encroachment by the tenement on which it was found, upon some part, perhaps the east, of the former churchyard. Nor had the discovery of human remains south of the present kitchen and of two more in the Turl, been then made. These are probably interments in the west part of the churchyard, for it would never have occurred to our ancestors to bury on the north side of a church, and moreover there are good reasons for locating the site of the church well within the present limits of Lincoln College, near or on the site of the present Common Room.

It may be noticed that not one of the tenements toward the southwest of the Exeter site is described as angulare or ad corneriam; this is so unusual as to lead to the theory that some cottage, a priest's house or other structure, had grown up at the west end of the churchyard and obliterated that angle.

Mr. Clark's conclusions upon the question of sites have been generally followed, and a few particulars have been taken from an old map in the Rector's possession (B) which assisted indeed in some points, especially in the position of the earliest buildings, but added to the complexity by providing two apparent bastions in front of the College. In making the north face of the early College to be out of the straight line, this map, because of a well-known propensity, is probably correct. The eastern boundary has intentionally been left undecided; its variations at several periods would be these;—1. Before the Divinity School was built;—2. before the enclosure south of the same was obtained;—3. after the site of the west wing of Bodley had been sold;—4. before a portion of School Street at the east of the present garden was obtained;—5 and 6, before and after part of the 'Lane under the walls' was obtained;—and 7, when a part of it (n,n) south-west of the Sheldonian had been relinquished to the University. To have attempted all these would have resulted in a confused mass of lines.

To keep the plan distinct, letters only have been placed at certain angles of buildings, to which the following is a key.

References to letters in the Plan.

About Stapeldon's monument S. Hart, fellow of Exeter, writes from Exeter 17 June 1792 to rector T. Stinton as follows (Gough, Oxford 86), 'It is in a perfect state, though it has not undergone any repairs since 1733. Especially the two tablets of wood where the verses are (over the monument) are in high preservation. The word feretra in the 4th distich is too plainly legible. These tablets front the north Aile, their back is towards the chancel, and is hid by a wainscot screen ornamented with pillars and arches after the Grecian manner. It was this facing of wainscot which the Chapter wished to remove, meaning to put in its place something in the Gothic style, of a piece with the Fabric; but when Dean Buller left Exeter this design was dropped, and no alteration whatever has been made. Now that I am upon the subject of monuments, I am reminded of a gravestone in the church of Crediton, which records the death of John Lyndon, dean of the collegiate church of Crediton, who had been rector of Exeter College, and if I mistake not was a party in giving the advowson of Menhenniot. He died Dec. 16, 1482. The stone had been broken and the fragments lay in different parts of the church. I have had them put together.'

On the arms of the College, see N. and Q. 6. xii. 515.

vi. In our Book of Evidences fol. 141 (see Wood D. 2, p. 93) are the following royal grants:—

(1) 7 Edw. II, York 10 May (1314) for Hart Hall and Arthur Hall—see Bodleian Charters, p. 288. (2) Duplicate. (3) Inspeximus at Clipston 4 Nov. 1315 of Peter de Skelton's grant of S. Stephen's Hall on S. Faith's day 9 Edw. II =6 Oct. 1315. (4) Inspeximus 30 Oct. 1318 at York of Godstow deed of 23 Ap. 1318. (5) Licence at York 20 May 15 Edw. II (1322) to hold an advowson worth 40 marks, i. e. Wittenham. (6) Richard II at Westminster 24 July 1380 confirms the grant of the sites of Hambury Hall and Culverd Hall by John Otery, Lucas Holland, Robert Lydeford, and Richard Rouland. (7) Appropriation of Merton to Ensham, Richard II's Inspeximus at Woodstock 8 Aug. 1382 of Edw. III's grants of 15 July 1344 and at the Tower 22 June 1351. (8) 22 July 12 Edw. II (mistake for Richard), 1388, allows Roger Ford, V. of Bampton, to give a messuage in S. Peter le Bayly: refers to his proavus Edward II. (9) Henry IV at Westminster 19 June 1406 permits John Couling, Thomas Noreys, and John Gynne to grant Cheker Hall and Gyngyvere's Place. (10) Henry VI extends the mortmain licence, Coventry 12 Mch 35 H. VI = 1457. (11) Henry VI, on grant of Wyttenham Nov. 1466, through John Smyth M.D.

Some writers think the requirement of divinity degrees implies that the Colleges were ecclesiastical corporations. But those degrees were open to laymen up to Laud's time, and the restriction to the clergy should now be abolished; see pp. xc, 133, 155.

xcvii. The poor scholars are called the scolares or scolastici of some fellow. Thus, p. 53, 'viiid a magistro Moremane pro scolari suo Baron pro stipendio camere sue pro uno termino.' Men of rank often brought up a humble companion, whose university expenses they paid; thus in the matriculation of 1575 'John Gerarde, Darbie, equitis filius, 13; William Eyton, Darbie, 22, serviens M. Gerarde.' For an account of the different classes of undergraduates see Boase's Commoners of Exeter College 1894, preface.
